CRIPPLED APOLLO ROUNDING MOON

Space Race With Death

DESPERATE DASH HOME is being made by Apollo 13 astronauts (left to right) James Lovell, 42, John Swigert, 38, and Fred Haise, 36. They performed with cool precision in the United States' first life-or-death space drama. An explosion in the service module cut off the vital electrical power to the main engines. The crew is using the Lunar module for life support systems and to bring them back to earth. A proposed Thursday landing was ruled out. (AP Wirephotos)

Splashdown Set Friday

HOUSTON (CP)—Apollo 13's astronauts battled today to bring their crippled craft back to earth from a quarter million miles away as Mission Control decided they would aim for a Friday splashdown in the Pacific.

James A. Lovell Jr., Fred W. Haise Jr. and John L. Swigert Jr. took shortcuts to conserve their precious supplies of water, oxygen and power as they raced farther from earth toward a moon which had been their landing target until a violent eruption of a pressurized fuel tank Monday night.

They were to loop around the moon tonight and two hours later, at 9:40 p.m. EST, were to fire their lunar-lander engine to speed them back toward earth and a dawn splashdown in the Pacific north of New Zealand at 12:13 p.m. EST Friday.

★ ★ ★

Asked whether the three spacemen would make it home safely, flight controller Glynn Lunney, answered: "Yes, barely."

"We've got the situation stabilized," he said. "The most critical thing now is to keep it stabilized the rest of the flight."

As Lovell, Haise and Swigert flew away from home, here was the picture aboard their spaceship:

● The command ship, disabled by the still mysterious rupture, was shut down electrically. Emergency batteries and oxygen supplies were available to take the ship, the only vehicle that can carry the men home, through the atmosphere.

● The lunar module which became the astronauts' lifeboat was providing critical power, oxygen, water and other life support. But its supplies were dropping and the astronauts were operating on minimum requirements.

● Officials were concerned mainly with the water supply. With 72 hours to go, based on a Friday landing, they had enough water for 84 hours, a margin of 12 hours.

● The oxygen supply was more substantial. They had enough for 122 hours, a margin of 50 hours, barring unforeseen events.

● To keep the spacecraft from overheating, the astronauts' ship was occasionally rotated 90 degrees so the 247-degree heat of the sun would not bake it on one side for too long.

Looping the moon is the safest way home, officials said, because Apollo 13 was close to its target when the accident happened and already was on a course that would take it around the moon's backside.

To stop short of the moon would have required considerable power and fuel expenditure, something the astronauts don't have with their big command-ship engine made idle by electrical failure.

The only powerplant available is the lunar module descent engine, the one intended to lower Lovell and Haise to the moon's surface. The spacemen fired the engine 30 seconds early today to adjust their course slightly to a path that would take them around the moon and bring them back to earth late Friday if they made no other manoeuvre.

If that engine failed to ignite, Apollo 13 would have swung back toward the earth but would have missed by some 20,000 miles and would have been lost forever in space.

Officials are concerned mainly with the water supply. With 72 hours to go, based on a Friday landing, the spaceship had enough water for 84 hours, a margin of 12 hours. To have this margin, the astronauts will have to power down to minimum electrical power for most of the journey, reducing the average hourly water consumption from five to 2.68 pounds. The water is used for cooling the electronics and cabin oxygen as well as for drinking.

★ ★ ★

At the same time, the oxygen supply was good for another 122 hours, a margin of 50 hours, barring unforeseen events.

Neither the United States nor Russia has a space-rescue capability. So the astronauts will have to depend on their skill and that of hundreds of experts on the ground to get home.

Following the tank rupture, the astronauts activated the systems of of the attached lunar module, or LM. They opened the connecting tunnel between the two craft so oxygen would flow into the command ship and make it livable.

The cramped LM is difficult to sleep in, so the astronauts will rest in the command cabin.

The astronauts remained calm and poised as they wrestled with the many procedures needed to stabilize their craft and to stretch their consumables.

To improve oxygen circulation and prevent a buildup of carbon dioxide in the command ship, Mission Control Centre told the astronauts to use a hose from one of the unused space suits and extend it from the LM oxygen supply through the tunnel.

'13' Lives Up to Its Legend; It's No Joke . . . Not Lucky

At first the astronauts called the number assigned to the third moon mission "a joke." One said it was "lucky 13." But all bad luck traditionally associated with the number struck Monday. The classically unlucky number also cropped up in: Blastoff time: 13:13 (CST); Explosion: on the 13th day. Anyone have a rabbit's foot to shoot aloft?

Due to difficulties encountered with the flight of Apollo 13, all television programming of the flight is subject to last minute change. Viewers are advised to watch news broadcasts for details of Apollo coverage.

Water is a critical problem for the astronauts. There is only a 44-hour supply in the lunar module fuel cells with 72 hours minimum remaining before splashdown. The crew has a 48-hour supply in its survival kits for themselves and for cooling purposes. Food is no problem and there is a good supply of oxygen.

★ ★ ★

Sleep will be at a premium for the three men. A schedule has been set up so that at least one astronaut will be awake at all times.

Lunar module pilot Haise began a six-hour sleep — if he can — early this morning while Lovel and Swigert keep a watch on the vital oxygen and water supplies. It was turn about at 9 this morning.

The explosion which aborted the moon mission ruptured the space capsule's fuel cell power generators' oxygen tank. Without oxygen, the generators cannot operate and the command ship is powerless with the exception of the emergency batteries which will be used in the re-entry phase.

Apollo 13's service module remains bolted to the command ship but it is useless. The command module, however, is intact and is vital to carry the pilots into the earth's atmosphere at a fiery 25,000 miles per hour. There is some discussion among space officials that the service module will be jettisoned to allow easier manoeuvring of the command ship and lunar module.

A 30-second rocket firing early this morning was a life or death "burn" for the three astronauts. It steered their crippled space craft on a path that would bring them back to earth with only minor course corrections.

The only luck riding with the Apollo 13 crew so far is that the accident happened on the way to the moon and not after the lunar landing phase was completed. The landing craft is supplying oxygen, water and electricity to power computers, navigation instruments and radios—all vital for a space voyage.

The blast that knocked out Apollo 13's electrical system may have been caused by a small meteoroid. This theory has not been discounted by space officials. "It had to be something violent that occurred in Bay 4 of the ship. If it were a meteorite it would be quite violent," said former Apollo astronaut James McDivitt.

Lights out is the word in an attempt to conserve electricity. Astronauts in the command ship are using flashlights to watch instruments.

LITTLE IMPACT HERE IN BUILDING LOCKOUT

There has been little impact in Victoria so far on the province-wide lockout of seven unions by the Construction Labor Relations Association. See story Page 2.

In the Capital region where an estimated $25 million worth of major work is at stake, most jobs were normal or close to it at press time.

Contractors and unions said most local work is in the finishing stage where subcontractors are involved. These operators are not part of the contractor's bargaining association.

Copper Price Hike Blocked

TORONTO (CP) — Noranda Mines Ltd. said today the federal government has denied it permission to raise the price of copper to Canadian customers.

The company told the government it intended to increase the price to 65 cents a pound from 59 cents.

The new price, the company said, would be equivalent to the present U.S. producers price; eight cents a pound less than the average cost of copper to U.S. consumers; and 22 cents a pound less than the prevailing overseas prices.

U.S. producers recently increase their prices.

A company statement today said:

"Noranda has been informed by the federal government that no price increase will be permitted."

SELLS HIGHER IN U.S.

Noranda sells in the U.S. market at the prevailing price, but to Canadian customers at the lower level.

Noranda officials declined any comment on the government's order.

It appeared, however, that the ruling likely was based on a recommendation of the prices and incomes commission which has been keeping a close eye on price and wage increases.

The commission itself has no regulatory power, but reports to the federal government.

Noranda produced about 327,000 tons of refined copper during 1969 and reported net earnings of $54,189,000 or $2.24 a share, up from $52,476,000 or $2.20 a share in 1968.

Noranda and other major producers announced in late December that the price for Canadian customers would be increased to 66 from 57 cents effective Jan. 2.

Later, at the request of the government, the increases were postponed to March 1.

Court Bars Oil Line

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — With the observation that "you can't violate the law just by spending $1,000,000,000," a federal judge Monday barred the start of an 800-mile oil pipeline through Alaska, and gave conservationists a victory over big business.

Three conservation groups persuaded Judge George L. Hart Jr. of the U.S. district court to issue an injunction that may delay the start of the project—which conservationists say could despoil the Alaskan wilderness—for months or longer.

A consortium of eight companies want to build the 800-mile pipeline—the world's biggest at four feet in diameter—to bring future oil wealth from their leases on the rich North Slope of Alaska to the Pacific port of Valdez.

MUST AIR ISSUES

But Hart's injunction bars the interior department from issuing the required government permits until all issues, including possible pollution of the Alaskan wilderness, are thoroughly aired in court.

The conservationists, representing the Wilderness Society, the Friends of the Earth and the Environmental Defence Fund, laid heaviest emphasis on arguments that the pipeline and a proposed road to run parallel to it for 390 miles could do irreparable harm to the Alaskan environment.

But Hart seemed more interested in the fundamental legal question of whether the law permitted using the amount of public land the developers require for the pipeline and the road. The conservationists said the right-of-way sought by the oil companies for the pipeline alone would be wider than that permitted by law.

They said the granting of an additional right-of-way for the service road would clearly not be authorized by laws governing the use of public lands.

Food Costs Drop

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer price index rose to 128.9 last month from 128.7 in February, mainly because of higher housing and clothing costs, although food prices dropped significantly, the Dominiin Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The index, based on 1961 prices equalling 100, was 123.2 in March last year.

The increase between February and March was less than it was between January and February, returning to the rate of increase that prevailed two months earlier.

In percentage terms, the index rose two-tenths of 1 per cent in the month and 4.6 per cent in the year from last March. In February, the index was riding 5 per cent higher than a year earlier.

Spill Reported

KODIAK, Alaska (AP) — An unidentified Soviet oil tanker captain was arrested Monday on charges of spilling oil in the Gulf of Alaska less than a mile north of Marmot Island near here, the coast guard said.

Moon Boredom Shattered By Crisis

By HOWARD SIMONS

WASHINGTON (WP) — America's lackadaisical attitude about manned space flight was shattered Monday night.

The unexplained "bang" that knocked out Apollo 13's ambitious flight plans jolted a nation grown overconfident with space successes; almost bored with the mechanistic journeys to the moon.

As the first words came that the three astronauts were in peril, earthbound fears began to race along with the moonbound craft. The astronauts seemed remarkably calm, most other persons desperate.

The mission began on an almost silly note — one of the astronauts might have German measles. This led to the inevitable jokes.

More telling, perhaps, there was diminished interest in the flight this time; fewer newspaper reporters at Cape Kennedy and Houston, fewer newspaper stories. Indeed, on the Saturday of liftoff, Apollo 13 took a back seat to President Nixon's Supreme court hassle. What could go wrong after 22 successful American manned space flights? German measles.

And the flight itself, with substitute John L. Swigert, was described as "flawless."

Then "bang" and interest and apprehension in space heightened again.

It was not just routine now. Three men were in danger of being marooned in space (a movie by that name and with that theme is now showing round the country).

As tension heightened, the inevitable questions began to intrude on one's innate fears. Would they get back? Could they get back?

There is no way in the world at present to rescue men stranded in space. The astronauts know this. It may take longer for the country to absorb the fact. One thing seems certain, Apollo 13's troubles are bound to revive the debate over a rescue capability.

White House Beat Never Bored Smith

By CARROLL KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON (WP) — Merriman Smith was the best known White House reporter not only because of his aggressive spirit and great ability but because he was both a romantic and a professional.

Smith, 57, who died apparently by his own hand Monday night, combined the romance of the old-fashioned Gung-ho reporter with a sturdy independence and professionalism that kept him at the top of his profession under six presidents.

Smith was never bored by his beat, yet it is one that is nearly always either feast or famine. He thought that everything that happened at the White House was important, full of romance and that he played a part on the great stage. He was fascinated not only by everything the president did but by everything else in the White House operation. He knew the secret service men, the secretaries, the White House police and above all the communications officer.

He was always fascinated by the art of communication. He knew that as a wire service reporter he faced a deadline somewhere every minute of the day and night. Wherever he was, he knew how to communicate with his office promptly and effectively.

He may have been the fastest reporter of his time. He could handle any story with lightning speed and also with accuracy and understanding.

When President Kennedy was shot in Dallas, Smitty's bulletin was the first to reach the world. He won a Pulitzer prize for the speed and skill with which he reported that tragedy.

He won a National Headliners Award for his reporting of Roosevelt's death at Warm Springs, Ga., in 1945.

He also was indefatigable, or almost so. He worked extremely long hours. During campaigns or presidential trips, he was on the job night and day, always fascinated by every detail that threw light on the personality of the man he was covering.

He had several bouts with fatigue, as anyone would who thought he could work around the clock.

New Skipper Takes Over Icebreaker

ABOARD ST. LAURENT (CP) — A replacement skipper for Canada's biggest icebreaker is expected to assume command today.

Capt. George S. Burdock, 55, of Halifax is to be flown to the icebreaker from Greenland where he arrived on a flight from Halifax Monday night. A native of Belleoram, Nfld., Capt. Burdock will replace Capt. Paul Fournier who was evacuated to hospital in Greenland Monday.

Capt. Fournier has a bleeding ulcer.

The transport department said Dr. Andrew Moore, a Canadian physician, was flown to Greenland to attend Capt. Fournier.

The Louis S. St. Laurent is accompanying the giant United States tanker Manhattan on her second experimental voyage through the Northwest Passage.

Capt. Burdock had been originally assigned to the St. Laurent for this voyage so that Capt. Fournier could attend Ottawa ceremonies honoring him for commanding the icebreaker John A. Macdonald during the Manhattan's first trip last year. However, Capt. Fournier requested that he remain in command.

Dr. Moore is expected to make arrangements to evacuate Capt. Fournier to hospital in Canada once the skipper is pronounced fit for travel.

Police Force To Increase In Saanich

The Saanich police department will be boosted by 12 new men to a staff of 83 this year to meet sharp increases in crime.

This was approved by Saanich council Monday night. Council heard police chief W. A. Pearson's annual report in which he said there are "some startling facts" emphasizing the need for a staff increase.

This included an average increase over 1968 of 51 per cent in a selection of offences (including the more common, such as assaults, robberies, theft, breaking and entering), a 47-per-cent increase in motor vehicle accidents to 2,029 and a 24-per-cent increase in property damage, to $752,190.

Police department staffs in other communities total 126 in Victoria, 36 in Nanaimo, 107 in Surrey, 159 in Burnaby and 30 in Delta.

'STAGGERING RATE'

Mayor Hugh Curtis, chairman of the police commission, said demands upon the police are going up at a "staggering rate."

Council approved the police budget which shows an increase of $151,666 over 1969 to $837,900 including the 12 new men, four of whom will be hired at year's end.

During three hours of budget discussions, $60,900 was cut and $500 was added to the provisional 1970 budget of $9.2 million. The net decrease is about half a mill of the provisional increase of 6.93 mills but this includes 3 mills for garbage collection previously paid separately.

The 1969 budget amounted to $7.8 million and the municipal mill rate was 32.6, including debt and hospital charges. Education costs are extra and are set separately by two school boards.

LITTER CONTAINERS

The only increase in the provisional budget was $500 for litter containers, bringing this year's allotment to $3,000 compared with an expenditure of $1,131 last year.

Most of the cuts were made in the public works budget with snow and ice control the biggest single one, down by $14,000 to $10,000.

A provisional increase of eight firefighters was cut to four, saving $11,700 this year. Present staff is 70.

The annual debt charge paid by property owners in the sewerage enterprise area—that is, those properties already served by sanitary sewer and those which will be serviced in the coming four years—will go up to $26 a year from $22.

SEWER CHARGE

Comptroller-treasurer John Tribe said last year's levy didn't meet debt requirements and in addition there will be a charge from the Capital Regional District.

No change was made in the annual $7 maintenance sewer charge, paid only by those who have sewers, and no change was made in the various rebates on debt charges previously set for the existing sewered areas.

A move to increase aldermanic pay to $3,300 a year from $2,400 was defeated 7-to-2. A subsequent motion to refer the question of an increase in council pay to finance committee for review later this year was approved.

A number of aldermen said this is not the time to vote themselves a raise when the general call was for restraint.

Budget discussions will continue tonight at 7:30 in the municipal hall and are expected to conclude Wednesday night with the setting of the municipal mill rate.

Area Construction Projects Escaping Lockout's Impact

By AB KENT

The impact of a province-wide construction industry lockout of seven unions has yet to be felt in Greater Victoria, where major projects were still under way today.

Contractors who are members of Construction Labor Relations Association served notice on the unions last week and made the lockout effective from 8 a.m. today. A complete shutdown of B.C. construction could stop an estimated $200 million worth of work by 40,000 tradesmen.

In the capital region, however, where an estimated $25 million worth of major work is st stake, most jobs were progressing normally or nearly normally this morning.

Spokesmen for contractors and trade unions said much of the local work is in the finishing stage where sub-contractors are doing most of the jobs. These are largely independent operators, not members of the contractors' bargaining association.

NOT 'SERIOUS'

CLRA took lockout action because the trades were not bargaining seriously and were making exhorbitant demands, association president Charles Connaghan said.

Meanwhile, the unions through B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council and Vancouver Island Building Trades Council, have agreed not to picket jobs where lockouts are in effect.

This is to permit tradesmen from unions which have not had lockout notice to continue working.

Vancouver Island Building Trades Council met here today and set up a lockout committee with all the building trades represented. It was agreed that locked out trades would have to provide notice to the other unions if they felt it necessary to set up picket lines.

Under no circumstances will a union member perform the normal work of a locked-out members, said John Schibli, secretary of the council.

BULLETINS PLANNED

Lockout bulletins will be issued from time to time and circulated to affiliates of the council, and regular meetings of the lockout committee will be held each Monday and Thursday morning, said Schibli.

A survey of all affiliates on the Island was to be carried out today to ascertain the effect of the lockout.

Connaghan said Monday the lockout would result in "the shutdown of virtually all construction in B.C.," but if that occurs it may be some time in coming.

SPEED UP POSSIBLE

What may accelerate the situation on the mainland is a strike-lockout of cement track drivers, shutting off the supply of ready-mix concrete and bulk cement to heavy construction jobs. This has a domino effect on other trades as time passes, building tradesmen point out.

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson said Monday afternoon the government won't intervene in the dispute which he said doesn't qualify for compulsory arbitration under the "public interest" provisions of the Mediation Commission Act.

He said he regrets the shutdown action and agreed that a prolonged work stoppage could have a damaging impact on the provincial economy. Industry Minister Waldo Skillings said last week the "entire fabric of the economic system" would be endangered by a construction shutdown.

READY TO HELP

The government is ready to offer help in every way possible in bringing the dispute to an end, Peterson said.

Oppostion Leader Dave Barrett said he is concerned that the labor relations atmosphere in B.C. has reduced management to "crude confrontation" tactics.

"It is recognized by the general public that we need compulsory negotiation, not compulsory arbitration," Barrett said.

He said he favors the Swedish system in which a series of ascending penalties make it beneficial for labor and management to negoitate well in advance of expiry of contracts and to continue negotiating to a solution.

'ABSURD' SYSTEM

Barrett said it is "absurd" for labor-management disputes to go from crisis to crisis with politicians stepping in at the last moment to solve the disputes.

Federal Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey has made a name for himself in that fashion, he said, "but it's hardly a way to run a labor department" or a labor relations system, he added. The "basic inadequacies" in the system should be corrected, he said.

The dispute that has idled the Vancouver Sun and the Vancouver Province for almost two months is an example of the system's weakness in failing to make continuing negotiations a necessity, Barrett said. B.C. should be beyond the stage of "frontier negotiations" and "frontier politics" which depend on "crude confrontation" techniques.

Among the major contractors who enforced the lockout in Greater Victoria are H. E. Fowler, which is building the city swimming pool in Central Park; Dominion Construction, with the Hillside shopping centre and Toronto-Dominion Bank building; A. and B. Construction, with University Heights shopping centre; Farmer Construction, with University of Victoria biological sciences building; Tideline Construction, with Imperial Construction's James May nursing home project; and Cana Construction (formerly Burns and Dutton), which has Glendale Hospital and Duncan courthouse projects.

The lockout applies to laborers, bricklayers and helpers, tunnel and rock workers, operating engineers, cement masons, teamsters and heat and frost insulators.

ALL PROJECTS

The trade most affected in Victoria appears to be laborers, which are common to virtually all projects, although in limited capacity in the latter stages of construction.

Carpenters are working, as are glaziers, plasterers, plumbers, sheet metal workers, lathers and painters.

Enrolment Rises Fast At Blanshard

Opening of Blanshard Court at the beginning of the month boosted enrolment at Blanshard Elementary by 42 pupils, and another 150 are expected to enter the school in May and June as additional units of the housing project are completed.

Harold O'Donnell, Greater Victoria school board's director of elementary instruction, was reporting to trustees Monday on population shifts within the district.

He said overcrowding at Victoria West elementary will be taken care of next fall by shifting some students to Lampson Street elementary where space is available.

Director of instruction John Wiens said six sub-committees of the board Project Learning have been asked to submit reports by the end of May.

The six groups, representing school population areas of the district, have been meeting since early in the year to work out what they think should be the aims of the education system locally over the next decade.

It was also reported 57 teachers recently took part in a creative writing workshop for intermediate teachers.

Russian N-Sub Missing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Soviet nuclear attack submarine, perhaps with as many as 88 crew members aboard, apparently has been lost in Atlantic waters 400 miles northwest of the Spanish coast.

The word came Monday from the United States defence department, which reported that American planes observed at least some of the drama of the high-seas incident before the submarine disappeared last weekend.

The 3,500-ton vessel, one of a class of hunter-killer submarines, was seen in distress Friday and Saturday, then vanished Sunday—with two oil slicks remaining.

No one actually saw her go down but U.S. Navy anti-submarine patrol planes had watched during the weekend as two Soviet surface ships attempted unsuccessfully to tie a towline to the sub in rough seas.

There was no immediate reaction from the Soviet government to Washington's announcement. But Westerners in Moscow believed the submarine was on its way to take part in large-scale manoeuvres which the Soviet defence department announced today are being held in both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans through May.

ONE PART OF MISSION STILL ALIVE

Times News Services

HOUSTON — Only one part of the Apollo 13 mission may survive to completion—the impact of the spent third stage of the Saturn V rocket which is expected to crash into the moon with the force equivalent to the explosion of 11 tons of TNT.

Racing at 5,800 miles an hour the rocket's jolt is expected to create seismic shock waves from as deep as 100 miles below the lunar surface.

The Saturn is to hit the moon at 5:10 this afternoon.

New York Press Strike Postponed

NEW YORK (AP) — A scheduled 6 a.m. EST strike by the New York Newspaper Guild against the New York Post was postponed indefinitely early today to allow mediators more time to try and resolve a contract dispute.

Labor mediator Theodore Kheel announced the move after a day and night of intensive mediation efforts. There was no new management offer to break what he had called the "total impasse" in the talks.

The guild broke off negotiations with The Post Sunday night, vowing there would be no resumption of talks until management offered major concessions. The Post replied it would not bargain under threat of a strike.

The Post, together with the New York Times, The Daily News and the Long Island Press, has continued to publish in the absence of strike action by 10 unions whose 13,000 members at the four papers have worked without a contract since March 30.

The publishers have offered a 16½-per-cent increase over a three-year period. The unions have not disclosed their demands.

CIVIL SERVICE CASTS VOTE ON PAY HIKES

Victoria members of the B.C. Government Employees' Union voted Monday on whether to accept pay increases averaging 7½ per cent for 1970.

Other locals of the 14,000-member union are voting during the coming 10 days, after which the total result will be announced.

About 1,800 members were eligible to vote in Victoria.

A union spokesman said earlier that if members vote to accept the announced increase, the issue will be closed for this year.

But if members reject it, then the union's negotiating committee will seek to open salary discussions with the Civil Service Commission.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The extensive high pressure area over B.C will remain stationary for at least the next 48 hours and keep skies mainly clear. Daytime temperatures will continue fairly mild but frost will occur in most areas overnight.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Population control may some day demand that parents no longer may be surprised by having twins. Researchers think that man may learn how to control the production of twins through greater knowledge of changes in the weather.

Some medical men, after years of studying the facts available about twinning, believe that multiple births may sometimes be the result of the effect of weather on parents. In one research effort in Chicago, the doctors knew that the area visited by a polar air mass — a cold front — at the estimated time of a conception that in due course resulted in a set of triplets.

More study brought the conclusion that twinning is more frequent in the stormy North of the United States than it is in the more equable South and is more likely when conception occurs during or shortly after the passage of a cold front.

'WE'VE A PROBLEM'

Words Tell It Like It Was

HOUSTON (AP) — With the words "Houston, we've had a problem," Apollo 13 commander James Lovell warned ground controllers that the planned lunar landing mission was in trouble.

Here are the highlights of the exchange between the spacecraft (SC) and the capsule communicator (CapCom) in Mission Control.

SC: Hey, we've had a problem. We've had a main B bus interval (a main circuit had broken).

CapCom: Roger. Main B interval. Okay, stand by, we're looking at it.

SC: Okay, right now, Houston.

SC: Okay, right now, Houston, the voltage is looking good. And we had a pretty large bang associated with the caution and warning there. And if I recall Main B was the one that had an amp spike on it once before.

CapCom: Roger, Fred (astronaut Fred Haise).

SC: We got a main bus. A under volt now, too, showing.

CapCom: Main A under volt?

SC: It's reading about 25½, Main B is reading zip (zero) right now.

CapCom: Standby one, Jim (astronaut Lovell).

CapCom: 13, Houston, we'd like you to attempt to reconnect fuel cell 1 to Main A and fuel cell 3 to Main B. Verify that quad delta is open.

SC: Okay, Houston, I'm showing, I tried to reset and fuel cell 1 and 3 are both showing grey flags. But they are both showing zip on the flows.

CapCom: We copy.

SC: Okay, Houston, are you still reading 13?

CapCom: That's affirmative, we're reading you. We're still trying to come up with some good ideas here for you.

SC: Something is giving us a reach, Jack, both in pitch and roll, so I'm suspecting that maybe it's whatever it is that's spinning back there. I had to use direct in order to stabilize it, and as soon as I do we're going to pick up rate again. Can you pick up any jets firing?

CAPCom: Stand by. What direction, are your rates in Jack's (astronaut John Swigert Jr.).

SC: It's negative pitch and negative roll.

CapCom: Roger. 13, Houston. We need to get some more instrumentation up. We'd like you to put inverter one on both AC buses. Over.

SC: Okay, Okay, you got inverter one on both AC buses, and Jack (capsule communicator Jack Lusma) one of the items we turned off was the, all the fule cell pumps. Okay, and you might let us know when the fuel cell two needs its pump back, we ought to take care of that, Jack.

CapCom: 7 Roger. Okay, Fred, We want fuel cell 2 pumps to AC one please.

SC: Fuel cell 2 to AC one Roger. Okay, it's on AC one.

CapCom: Okay, 13, we've got lots and lots of people working on this, we'll get you some dope as soon as we have it, and you'll be the first one to know.

SC: Oh, thank you. Okay, Jack, and the weird configuration we're sitting in now, is we have the hatch installed, we still have the probe and drogue inside the command module, and we're going to stay in this situation until you kind of give us an okay to reinstall the probe and drogue. Or if necessary to use the LM (lunar module) consumables.

CapCom: Roger.

SC: I'm transmitting, I don't have any current now. Hey, it's off. It's off. They—they killed the bus completely now. It's dead.

PAO (public affairs officer): Apollo Control, Houston, continuing to trouble shoot with Apollo 13 crew, closely watching oxygen quantities and pressures in the command module. Isolating the search tank leaves oxygen for entry if this should become necessary. Also, if necessary, the 13 crew could open a tunnel and use oxygen from the lunar module.

CapCom: We have a procedure for getting power from the LM, we'd like you to copy down.

SC: Okay. Stand by, Jack. It sounds like good news. Okay, Jack. About how long is it?

CapCom: It's not a very long procedure, Fred. We figure we'll get about 15 minutes' worth of power left in the command module. So we want you to start getting over in the LM and getting some power on that. And are you ready to copy your procedure?

SC:Okay

PAO: This is Apollo Control at 57 hours and 46 minutes ground elapsed time . . . We have an apparent serious oxyten leak in the cyrogenic oxygen in the service module . . . In this scheme of going across to the lunar module, still connected with the open tunnel, the lunar module would serve as a sort of lifeboat for the crew of Apollo 13. Sometime later in the mission it is expected that they would return to the pre-return trajectory, which they left yesterday in the mid-course burn No. 2 . . . This is Apollo Control. We have confirmation now that two of the Apollo 13 crewmen are indeed in the lunar module.

DANGEROUS MOMENTS

Space Centre, Houston (UPI) — The accidents and problems which have dangered or killed American and Soviet astronauts since their space program began 13 years ago:

July 21, 1961 — Virgil "Gus" Grissom almost drowned when his Mercury spacecraft, Liberty Bell 7, sank under him on splashdown.

May 24, 1962 — Scott Carpenter overshot his splashdown landing zone in Aurora 7 by 250 miles and was lost in the Atlantic Ocean three hours.

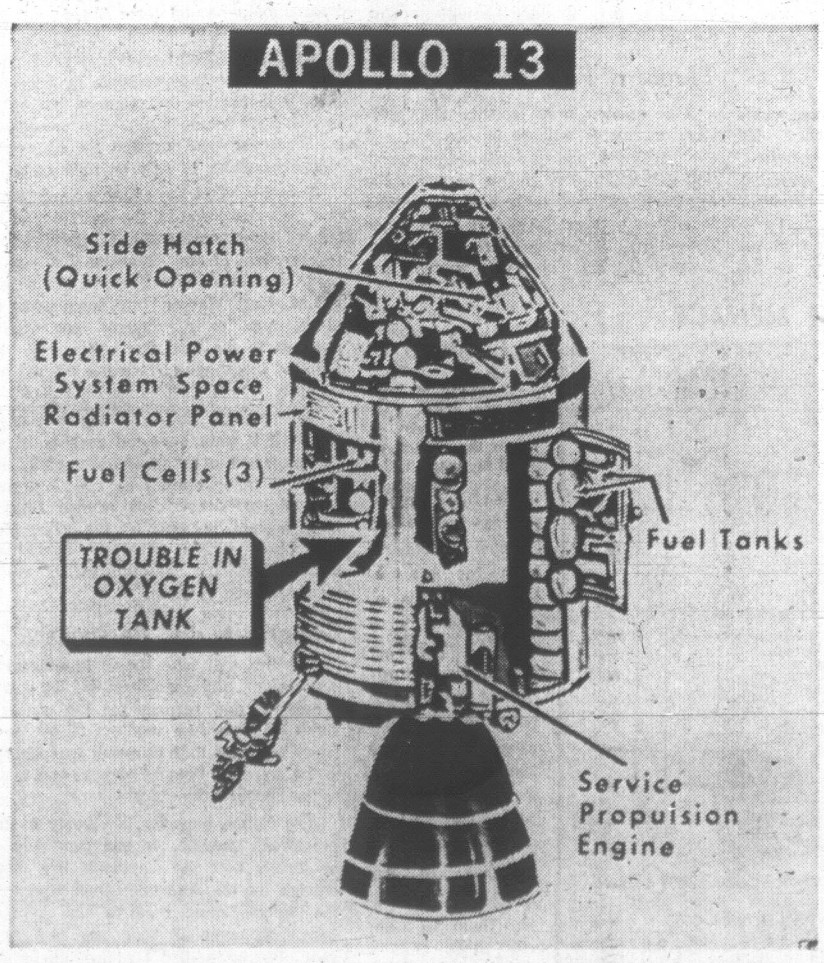

March 16, 1966 — Neil Armstrong and David Scott suddenly began spinning out of control in Gemini 8. To stop the spinning, they activated the re-entry control system, which forced them to come down at the first opportunity, aborting the mission after 10 hours 42 minutes. This was the only aborted mission prior to Apollo 13.

Jan. 27, 1967 — A fire in the Apollo capsule killed Grissom, Edward White and Roger Chaffee during a simulation at Cape Kennedy. These were the only American astronauts to die in a space-connected accident.

April 24, 1967 — Sovet cosmonaut Vladimir Komarov died when his Soyux I spacecraft crashed in Siberia. Its parachute failed to open.

May 22, 1969 — Stafford and Eugene Cernan went through a wild, gyrating ride in the lunar module on Apollo 12 because a key step was omitted in the in-flight checklist. Stafford took the controls and flew it out of trouble by hand when they were nine miles from the moon.

April 13, 1970 — James Lovell, Fred Haise and John Swigert suffered a power failure in the command service module as they coasted toward the moon, causing the mission to be aborted.

LEAK in the Apollo 13 service module is located in this artist's drawing. It shows the position of the oxygen tanks. A mysterious explosion placed the flight in a state of crisis. (AP Wirephoto)

CHRONOLOGY OF A CRISIS

HOUSTON (AP) — Here is a chronology of key events that led to the decision to abort the Apollo 13 moon landing and bring the three astronauts home (all times EST and approximate):

10:15 p.m. Monday—"Houston, we've had a problem," Cmdr. James Lovell reports. A warning light indicated an electrical power problem.

10:20 p.m.—Lovell reports low oxygen readings on two of the three power-producing fuel cells.

10:25 p.m.—Lovell says "We are venting something out into space." He reports it apparently is gas and that it caused the spaceship to pitch and roll.

10:40 p.m.—Mission Control directs the astronauts to cut down on use of some command ship systems to save electrical power, and to shift some power systems from one fuel cell to another in an effort to solve the problem.

10:45 p.m.—Spacecraft reports fuel cell 3 is out, and oxygen supply in cabin is dropping. One of the two main electrical circuits "is dead," astronaut John Swigert reports.

10:55 p.m.—Swigert says these systems are flashing warning lights: liquid gas pressurization; fuel cell 1, fuel cell 3, main electrical bus B and suit compressor.

11:15 p.m.—Mission Control tells the ship: "It appears you're losing oxygen flow through fuel cell 3. We want you to close the valve on fuel cell 3."

11:20 p.m. — Astronaut Fred Haise reports venting is causing "a positive pitch rate, and I can't stop it." Thruster firing halts it.

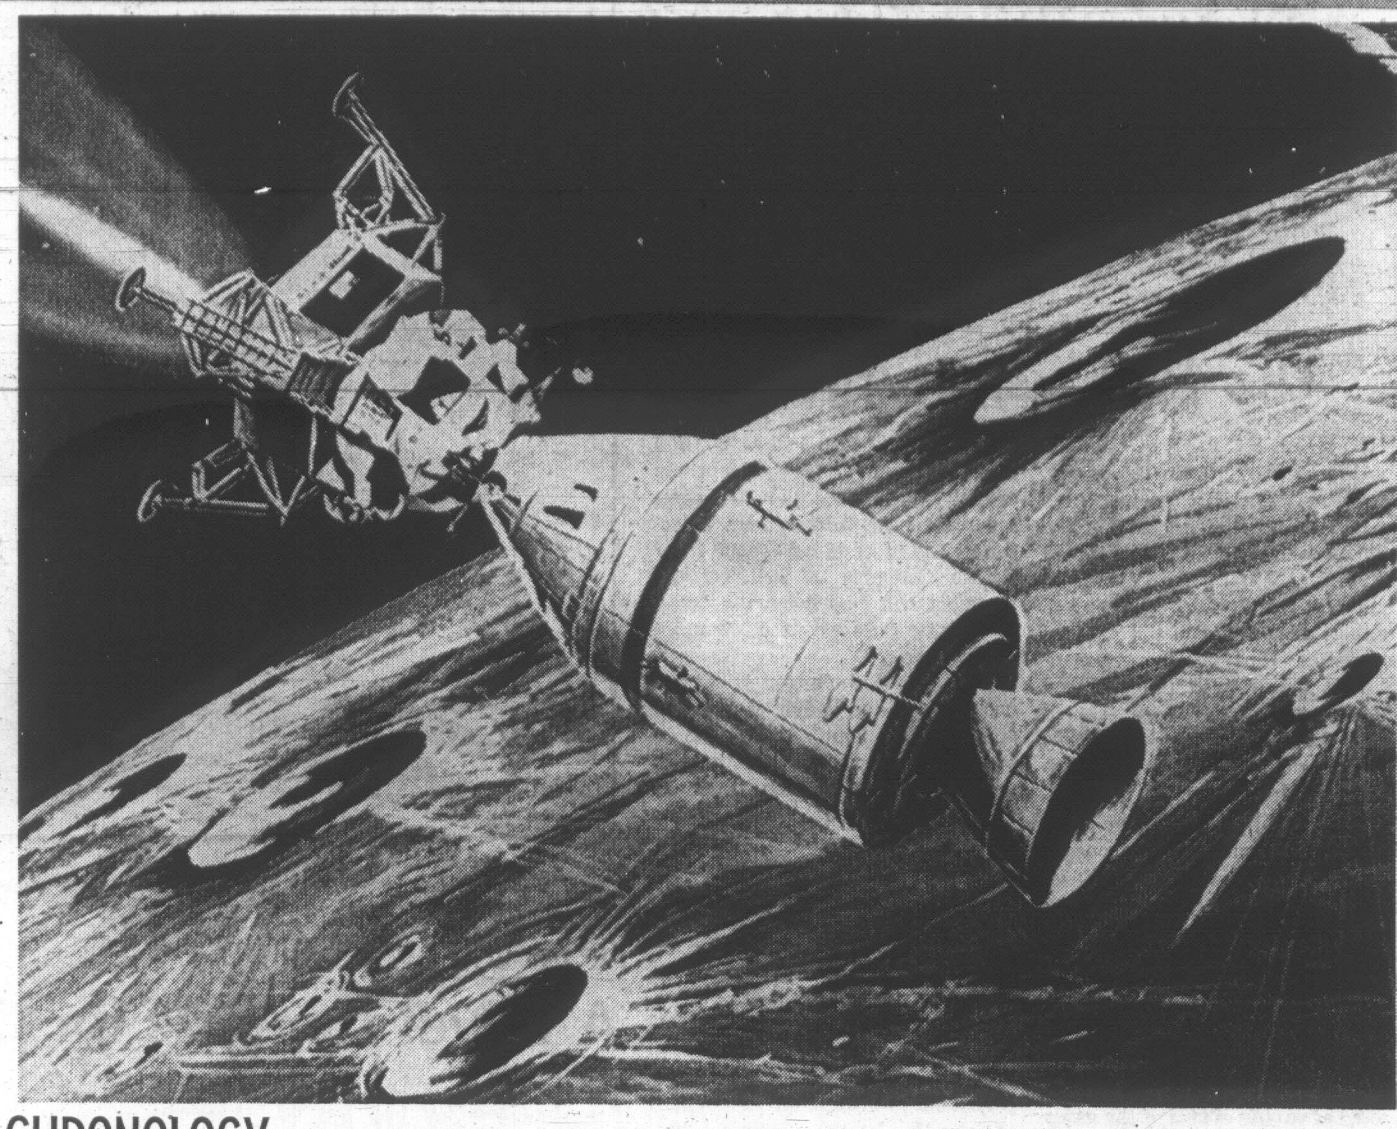

11:40 p.m.—Haise reports cabin oxygen pressure falling. Mission Control orders activation of an emergency battery, and tells astronauts it is considering the LM "lifeboat"—using the lunar module as a haven.

11:59 p.m.—Mission Control says all three fuel cells are off and that only 15 minutes' electrical power remains in the command ship. Tells astronauts to transfer through tunnel to LM and activate its systems. With oxygen flowing from the LM, Swigert remains in command ship to turn off several systems.

12:13 a.m. Tuesday — Moon landing cancelled and manoeuvres plotted for swinging Apollo around the moon and bringing it back to earth Friday.

Study Planned

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — The Alberta government will undertake a study of the legal status of hospital boards and of increasing hospital expenses, Health Minister James Henderson announced Monday. He said the time has come to place hospital boards under local control.

THIS DRAWING shows how the three Apollo 13 astronauts are journeying back to earth using the engines from the lunar module while the service module engine—the main one—remains idle. A critical engine burn this morning put the space ship on a path to earth. (AP Wirephoto.)

The Paralysing Agent

THE DIRECTOR OF THE Washington State Toxicology Laboratory, Dr. Ted Loomis, says he fails to see the reason for the public's concern over the proposed shipment of lethal nerve gases from Okinawa to storage in Oregon. Neither, apparently do the military authorities who plan the shipment by boat and rail to the prepared bunkers at Hermiston. United States federal government officials likewise remain determined to carry through with the plan.

There are, however, a number of factors which cause serious concern to the public, if not to the official mind. On the physical side is the obvious danger of handling and rehandling many tons of nerve gases which are admittedly among the most deadly substances which man's incredible search for death has yet discovered. A military source at the arsenal in Colorado is quoted as saying of two of the gases included in the proposed shipment: "In liquid form one drop will paralyze the nerves instantly. Death follows in 30 seconds." Each cannister in the shipment is said to hold 500 pounds of the liquid. More than 700 railway cars will be required to carry the gas to Oregon after it is unloaded at the naval ammunition depot at Bangor, Wash.

Military sources say there is no danger in shipping the cargo. They say that any spillage would be localized and easily neutralized. But they add to this assurance the fact that the army has prepared mass evacuation plans in case of accident. Such a step is hardly likely to "make assurance doubly sure"; it is seen, rather, as cancelling out the earlier guarantee of safety.

In the face of such a situation it is not surprising that the governors of Washington and Oregon have lodged strong objections to the movement of the gases, and that they are supported by 200,000 signatures on petitions by the people of their states. More than 30 Oregon scientists have added their objections. The protests have come from British Columbia as well, for the shipment will pass down the Strait of Juan de Fuca within a few miles of our shore.

The physical danger is a real one, for a major release of only 100 pounds of the liquified gases GB or VX could, according to estimates, wipe out five million lives if adequately distributed, and the 700 carloads of 500-pound bombs is far in excess of this. But it is not to be supposed that the whole shipload will blow up or that every railway car will be derailed and spill its contents. The physical danger is real, but it is contingent on a number of contributory considerations.

What calls for even more persistent protest from the public, not only in the northwest but everywhere, are the sinister facts that the stuff exists at all, and that the military authorities are strong enough to over-ride the protests of thousands of people and the threat of danger to millions, and carry out their plan.

The gases have been stored on Okinawa for the past 15 years. The United States is now a signatory to the United Nations agreement to ban most forms of biological and chemical warfare. Yet it is still policy to haul these ghastly substances half way around the world and store them in bunkers. For what purpose? While they exist anywhere they are a continuing threat to human and animal life—just as experimental gas in Utah a year ago proved fatal to 6,000 sheep. And while a military system that is impervious to public clamor and humanitarian argument exists, there is an equally serious danger in the democratic body politic.

More Involvement in Latin America

AFTER YEARS OF AMBIGUous shuffling on the part of Canadian governments there are indications that a solid Latin American policy is jelling in Ottawa. It is still amorphous and largely theoretical, but Prime Minister Trudeau sent a ministerial mission south last October with the words: "I am confident that this review will demonstrate that there is real scope for strengthening Canada's relations with Latin America to the mutual advantage of both."

Last weekend External Affairs Minister Sharp was more positive: Canada will likely "move towards closer relationships, if not by membership in the Organization of American States—although this is still unsettled—at least with some of the organizations that form part of the Latin American scene."

The need for more Canadian ties with Latin America's 265 million people is increasingly apparent as Europe looks inward and Japan and the United States emerge as superpowers of the Pacific. Canada has been a supplier of raw materials to the United States for many years and now Japan is bidding for our natural resources. A country with an economy resting on export of a few staples can be likened to a man slowly bleeding to death.

But the developing markets south of the equator could provide us with huge markets for manufactured goods and allow Canada to develop more diversified industry here. In a sense, Latin America is in an analogous position to Canada; it has abundant natural resources but no single country has a large enough market to make some industries viable. The present Latin American Free Trade Association has had partial success in cutting tariffs between Latin countries. And it is in contacts with organizations like LAFTA that Canada stands to benefit a great deal. The time could come when any industrialized nation not a member of a world-trading bloc could find itself picking up the crumbs of international trade at unfavorable prices.

On a less pragmatic and more emotional level Canadians can learn much from the Indio-Spanish culture in most of Latin America. Few northerners know anything of the rich mosaic of Latin life expressed in the writings of Gabriel Marquez or the murals of Diego Rivera, to name only two.

Of course it is not all aesthetics and trade. Latin America is experiencing a recurrence of its periodic night of the generals and only a handful of countries have any real semblance of democracy. But there are 70 million children ready for primary school in Latin America this year, many of whom will have no chance of an education. That should be reason enough for Canadians to get involved.

Towering—Like a Coast Fir

NO MAN HAS WRITTEN HIS name larger in the history of British Columbia's forest industries development than H. R. MacMillan. This week Mr. J. V. Clyne, chairman of the board of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. announced the retirement of the 84-year-old figure who founded the firm and brought it, with various amalgamations and absorptions, to the position of preeminence it holds in the economic life of the province.

For decades H. R. MacMillan stood larger than life-size in his specialized field. Rugged, aggressive, highly intelligent and with a genius for picking men to do the jobs he required of them, he achieved international distinction. He had the scientific knowledge of the forester — he served as British Columbia's Chief Forester before emerging as an industialist — and the driving capacity to move ahead in the competitive private enterprise realm to which he turned.

His endowments for university study of forestry and for research have been impressive. As he leaves the environment in which he strode from success to success, he has become part of the folklore of a province that built its economy out of wood.

A party saved is a party earned.

FROM OTTAWA — By MAURICE WESTERN

A Royal Appetite for Commission Funds

THE PRIME MINISTER broke the welcome news last week that the B and B commission completed its labors, more or less, on March 31. There is still some printing and editing to be done and at least one final report to be delivered. But no bold new ventures will be undertaken now that one of the co-chairman has departed for Information Canada. According to a recent estimate obtained from the government by Mr. Coates, a Nova Scotian Conservative, the final cost of the commission's work over nearly seven years will total about $8,900,000. This record is likely to go unchallenged for some time.

Western

In retrospect, the 1960s may be regarded as a golden age of royal commissions. We are still living in the after-glow as there are two which have yet to present their final recommendations and bills.

Status of Women Tab

Of these, it is expected that the commission on the status of women will spend a total of $1,784,869; The commission on farm machinery $1,581,409. There is also the commission on statute revision (staffed by officials) which will cost $1,000,000.

However, the latest Blue Book provides only $500,000 for royal commissions and task forces in the present year, This suggests a lean season barring mischance (such as the difficulties in Montreal which led, unexpectedly, to Mr. Goldenberg's assignment) or sudden new impulses on the part of government.

In the somewhat longer view the recent reliance on commissions is curious because it has coincided with a remarkable growth of permanent institutions which contribute massively to the "input" of governmnet. Thus ministers can now draw on the annual reports and special studies of the Economic Council of Canada and those of such other relatively new institutions as the Science Council of Canada.

It is also notable that government, as it grows larger, tends to rely more and more on sources outside government. This input is sometimes visible and sometimes invisible depending on the ministerial view of the public interest.

An astonishing diversity now characterizes the field. There are royal commissions with formidable powers under the Inquiries Act. There are common or garden commissions which may have the same powers or may not.

Other Committees

There are committees of inquiry, not necessarily as modest as they sound since the members may be designated commissioners and may also be appointed under the Inquiries Act. There are task forces, currently very fashionable, staffed in whole or in part by outside management consultants. And there are surveys and studies also entrusted in many cases to the outside consultants who swarm in Ottawa nowadays like bees around a hive.

These various bodies have two things in common; they are engaged in fact-finding and they all cost money. But strange hybrids have developed such as the Prices and Incomes Commission.

It is supposed to be engaged in a task of limited duration and is thus not comparable to such permanent bodies as the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission.

But it is comparable in the sense that it does not merely seek facts but has made itself operative. By supplementary estimate it received $626,000 in 1969-70 and the estimate for 1970-71 is $1 million.

It will be apparent from the above that appearances may be deceiving. The present slump in formal commissioneering does not necessarily mean a decline in outside input into the work of government.

Of all the ministers in the present administration, none has contributed so consistently to the prosperity of the task force industry as Mr. Eric Kierans. At the latest count he had commissioned no less than a dozen studies. They are listed in a return with their respective costs, as follows:

The post office as a crown corporation	$35,850
Critical studies — organization, environmental forecast, management practice, management inventory, management information system, blueprint for implementation	$260,000
Marketing	$43,928.25
Personnel administration	$71,000
Transportation	$101,500
Mail forecasting	$25,000
Productivity	$24,000
Facility design and equipment Utilization	$50,497.92
Mail sortation, distribution and Presorting	$36,948.75
Evaluation of electronic data Processing facilities	$23,096.49
Public address postal coding	$3,500
Stamp design	$2,787.10

Regrettably, all this outside effort has not brought order to the post office. Since the return to Mr. Coates, the troubles in Montreal have required further studies by Mr. Goldenberg.

Many task forces address themselves to specialized studies. Others examine basic problems. One of the more intriguing, reported by Mr. Jamieson, is a seven member "task force on departmental objectives." It will be agreed that in these complex days the Department of Transport should know where it is going and the minister was apparently able to orient himself for $57,500.

The outcome is not always so happy. Mr. Hellyer's task force on housing and urban development cost $211,015 — and Mr. Hellyer's place in the Cabinet.

Such expenses must be considered minor when compared with the $1.5 million cost of the Woods Report on Canadian industrial relations.

One of the puzzling things about modern government is that the larger it gets the more it seems to depend on outside help.

In early times when governments had little to worry about apart from the huge tasks of nation-building, small ministries and a tiny civil service operated on a do-it-yourself policy basis.

Nowadays we have a massive White House establishment costing about $820,000 a year: a ministry of record size, a civil service of 255,401 (allowable continuing employees, March 31, 1979) and many permanent "input" institutions.

But this is the day of the management consultant.

How did we even survive in those far-off days when governments and a few ill-paid public servants did their own work?

FROM NEW YORK — By JAMES RESTON

Mr. Nixon Survives the Court Battle

THE CENTRAL FACTS about the Supreme Court, despite all the turmoil, are the same today as they were before the Senate vote on Judge Carswell. All the Senate has said is that the highest court in the land deserves an outstanding man. Within this single reasonable principle, President Nixon is free to choose from a very large company of distinguished conservatives, and is clearly in command of the situation.

Reston

Incidentally, the only thing wrong with the confirming process — giving some outside group the power to veto the appointment of dubs to influential jobs—is that it isn't applied elsewhere. What if the Supreme Court or some other committee of nine had the authority to pass judgment on mediocre senators or columnists? Would that be bad?

What is needed now is a moratorium on talk about Nixon's "defeat." He wasn't defeated, he was merely rebuked, and he may even have been rescued from giving the conservative cause a bad name.

But in any event, it is clear that we are still only at the beginning of the reconstruction of the Supreme Court, and this political controversy over the court, which has raged ever since Earl Warren's odd resignation, may help everybody think a little more clearly about what form that reorganization of the court should take.

Justice Hugo Black is 84. Justice William Douglas, who has a mechanical pacemaker in his heart, will be 72 in October. Justice John Harlan, whose sight is grievously impaired, will be 71 next month, and Chief Justice Burger, and Justices Brennan and Marshall are in their 60s.

So, forgiving the ghoulish but inevitable facts of life, it is fairly clear that Nixon, just going into the second year of his first four-year term and with very good prospects of a second four-year term, is going to have the decisive voice in the future personnel and even ideology of the court, if only he will appoint distinguished Americans.

Threat of Political Battles

The danger now is that the anti-Carswell forces will go on crowing and the president and his attorney-general will get angry. For if this happens, the court will get even more deeply involved in vicious political battles as it did when Franklin Roosevelt tried to "pack" the court in the 30s. This would polarize and politicize the court, and with all our other troubles, who needs it?

Nixon made his power-play for Carswell and it failed, but he has made a successful career of failing, and waiting, and starting again, and finding new allies among old enemies. And he can easily do it again.

He has kept whatever promises or leanings he took to the south at the Republican nominating convention in Miami Beach. He has fought for Judge Haynsworth of South Carolina and Carswell of Florida, and can argue, if he likes, that he was defeated by the eastern liberal conspiracy. No doubt this has some temporary advantages.

Fun for the Moment

But this Agnew-Mitchell view of life, while picturesque and newsworthy for a while, isn't really equal to Nixon's dreams of a second term based on the equalitarian and even revolutionary ideals of the 200th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence in July of 1976. It is fun for the moment, but only if you don't inhale it, and the president is too strong now, despite the Carswell embarrassment, to rely on such tactics.

Actually, what the country needs now is a reorganization of the court which is much more serious than merely the replacement of one Associate Justice. It needs a mandatory retirement clause at 70, as Earl Warren has suggested. It needs not fewer changes but more changes in the next few years, but not the kind of changes Nixon has offered us recently.

The present crisis in the Supreme Court, if it were seen not as a political challenge but as an opportunity, could be used by the president to start a long-delayed and desperately needed retirement system, not only for the court, but for the legislative and executive branches of the government as well. They are long overdue.

Generosity and Perspective

But this will take time. It will take generosity and perspective by the president, and respect for the sincere views of those few senators of his own party who felt that Carswell was unfair to the court, to the presidency, and even to the conservative cause.

The future, however, is clearly in the president's hands. He can lose only if he insists that the Carswells are good enough for the Supreme Court, and that the Senate must confirm his judicial nominees, even if they are not very good. The interesting question now is not the president's last appointment, but the president himself.

We Love, Cry, Bleed and Laugh'

May I compliment you on several articles in your April 9 edition. I refer to: "Negro M.P. favors anti-hate Bill." "Blacks condemning Smith but doing it nervously:", "Canada's Apartheid Investment", and "Adoption Trends."

The articles were written in unemotional fashion and were most informative. Might I suggest, to further break down prejudice, a series of articles on: "M.P. Lincoln Alexander", "Landlords say NO to Negro couples in Victoria" in spite of Human Rights Act B.C., "The hurtful things children of upright white Canadian parents say", and "Is there really much difference between a white child and a colored one?"

Articles such as these would supplement your valuable ones. They would help white citizens in Victoria appreciate that those of us of colored families are really not different. We love, we cry, we bleed, we laugh. — Neil Jones, 2070 Byron.

Pensioned Passengers

In Tuesday's Times mention was made of a bus pass available in 1965 which permitted the purchaser unlimited travelling between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. in the downtown core, but that this privilege "was discontinued because nobody was buying it." That was five years ago when money was not nearly as tight as it is today.

I feel sure, were that privilege reintroduced at the present time, many pensioners who now forego trips into town would gladly avail themselves of these passes if only to make the return journey from and to home for a single fare. Until last year it was possible to get an occasional free ride one way, but even that has been withdrawn.

A suggestion was made recently to issue an annual pass to pensioners for the sum of $10 and I see merit in this idea also. — Elston H. Davies.

Rough Ride

The "advantages" of the new regulations for the Greater Victoria bus system have been emphasized, but there is another side to the picture.

Recently I, being the only one to board a bus at a certain point, paid my 25 cents and was instantly swung from side to side before I could reach a seat, with the help of someone's kindly hand.

A little later a somewhat disabled woman climbed in, paid her fare, and was obliged to stand, holding on to one of the upright bars until the bus was stopped again, when she had time to find a seat. The bus was by no means full.

It is certainly easier and quicker for the driver to watch the coins than to give change, but surely all this would be out-weighed by even one accident? — Mrs. G. A. Litt, 2451 Beresford.

Looking Back

From the Times of April 14, 1910.

Father Berube and 633 repatriated French Canadians from the manufacturing towns of New England have arrived in Prince Albert. On the arrival of the train the party was photographed and then Father Berube addressed them, telling them of the glories of the great province of Saskatchewan and urging them to show the world that a French colony could be second to none.

Canada's Northland Rich but Fragile

By ROBERT ESTABROOK

EIGHT-STOREY apartment building and 49-room hotel towering over the usual Far North dwellings and ever-present snowmobile make an unusual picture of the new Arctic at Frobisher Bay.

OTTAWA — Only about 52,000 people live amid the spectacular lonely beauty of the immense region of Canada that stretches northward 2,000 miles from the 60th parallel to the pole and east and west to Greenland and Alaska. In addition to rare species of wildlife, this huge area of ice, mountains and tundra contains great reserves of oil and important stores of iron ore, lead and zinc, copper and other minerals. It also has much of the fresh water that gives Canada one-third of the world's entire supply.

Is the empty and almost undefiled Canadian Arctic and sub-Arctic the new frontier that some enthusiasts have depicted it to be? Are its resources the riches of the future? Does it offer antidotes for world problems of overpopulation and polluted air and water? Can it find a new bonanza in tourism?

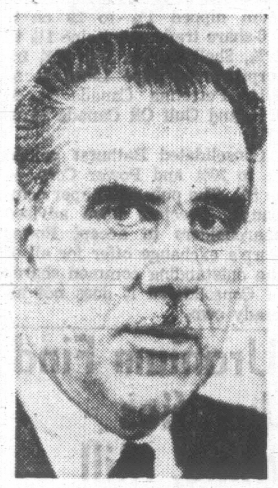

'Much Money, Care and Effort Needed'

Some 11,000 miles of travel in and around the Northwest Territories and the Yukon warrants a few tentative answers based upon talks with authorities as well as personal observations with no attempt at expertise. They add up to "not yet." While the potential of the Canadian northland is unquestionably vast, the region is fragile and the difficulties are substantial. Much money, effort and care will be required to overcome them. The region is neither an Eden nor a panacea.

People from the outside congregating in the centres of population — Yellowknife, Frobisher Bay and Inuvik in the Northwest Territories and Whitehorse and Dawson City in the Yukon — generally live well. They enjoy city-type conveniences, shop at stores that are relatively well supplied, if expensive, go to movies and keep in touch with the world by radio and even "canned" television in some instances.

But along with such indigenous activities as hunting, trapping and fishing, most of the industries assocated with the north are extractive. These are not the sort to support large numbers of people, nor do they create new wealth in the north. Oil wells, for example, need relatively few persons to operate them, and for the most part the technicians are imported. Mining offers somewhat larger local employment, but much of this operation is mechanized. Refineries and smelters are not yet general in the north.

The provision of services to supply these industries undoubtedly will result in local expansion. For example, the capital of Yukon Territory, Whitehorse, is the shipping and supply point for many mining enterprises. It is easy to envisage a repetition of the experience of Anchorage,

HODGSON

Alaska, with Whitehorse doubling its present population of 12,000 within a decade or less.

Similarly, the feverish oil exploration centered on Inuvik, in the Northwest Territories near the mouth of the Mackenzie River, has brought at least a temporary influx of population. The expansion of governmental activities in Yellowknife, the capital and only city of the Northwest Territories, also has meant substantial growth there. The town of Hay River, across Great Slave Lake, prospers as a railhead and shipping point.

But despite talk in Ottawa about development of a mid-north corridor, there is no great rush of creative industries into the area. Eskimo cooperatives have enjoyed some success — a whale meat cannery at Rankin Inlet, a knitting factory at Frobisher Bay and various projects for marketing carvings and fur garments. But these have a limited local impact.

With the new voyage of the icebreaking American supertanker Manhattan, oil is an item of prime interest. Important Canadian discoveries have been made at Atkinson Point on the Arctic coast of the Northwest territories in the same general region as the fabulous find on the north slope of Alaska. It is a good bet that other major discoveries are in the offing, as indicated by the activity around Inuvik.

Voyages May Open Iron Ore Deposits

Many persons to whom I talked were convinced that the pioneering of the Manhattan would not lead to the shipment of Arctic oil by tanker. This opinion could reflect a parochial Canadian interest in a pipeline to the south that would tap the existing oil field at Norman Wells, which was linked with Whitehorse by a small line during World War II.

At any rate, the danger of oil spillage if tankers were used was seen as excessive. The probable cost was said to be greater than that of shipment by pipeline from Alaska across to the mouth of the Mackenzie River and up the Mackenzie Valley. Paradoxically, it is thought that the voyages of the Manhattan may open the iron ore deposits on Northern Baffin Island to commercial exploitation by proving the feasibility of sea transportation much of the year.

Proponents of a Mackenzie pipeline envisage a mixture of Canadian and American oil. This assumes that the Nixon administration and Congress could readily resolve the issue of oil quotas. Even without American oil from Alaska, however, a 48-inch Mackenzie pipeline might be warranted by additional Canadian discoveries.

Notwithstanding any additional employment it might offer, a pipeline up the Mackenzie would bring some problems of its own. Experiments are under way near Inuvik to determine the best way of accommodating the steel pipe without melting the permafrost. But permafrost is not the only consideration.

No one knows whether the migrating herds of Caribou, upon which the Eskimos and Indians depend for fresh meat and hides, would cross a pipeline unless it were concealed. When the northern extension of the Canadian National Railways was built some years ago to the Manitoba port of Churchill, on Hudson Bay, it caused a major change in caribou migration habits with consequent disruption of the life of the indigenous peoples. This emphasized the delicacy of the northern environment.

Winters Better Than Assumed

At least in the sub-arctic, the climate is not so ferocious as often assumed. Winter temperatures are usually no lower than those in such prairie cities as Winnipeg or Saskatoon, the main difference being the longer winter nights. The tree line dips in a U from just north of Inuvik down to Churchill and then back up to just north of Fort Chimo, Quebec. The life cycle is slow in the north, and trees, tundra and wildlife may take centuries to recover from thoughtless inroads.

Concern over the ecology and possible pollution is more widespread in Ottawa and southern Canada than in the north. Some persons there think it overdone and that it ought not be permitted to retard economic development. At the same time, there is instant resistance to airy suggestions in Washington and the American west that Canada ought to be prepared to sell water to the United States as part of a common energy policy.

Almost to a man, persons to whom I talked bristled at this idea. Part of the reaction was nationalism, but part also was a feeling that Canada is a sort of custodian of water resources. First let there be a comprehensive survey of water needs over the next century or more, the reasoning goes. Then, if any is left after Canada's needs are met, we'll discuss it with the U.S. But let there be no more talk about reversing the flow of rivers to satisfy California or Arizona.

Whatever the future development of the Canadian North, the Eskimos and Indians there already have undergone a substantial revolution. The attractions of urban culture are displacing traditional ways. Houses have replaced igloos and teepees, and skimobiles have supplanted dog teams. Schools, movies and drug stores exert a pull on the young away from the self-sufficiency of the old, more isolated existence.

Canadian government influence, exercised through the department of Indian affairs and northern development in Ottawa, has been mostly benevolent, although it is sometimes criticized for excessive paternalism. It has provided well for physical needs such as homes, communications, schools and health services (the number of hospitals and nursing stations in the north is especially impressive).

The government, so far, has offered no satisfactory course for the educated Indian or Eskimo who wants to remain in the north but can find no job there adequate for his skills. Frustration sometimes results. Hunting and trapping no longer provide a full livelihood for many who have come to depend upon the conveniences associated with urban life. Migration to urban job centres also sometimes brings unhappiness. Eskimo women, in particular, are said to grieve for the north when they are transplanted to the city.

Some spokesmen for the Eskimos and Indians also contend that they are not consulted enough in decisions affecting their cultures, although they usually are represented in local and regional governmental bodies. While recognizing that it is impossible to preserve all the old cultures, these spokesmen plead for inclusion of training in Eskimo or Indian languages as part of the educational program in the north.

Transportation also remains a key to northern development. Air travel is surprisingly easy around the fringes. Jets operate almost daily to major points, with DC-3s and other smaller aircraft fanning out on the more infrequent runs to smaller settlements that have gravel or ice runways. It is possible to obtain a Toronto newspaper in Whitehorse or sometimes even in Inuvik on the day of publication. But direct flights across the vast expanse of the Northwest Territories are virtually non-existent.

Use of Lear Jet Saves Many Hours

Territorial Commissioner Stuart M. Hodgson in Yellowknife has encountered criticism there and in Ottawa for his recent purchase of a Lear jet for visits to far-flung parts of his domain. But the saving of days by direct travel of executives to points nearly 2,000 miles away may occasion some re-thinking.

Railroads link the edges of the north with the outside. One line connects Hay River in the Northwest Territories with transcontinental rail lines. Another offers an outlet for Whitehorse and Yukon Territory to the Pacific Ocean at Skagway, Alaska. There is talk of new rail lines to connect the Yukon with the Northwest Territories, Alberta and British Columbia.

Water transportation also plays an important if limited role. For four months a year, diesel tugs and barges haul large amounts of freight down the Mackenzie River from the railhead at Hay River to Inuvik or Tuktoyaktuk on the Arctic Ocean. Shipping provides an essential route to the more remote Arctic islands during the short summer season.

Highways, however, are still rudimentary. Gravel all-weather roads reach north to Yellowknife in the Northwest Territories and to Whitehorse and Dawson City in the Yukon. There is no direct connection between the two territories, although a road is projected from Dawson to Inuvik. In the far north, winter roads across ice and snow permit movement of heavy equipment, but many points depend primarily upon contact by air. Conditions in the Eastern Arctic are too severe for road links to be envisaged seriously at this time.

Lack of highways makes living expensive. It also limits tourism, which is viewed by some authorities as an increasingly important factor in northern development. Not until there is a circle route in connection with the Alaska Highway, they say, will the potential of the Northwest Territories begin to be realized for attracting sightseers, campers, fishermen and lovers of the outdoors generally.

As it is, facilities in the Yukon are far better developed because of its accessibility over the Alaska Highway and the White Pass and Yukon Railroad.

In the Northwest Territories, there are hotels in Yellowknife, Inuvik and Frobisher Bay as well as a few campgrounds on the highway from Alberta. Fishing in the northern lakes is said to be fabulous. The only feasible way now to reach lodges such as those on Great Bear Lake is by chartered bush aircraft — which makes it expensive for the average sportsman or vacationer.

Tonic Qualities For the Urbanite

Quite apart from its resources or the possibilities of settlement, much of the attraction of the north is its freshness and vastness, and the feeling of independence and solitude they engender.

It is a fascinating place to visit. Particularly in the Yukon, much of the area is almost indescribably beautiful, with large clear lakes, broad valleys and spruce and birch forests rimmed by snowcapped mountains.

Whatever the pace and extent of its development in other respects, the Canadian North has tonic qualities of enormous appeal to urbanites who feel crushed by the pressures of a too harried civilization. In the long run, this may turn out to be one of its strongest assets.

Arctic Pipeline of Hope

By EDWARD COWAN

INUVIK, Northwest Territories — An experiment that could bear on the cost of industrial fuel as well as home heat and gasoline for millions of Americans is being conducted near this western Arctic town where the sea will be frozen until June.

About 2,000 feet of 48-inch pipeline has been laid in a loop and hot crude oil is being pumped through it day and night. The pumping began in February and probably will go on for 12 months, an all-seasons test. Robert H. Hall, the resident engineer, said the pipeline has never before been used in North America.

The experiment is part of a study of the feasibility of moving oil and natural gas from the Arctic coast up the Mackenzie River Valley 1,300 miles to Edmonton and then to markets in Canada and the United States, principally the Midwest.

Advocates of the line, including the Canadian government, are keen to see it extend 400 miles west from the Mackenzie Delta to Prudhoe Bay Alaska.

Enthusiasm for it in Canadian business and political circles has been mounting. Canadians contend that it is the most direct route from Prudhoe Bay to the Chicago market, easier to build than the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline and that oil movement costs would be lower.

The initial estimate is reliably reported to be $1.2 billion for a line from Prudhoe Bay to Edmonton. Government officials contrast that with an initial estimate of $1.5 billion, or more, for a line from Prudhoe to Valdez on Alaska's southern shore, where the oil would be taken aboard tankers for delivery to the West Coast.

Canadians are increasingly fearful that tanker movement of Alaska oil through the Northwest Passage to the U.S. Eastern Seaboard would entail a risk of masssive pollution to the Arctic if a ship is holed. There is also a spreading political-type emotion among Canadians that they just don't want American ships in "Our Arctic."

Advocates of a pipeline, which would put much more money into Canada than a tanker route and also obviate any dispute over authority to regulate Arctic shipping, contend it entails a lower risk of damage to the environment. But there is still a risk.

One purpose of the Inuvik experiment is to determine how much a pipeline carrying hot oil would melt the permafrost — the permanently frozen ground of the Arctic and sub-Arctic region — and what consequences such thawing might have.

What the experiment fails to examine is whether a pipeline running above-ground along the coast and up the Mackenzie Valley would disrupt the migratory and reproduction habits of wildlife, especially the caribou. Officials of the Canadian Wildlife Service and other experts are deeply concerned and insist that any pipeline that is built must be laid undergound or along the bottoms of creeks and rivers.

With slight embarrassment, Fiat introduces its newest Italian sportscar.

Of course, it doesn't look like an Italian sportscar.

That's where our slight embarrassment comes in.

The name of the car is the Fiat 124S Sedan. And when we first decided to make a sedan, we had no idea what would happen.

We put all the features that a good family sedan should have into the 124S. Things like dual headlights, five roomy seats, a back up light, a two speed heater, bumper guards, windshield washers and special intermittent control wipers. We added things like courtesy lights, flush door handles, a safety rear view mirror, a cigarette lighter and three ashtrays. And we topped the whole thing off with an engine that gets about 30 miles to the gallon.

But there's one thing we didn't count on. Our designers make sportscars. And it's very difficult to make them change their ways.

As a result, the new Fiat 124S is also an Italian sportscar. With all the things you'd expect an Italian sportscar to have.

Things like a four speed stick shift, fully synchromesh, power assisted disc brakes on all four wheels, radial ply tires on wide rims, a sports dash with circular instruments, 1,438 cc's and a top speed of over 90 mph. Even a map compartment in the console.

We're not really sure what to call it. So we've kept the name 124S Sedan. And we're announcing it as a sportscar.

We admit it was a mistake on our part.

But when you drive it, we think you'll agree that at $2,395*, it was the best mistake we could have made.

FIAT

The Fiat 124S Sedan.

The Italian sportscar spirit is standard equipment.

Western Realty

Gross revenue exceeding $13.8 million is reported by Western Realty Projects Ltd., of Edmonton, for theyear 1969.

President Samuel Belzberg said net profit amounted to $1.4 million, representing 66 per cent higher profit than in 1968.

The company has 1,125 townhouse and apartment units completed and 829 under construction in Western Canada, plus more than 1 million square feet of shopping centre space and 153,500 square feet under construction. In addition to this, WRP has commercial and industrial holdings covering 132,000 square feet and 79,000 feet under construction, and land holdings of 4,847 acres, largely in Edmonton, Calgary and Greater Vancouver.

Okanagan

Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. and subsidiaries report record gross income and increased net profit for the year ended Dec. 31, 1969.

The company annual report shows a consolidated gross income of $6.27 million and net earnings of $207,240. This compares with gross income of $5.48 million and a net loss of $25,695 in 1968.

Ian Kennedy, president and managing director, said the company had re-organized and consolidated several areas of its operation during 1969.

Maclean-Hunter

Maclean-Hunter Ltd. had record income and revenue during 1969 with most divisions and subsidiaries contributing to the increase.

Maclean's Magazine, which switched to a standard page size in 1969, showed an increase of nearly 25 per cent in the number of advertising pages. Circulation increased to 732,292 from 708,500.

Net profit for the year ended Dec. 31 was $3.33 million or 83.4 cents a share, up from $1.94 million or 48.7 cents a share in 1968.

AT&T

The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. has set the terms for its offering of about $1.6 million worth of debentures with warrants, the biggest corporate financing plan in history.

A.T. and T. said it set at 8¾ per cent the interest rate on the 30-year debentures. It also said it set at $52 the price at which common stock may be purchased by using the warrants in the offering.

The offering is designed to sell about 3.4 million additional shares of A.T. and T. common stock and raise more than $3 billion in capital.

Moduline

The Penticton firm of Moduline Industries Ltd. plans to commence production June 1, building mobile-type homes for the limited-income market.

Parent company is Moduline Industries Inc., which has two plants at Chehalis, Wash., capable of turning out 60 units per week per shift.

First National

First National City Corporation reports first-quarter consolidated income before securities losses rose to $34.33 million, up 6.9 per cent from $32.12 million earned in the same period of 1969.

The per-share amount was $1.26 compared to $1.19 a share for the comparable period in 1969, based on average shares outstanding.

Sales of securities during the three months resulted in a loss of $4.36 million after tax provision, compared with a loss of $98,000 in the same period last year.

TRANS-CANADA BUYS BIG GAS RESERVES

TORONTO (CP) — TransCanada PipeLines Ltd. of Toronto announced Monday it had purchased 1,400,000,000,800 cubic feet of gas reserves in Alberta to fill a 25-year contract with United States gas companies.

A company statement did not disclose either the names of the Alberta or U.S. companies involved or the price of the purchase, although unofficial estimates placed the value at a minimum of $500,000,000.

It said the reserves were purchased in the Harmattan-Elkton and Harmattan East fields in Alberta.

Truckers' Strike Hits Car Plants

By The Canadian Press

Scarcity of automobile parts due to a truckers' strike in the United States resulted in severe cutbacks Monday in the Ontario automotive production industry.

American Motors Corp. announced it was laying off 880 employees at its Brampton plant from midnight Monday to at least Thursday.

Chrysler Canada Ltd. in Windsor closed its truck plant, laying off 440 workers, and was operating its car plant on a day-to-day basis. A Chrysler spokesman said Monday night the truck plant was expected to remain closed through this week.

About 3,000 workers on the day shift at Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd.'s Oakville plant worked only four hours of the usual eight-hour shift Monday. A spokesman for Ford said if parts continue to be held up it is doubtful if company plants in Oakville, St. Thomas, Windsor and Niagara Falls will continue production after today.

A complete shutdown of production at Ford plants would result in the laying off of nearly 12,000 employees.

Another 8,000 workers at the Oshawa plant of General Motors of Canada Ltd. face the possibility of being laid off after today also.

The American industry is also being affected, with closure Monday of American Motors plants in Milwaukee and Kenosha, Wis.

Canadians Spend More Abroad

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians spent 20 per cent more abroad last year than foreign visitors did in Canada, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has reported.

Canadian expenditures on travel abroad totalled $1,280,000,000, while foreign travellers in Canada spent $1,079,000,000, leaving a deficit of $201,000,000 in the balance of payments' travel account.

Huge Financing by AT & T

NEW YORK (WP) — American Telephone and Telegraph Co. launched the biggest financing in U.S. corporate history Monday, offering its shareholders the right to buy $1.5 billion in bonds which will pay interest at a rate of 8¾ per cent a year.

Each $100 worth of bonds will include two warrants, each entitling the holder to buy one share of AT & T common stock for $52 between Nov. 15, 1970, and May 15, 1975. If all the warrants are exercised, the company will issue 31,386,540 new shares of stock and take in an additional $1.632 billion putting the potential value of the offering at $3.1 billion.

Telephone's 3.1 million shareholders will receive one right for each share they own. For each 35 rights, they may buy $100 worth of bonds, which include the warrants.

In trading on the New York Stock Exchange Monday AT & T's common stock rose to a high of $52.25 a share after the terms of the offering were announced. The price slipped slightly later in the day closing at $51.75 a share, up $1 for the day. Turning over 207,900 shares, AT & T was the most actively traded stock on the exchange.

The rights to subscribe, which expire on May 18, began on a block of 12 million rights at 68.75 cents each and closed at 70.31 cents apiece, on total volume of 14.324 million.

The warrants, trading on a when-issued basis, started at $12.50 each and closed at $12.87. In all, 738,400 warrants were traded.

Despite the frenzy of trading in the telephone issues, prices generally declined on the New York Stock Exchange. Analysts claimed that the attraction of the telephone offering might have drawn funds from other issues.

The warrants — the first warrants to be listed for trading on the N.Y.S.E. in more than 40 years — are detachable from the bonds. In other words, a bondholder may exercise the warrants to purchase additional stock and still retain the bonds.

VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, APRIL 14, 1970 —PAGE 9

And When You've Finished This, Gang, Write If You Get Work

Final exams are no longer the rule in many University of Victoria courses, but thousands of them are going to be written anyway between now and the end of the month. First group of students to sit down to three-hour monsters at 9 a.m. today included several hundred in the Uvic auditorium. When exams end May 1 more than 5,000 Uvic students will join some 40,000 other post-secondary students in the annual search for summer jobs. Predictions are as many as one-third will go jobless and be forced to spend their holiday doing nothing, and, for many, that will mean not enough money for next term. (Bill Halkett photo)

All Tracks Cleared For Capital Budget

The Monday morning blues at city hall cleared quickly today with the return of Ald. Peter Pollen from Japan.

City officials said Monday they didn't expect Pollen back in the city until Wednesday and expressed fears that he might be absent for Thursday's special council meeting and the crucial vote on the five-year capital budget referendum date.

Arriving with Pollen was good news from the city's legal department on an earlier ruling that a two-thirds of full council was required to support the $6.3 million referendum before it could go to the people April 30.

"That was our first understanding," city manager Dennis Young said today. "But we have since been informed that a simple majority of council is all that is required to put the referendum to the people. It is only if we amend the referendum, or attempt to amend it, that two-thirds of full council is required to vote in the affirmative."

With Pollen back from his quick trip to the Orient five aldermen are now in the city and should be present for Thursday's vote. If they are unanimous they provide enough strength to remove fears that the planned April 30 vote might have to be postponed.

Other good news came from the home of Mayor Courtney Haddock.

Confined to bed for the past week with pleurisy, Haddock expects to be back in the public eye Wednesday afternoon for a press conference on the capital budget program.

He also hopes to be able to attend Thursday's council meeting to support the budget vote and thus remove any doubt of council's solid backing for the five-year plan.

Carl Honored By Museum

The widow of Clifford Carl, former head of the Provincial Museum, has been named honorary curator of the museum's marine biology department.

Museum director Bristol Foster said today a second tribute to the man who headed the museum for 29 years will be to name the marine biology floor of the new curatorial tower after Carl.

Mrs. Carl, who has a doctorate in biology herself, will be listed at the museum under her maiden name, Dr. Josephine F. L. Hart.

BISHOP INSTALLATION SLATED FOR MAY 7

Dean Frederick Roy Gartrell of Ottawa will be consecrated bishop and installed as eighth bishop of the Anglican diocese of Vancouver Island May 7 at 7:30 p.m.

The double ceremony will be held in Christ Church Cathedral.

Gartrell succeeds Bishop John Ogle Anderson, who died here last November after only four months in office.

BURNHAM
. . . wins by default?

Vet Convinced Ensign Will Fly

Victoria's Red Ensign champion is preparing what he hopes is the final shot in his five-year war with the federal government to have the present national flag removed and the "old red duster" reinstated.

George Burnham, 203 Menzies, challenged the government in the B.C. Supreme Court Feb. 13 and made a statement of claim March 23.

The federal government, represented by Department of Justice lawyer Norman Mullins, was given 14 days to prepare a case.

IT'S PERUVIAN

The time is up and Burnham says he's now prepared to apply for a judgment by default.

Burnham, who will be 80 in July, is positive he'll win.

"We haven't heard from them because they have no case. Section 269 of the Criminal Code of Canada states that you can't take other people's property and convert it to your own use.

"The government has done this. They took the Peruvian flag and put a maple leaf in the centre—what's more, it's not even a maple leaf."

Veteran of the First and Second World Wars, Burnham claims the Red Ensign was designated and dedicated as the national flag at Vimy Ridge April 9, 1917.

"There were 9,000 casualties in that battle. We paid too high a price to lose our flag now."

Burnham claims he has thousands of members— "I've been too busy to count them"—in the group he heads, Our Flags of the Century Association. Their donations, he says, has made his legal battle possible.

Date for the final round has not yet been set.

Oak Bay MLA Upset But Won't Quit Party

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said Monday he is sure that Scott Wallace, the Oak Bay Social Credit MLA, will do whatever he feels necessary "in true conscience" in his fight to change government hospital policy.

Barrett was replying, at a press conference, to the question whether he will invite Wallace to join the New Democratic Party after Wallace had said this week he is "very upset" about Health Minister Ralph Loffmark's policies.

Wallace even predicted the defeat of the government if it continues its hospital policies and accused it of reneging on its campaign promises to change from "a blacktop government" to one more concerned with people.

But Wallace said later he was "staggered to hear" that Barrett had been asked whether he would welcome the Oak Bay MLA into NDP ranks.

Wallace says he intends to meet the premier when he returns from a post-session holiday.

"I have no intention of leaving the Social Credit Party. I've agreed with their policies in the past, and much of what they're doing now," said Wallace, who was one of the most enthusiastic opponents of socialism in his first experience in the legislature.

"But I think they (the government) have some measures that could be bettered. What I am doing will prove whether a backbencher can be a useful and effective member of government."

Barrett said he sympathizes with Wallace "now that he has discovered that what the opposition has been saying all along is true."

Loffmark Triggers Outburst

"I hope he will continue his effort along with us to have the people of B.C. recognize the desperate shortage of hospital beds in B.C. and the lack of an over-all blueprint for hospital services," Barrett said.

"I don't have any comment to make on his statement that the government will fall on this issue," Barrett said before reporters could ask for a comment.

He sidestepped the question of whether an invitation would be issued for Wallace to join the NDP, saying he knew that Wallace is a man of conscience who would follow his own principles.

Wallace's outburst was triggered by Loffmark's announcement that the government will set up a committee to study ways of cutting hospital costs by centralizing such things as laundry services, instituting more bulk services and expanding day-care services.

Wallace retorted that the federal government in co-operation with provincial health ministers made such a study in 1969. "I showed them (the cabinet ministers) the study in the house."

He said the 1969 study came up with 160 suggestions — "all of them practical, realistic and commonsense. Why B.C. has to turn around and set up its own committee I don't for the life of me know."

Wallace said Loffmark's intention to centralize laundry services is tardy, because the Greater Victoria Regional Board already has this in hand.

Play Bomb Issue Easily Defused

It doesn't take Victoria parks administrator Herb Warren long to wipe out nuclear arms.

Confronted with a complaint regarding a "USAF bomb-swing" in Beacon Hill Park, Warren ordered the offensive weapon removed to his maintenance sheds.

There "USAF" was scoured from the tail of the swing, the fins were painted black and the forward end got a couple of eyes.

"The bomb," Warren told the city's parks committee this morning, "is now officially a whale."

Couple Attacked By Sword Waver

Gersharn Singh Mann, 28, of Vancouver, was charged in provincial court here Monday with attempted murder, assault causing bodily harm and theft over $50.

Police said a man burst into the Sikh Temple on Graham Street during worship services Sunday, stole a sword and went out and attacked an Esquimalt man and injured the man's wife.

Mann, who told Judge William Ostler he was a security guard at Oakalla Prison, was remanded to April 20 for plea and election of trial. Bail was set at $5,000.

He is charged with attempting to murder Ragbier Singh Bhandar, 271 Nicola Place, and assaulting his wife, Hargian, who was treated in hospital Sundy for a cut to her left arm.

Police said a man entered the temple about 1:30 a.m. Sunday and stole a three-foot-long cavalry sword from the altar while East Indian priest Ajit Singh was reading a service.

No one tried to stop the man, because tradition demands that once a service is started it cannot be interrupted.

The Bhandars were attacked in the parking lot at the Dominion Hall, 802 Esquimalt Road.

WHATEVER THE STATUS of our Arctic sea lanes, the Strait of Juan de Fuca is a waterway which we share with the United States. If our friend and uneasy neighbor insists on shipping nerve gas through it, I fail to see how Canada can prevent her.

We can protest any lack of adequate safety measures in running the filthy cargoes through the Strait. Also, we can hope that the American military will up the safety factor by borrowing good Canadian west coast pilots for the traverse.

But until international law gets around to defining what may or may not be transported past another nation's shores, all we're likely to get from hollering is such relief as protest may bring to outraged feelings.

In the matter of these five shiploads of nerve gas, our course seems to be dictated pretty plainly. Avoid useless panic, pray that Civil Defence won't contemplate a mass exodus over the Malahat, and determinedly enjoy the nice weather.

If you can think of a better course within the bounds of what's possible to us and what isn't, I'd be glad to hear. So, perhaps, will External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp.

Meanwhile, in a world that still countenances the weapons of Armageddon, there's a measure of irony in the return of the nerve gas from Okinawa to the land of its origin. Americans, especially those in the states through which the stuff will pass, aren't of a mood to welcome it home. Neither is a U.S. Army saddled with a ticklish disposal problem.

And not, I trust, one to be solved by dumping the evil mix into an ocean already sufficiently polluted.

Why, after all, should the fishes be required to pay for man's supreme folly?

AMONG THE NUMEROUS traps that life holds for well-meaning parents is one that I'll call the bicycle syndrome.

It makes itself manifest when the boy or girl who yearned desperately for a brave new bike at age 12 is two or three years older.

One day, the bike is in use. The next, it's relegated to the back of the garage, and you're an old meanie if you so much as suggest that it be ridden to school.

There's no earthly use in pointing out that the bike's in perfect condition, and that cycling is quicker than walking. The transition has been made, and there's no turning back.

That, at least, is what I thought until this pleasant spring.

But I've noted a related phenomenon no less startling. Any number of those same young people — now grown to adulthood — are riding bikes again.

On Sunday, they were all over the place, pedalling along in groups or couples. They appeared to be completely free of self-consciousness, and were obviously enjoying themselves.

That's all to the good, and if the trend continues, it will provide a course of action for parents whose 15-year-olds have disowned bikes formerly held dear.

Stow those unwanted wheels away. In a few years, the owners may be back for them!

IN A YEAR WHEN EXPO 70 is attracting Canadians to Japan, here's a Japanese girl who wants to visit Canada. Her name is Keiko Nemura, and her struggle with our difficult language is apparent in her letter.

"I am interested in Canada and I have been wishing to go to your country. I have known many things about Canada with your books and newspapers, but sincerely wish to learn how your people live and how to think with my own eyes and ears.

"I make a plan of going to Canada for two or three months in this summer."

Miss Nemura asks whether a Victoria family may be willing to take her into it's home for her stay.

"I believe that I will be able to learn many things from your peoples," she notes.

She adds that she works for a trading company in Osaka, and gives her age as 27.

I'll keep her address handy on the chance that a local family might wish to look into this request. If so, get in touch.

That's it, except to note that my wife is forging staunchly into her seventh week without a cigarette.

"In a miserable kind of way," says she, "I'm glad I gave them up!"

Q. What were the names of the crew and the launch date of Apollo 12?

A. Charles Conrad Jr., Richard F. Gordon and Alan F. Bean. Their spacecraft left Cape Kennedy at 2:09 p.m. EST on Nov. 14, 1969. The craft suffered power difficulties when hit by a lightning bolt during lift-off, but, contrary to this week's Apollo 13 voyage, the remainder of the mission was a success.

Square Music In the Square

There'll be music in Centennial Square this summer if Victoria city council endorses a public works committee request.

And the hope is that the golden tones will have a "conditioning and deterrent influence" on young loungers.

The committee this morning agreed to recommend a six-month trial for the canned "motivational background music" for the Centennial Square arcade, the two public lobbies and the staff lunchroom in city hall.

Ald. Peter Pollen made the recommendation, noting that his business establishment had used the piped music for some time with considerable success.

The music company, in a letter to council, claimed it would encourage city hall staff to work harder, provide a pleasant atmosphere for taxpayers and, since it would be "square music," it could have "conditioning and deterrent influence" on the youngsters.

City Treasurer James Bramley and City Manager Dennis Young were the least enthusiastic to the idea of piped music.

"It might be good in some places, but I sincerely question it's installation in government offices," Young said.

Pollen disagreed.

"It might soothe the taxpayers," he said.

CASPER BEAT LITTLER IN MASTERS PLAYOFF

LIGHTER CLUB ADDED 30 YARDS TO DRIVES

New Driver Made Augusta Different Course for Billy

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Billy Casper tipped his listeners about the result of the Masters' playoff Monday 50 minutes before it began.

"Gene Littler played better golf at age 19 than he does now," said Casper, the game's one-time fat boy. "Me? I get better with age."

Four holes after the two-man playoff for the Masters golf title began, Casper had proved his point. It was all but over. Casper was ahead by four strokes and all Littler did on the back nine was make it a bearable afternoon for late-tuning television customers.

Casper shot a 69 and won his first Masters. He wore the famed coat of green. Littler had a 74 and wore short sleeves.

"Winning the U.S. Open is still the No. 1 accomplishment for me," said Casper. "But this is a close second."

Casper's playoff win was good for a $25,000 cheque and the green jacket that some professionals say can be worth as much as $1,000,000 in endorsements and other commercial deals.

Casper won the U.S. Opens of 1959 and 1966, beating Arnold Palmer in a come-from-behind playoff in the latter. He has never won the PGA championship or the British Open, but has joined Palmer and Jack Nicklaus as golf's only millionaires.

"A grand slam today is impossible—or next to it," said Casper. "It was something 20 or 30 years ago, but there are three times as many fine golfers now. The odds against it are astounding."

Casper will try anyway. He announced plans to play in the remainder of the Big Four, the U.S. and British Opens and the PGA.

Casper was a relaxed champion, looking as if he felt he belonged in that green coat—even though it was three sizes too big.

"They must have measured it for me when I weighed 240," he said. "Hey, fellows, I'm skinnier now." Skinnier, yes, but the San Diego neighbor of Littler appears to have added back about 15 of the some 60 pounds he dropped on his famed diet a few years ago.

The Augusta National course was never supposed to be built for Casper's type of golf. It was popular to say it was best for the Palmers and Nicklauses. But Casper picked up a new driver with a lighter steel shaft last week and it added more than 30 yards to his tee shots.

"I played a different golf course this week than I ever have before at Augusta National," he said. "I was hitting wedges where I once hit eight irons. It makes a new ball game."

Despite his words about Littler's golfing prowess as a youth, Casper said:

"Gene is a great player today, but as a teen-ager he was marvelous. If you think he strikes it solid now, you should have seen him then. He used to beat me good."

Littler smiled through his dejection at his closest brush with Masters glory. It was his 17th try and still no green jacket.

"I never made a putt of more than four feet until the last hole," he said. "When you give four quick shots away to a player like Billy, you're usually dead. I was."

Littler said pressure was of little meaning in the showdown created when both shot nine-under par 279s in the tournament proper which wound up Sunday.

"I got so far behind I didn't have time to get nervous," Littler said. "I thought I might have a chance if I'd beaten Casper on the 16th, but he birdied and I was finished."

Bill WALKER

VANCOUVER — The passing of time has wrought few noteworthy changes in the executive vice-president and general manager of the Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League. Norman "Bud" Poile still is the same affable, courteous, but completely dedicated person he was when he was a member executive of the Western Hockey League a few seasons ago.

This observation is not necessarily a complete one, because the key words, naturally, are "National Hockey League" and the Canucks have yet to play their first game.

But this is where the 46-year old Poile fits in.

Hockey is his game. It always has been. And he is the man in charge of making the Canucks work.

He was appointed to the task by Medicor and president Tom Scallen of the Minneapolis-based company one morning in February after Joe Crozier had been relieved of command. Crozier had been the resident manager-coach of the Canucks of the Western Hockey League.

It had been orginally planned to retain Crozier in the capacity of manager and coach in deference to the fine season he had enjoyed with the Canucks. Poile was to have been an executive assistant to Scallen. However, when Crozier defaulted, and was fired for "rank insubordination" for refusing to attend a meeting, Poile was asked to take the new position.

"I thought it over very carefully before I decided to come," Poile said. "I knew that because of the Crozier situation and the team's record there would be a few problems, but under the circumstances I decided these would be ironed out in time, so I accepted."

There was an unusual parallel in the case of the two central figures, Crozier and Poile.

For Poile had only been made available because of an earlier disagreement he had with Philadelphia board chairman Ed Snider. He had been dismissed as general manager in December and replaced by his assistant Keith Allen.

"I could have sat on my butt for 16 months," he said of his contract with Philadelphia. But I didn't want to be idle that long. And it wasn't until 48 hours before I came to Vancouver that I settled up with the Flyers."

It had been with Philadelphia that Poile had made his jump to the NHL for the second time. He had been there earlier as player with five teams, Toronto, Chicago, New York, Detroit, and Boston. He had started a coaching career in 1950-51 with Tulsa of the old USHL, moved on to Glace Bay, N.S., the next season, and thence to Edmonton where he served nine years under the aegis of the Detroit Red Wings.

In 1962, "I made the best move I ever made," Poile said of his taking over the operation of the San Francisco Club in the Western League for owner Coley Hall. Acutally, this was meant to be a forerunner to an eventual NHL franchise, but it didn't work out that way for Poile. Some changes were made and he ended up as head man in Philly, instead.

"My first relationships there were with Bill Putman," he recalled. "And we got along fine toghether."

It helped, too, that the Flyers finished first in their initial expansion season, and a third-place finish last year also was considered as a fair indication of the club's overall success.

But things were not to be as rosy this season in the city of brotherly love.

"No, Philadelphia is not a dirty word," he said of his firing.

"My disagreement was with Snider, nobody else. He was chairman of the board, a young fellow, about 38; he had his own ideas and they didn't agree with mine, and we didn't get along. It was strictly a personality clash between two men. And he was the boss."

"I tthought we had a good club," he said of the Flyers. "I had been responsible for it; the team had been playing well, and attendance was up. So I have nothing to hide.

Poile added that he couldn't quite understand the Flyers' collapse in the final week of this season when they tumbled out of a possible second-place finish into the discard pile.

Poile had two other job opportunities before he was approached by the Canucks. "I would prefer not to name the teams," he said. "But neither one was Detroit." Poile had been western farm director for the Wings when he operated the Edmonton club, and when Bill Gadsby had been fired as Red Wing coach this season, a vacancy had been created which has not yet been filled.

He has no doubts now about the wisdom of his move to Vancouer. "I wouln't have made tthe decision, if I didn't feel I could do the job," he said, "and since arriving I have had nothing but the utmost co-operation from the staff and the team."

"Sure," he explained," there was a strong feeling for Crozier. There had to be. And he deserves a great deal of credit. And naturally the team with which he had been so very close, must have had a deep feeling of regret. Why deny it. It's true."

Poile also confirmed that Crozier, had been offered the position as team coach before Laycoe had been approached. This was following the original hassle, Poile explained. "But Crozier again declined. That's when I contacted Laycoe."

"It was a extremely tough situation," Poile said. "And Laycoe deserves full marks. "He took it, knowing full well the reprecussions. I talked to him on Wednesday and told him I wanted him as coach for tthe game on Friday.

"When he accepted, I was deeply relieved, because I admire him for his great coaching record and I know he will do a good job for us.

These were the only two men approached," he said.

But how will the Canucks, NHL version, do?

Poile laughed:

"Gee," he said, "Montreal didn't make the playoffs this year, and they are in our division."

But more on that, and Poile, tomorrow.

LONG HUNT FOR JACKET TO FIND IT DIDN'T FIT

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—After 14 years of failure, Bill Casper finally won the coveted green coat as Masters golf champion Monday—then found it didn't fit.

"Look at the room in here," Casper said, showing the loose fit of the jacket with the masters emblem on the chest, shortly after it had been draped over his shoulders by 1969 champion George Archer.

"It looks like a portly 44," said one observer.

"Forty-four, it's a 99," said Casper. "I think they measured me for it about 14 years ago when I first started playing in the Masters."

The mild-mannered stylist from Bonita, Calif., was a bulbous 240-pounder when he won the first of his two U.S. Open championships in 1959. Since then, he has dieted down to a svelte 180.

Casper said it was great relief finally to win the title that had been his target for years.

"I was getting afraid that I'd never do it," he said. "I came close and missed by a shot last year after leading through the third round. I was very lucky."

Victory Rates First In Bruin Game Plan

By The Canadian Press

Hockey fans and players in Boston and St. Louis may be looking for more fireworks tonight when the two remaining Stanley Cup quarter-final series resume but Harry Sinden is more concerned about winning a game.

Sinden is coach of the Bruins whose best-of-seven Eastern series returns to Boston after the Rangers tied it 2-2 on two weekend victories in New York.

"Probably winning the first two games so easily gave too many people the idea this was going to be an easy series," said Sinden whose charges whipped the Rangers 8-2 and 5-3 in the first two games at Boston.

"I'm thinking of fans and even some of the players," he said. "But I personally never thought it would be an easy series, and I think what transpired in New York should be enough to convince everyone else of this fact."

The Rangers beat the Bruins 4-3 and 4-2 in New York Saturday and Sunday.

The other remaining quarter-final series has Minnesota North Stars moving back to St. Louis against the Blues after the North Stars evened that Western Series 2-2 with 4-2 and 4-0 weekend wins at Minneapolis.

Chicago Black Hawks have won the other East Division series with four straight wins over Detroit Red Wings and Pittsburgh Penguins eliminated Oakland Seals, also in four straight, in the other Western encounter.

The Boston fans, among the rowdiest in the National Hockey League, will be looking for a resumption of the player battles that resulted in 174 penalty minutes in the game at New York Saturday.

Tonight's fifth game of the Stanley Cup quarter-final series between Boston and New York will be televised on channels 2 and 6, beginning at 5 p.m.

HARRY SINDEN
. . . ignored brawling

Keep Your Head Up, Sanderson Told

Derek Sanderson of the Bruins and Dave Balon of the Rangers were removed with game misconducts after their brawl. Sanderson, one of the league's hardest-hitting forwards, claimed the Rangers had marked him for special treatment but the New Yorkers would get back what they handed out when the series resumes in Boston.

He said Ranger goalie Ed Giacomin had skated over to talk to him at the start of the Saturday game.

WAS WARNED

"He told me they were out to get me," Sanderson said.

Giacomin denied the charge, saying he had only told Sanderson to keep his head up.

"That's what he always says to me," Giacomin said, "so I thought I'd get the jump on him this time."

But Sanderson looked forward to tonight's game.

"Now it's got to go back to Boston," he said after Sunday's match. "And they'll get it when they come to Boston."

NHL president Clarence Campbell said Monday he would not conduct any hearings into the Sanderson-Balon fight.

In an interview in San Francisco where he was visiting, Campbell said the fight did not result in any harm other than a delay of the game.

Sinden also ignored the brawling and tried to concentrate on winning another hockey game.

"The main things I'm interested in now," Sinden said," are stressing positional play and trying to get a little more offence out of the Sanderson line."

In the St. Louis-Minnesota series, meanwhile, it has been the fans who have provided the intimidation.

RAINED GARBAGE

The Blues players were showered with beer cans, eggs, programs and other debris during both weekend games in Minnesota's home arena and the North Stars players fear retaliation from the Blues fans tonight.

"It's going to be brutal in St. Louis on Tuesday," said Claude Larose, captain of the North Stars. "The fans there have probably been watching what's happened in Minnesota. It could get rough."

Goalie Cesare Maniago, whose flip-flop antics in the Minnesota nets shut out the Blues Sunday, said: "It's great to have the fans behind you. I guess they gave the Blues some of their own treatment."

The North Stars, like the Rangers, now are faced with the task of having to win at least one game on their opposition's home ice.

After tonight's games, the two series move back to New York and Minnesota for the sixth games Thursday.

Bloodletting Threat Brings Atlanta Coach $1,000 Fine

Times News Services

Coach Richie Guerin of Atanta Hawks was fined $1,000 Monday night by the National Basketball Association after he threatened at a news conference that if officiating follows the pattern set Sunday, "there'll be a lot of blood spilt on that floor."

Commissioner Walter Kennedy announced the fine in New York saying it is "inconceivable" that any coach would make such a threat.

After the Hawks lost the opener in the Western Division finals to Los Angeles Lakers Sunday, 119-115, Guerin charged that the officials deliberately protected Elgin Baylor and Jerry West of the Lakers.

"If that's the way the officials are going to call the game, Baylor and West won't be around to shoot 18 or 20 fouls," Guerin said Monday.

"We're preparing ourselves for everything. I don't mean just basketball, but everything. If they want to fight . . . then, we want to get involved in that too."

ACCURATE FROM LINE

West made 18 of 21 foul shots and wound up with 38 points while Baylor was successful on 14 of 18 free throws and finished with 30 points.

The Lakers trailed, by as much as 17 points, from the start until Baylor put them ahead 112-111 with two munutes remaining. Between them, West and Baylor scored the last 12 Laker points, all on free throws. Lakers, as a team, were successful on 47 of 60 free throws while Hawks were good on 23 of 32.

KNICKS WIN AGAIN

While Willis Reed and Lew Alcindor battled to a standoff, reserves Cazzie Russell and Mike Riordan scored the decisive points and New York Knicks edged Milwaukee Bucks, 112-111, Monday night for a 2-0 lead in their eastern division final.

Riordan, who had entered the game only seconds earlier, scored a reverse, driving layup for a 110-107 lead, and then Russell capped the stirring victory with two decisive free throws that made it 112-109 with 34 seconds left.

MISSED IN CLUTCH

Alcindor, who scored 38 points but missed two clutch free throws with 50 seconds to go and the score 110-109, hit a final basket with 22 seconds remaining. But Bucks never got another chance.

Reed, who had outplayed Alcindor in the Saturday's 110-102 triumph, pumped in 36 points, and the final two put New York ahead to stay, 106-105.

Grid Players Hope To Entice Jackson

OTTAWA (CP)—Officials of the Canadian Football League's player association said Monday night they hope to lure quarterback Russ Jackson out of retirement July 2 for the CFL all-star game.

Jackson retired last season after quarterbacking Ottawa Rough Riders to their second straight Grey Cup victory.

Gary Schreider, head of the player's union and one-time Ottawa player, said the decision is up to Jackson.

But there's little doubt the game, first all-star contest since December, 1958, in Hamilton, would get a shot in the arm from a Jackson appearance.

Schreider told a news conference the players hope to make the game an annual one but that the Ottawa game must get these hopes off to a flying start.

JOB TO SELL SEATS

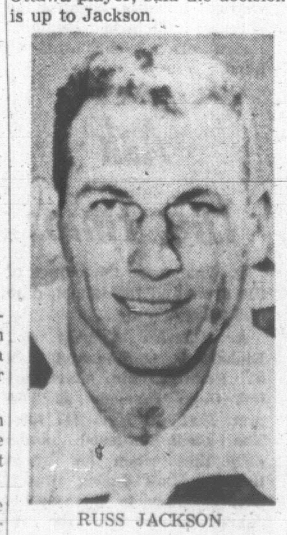

The Ottawa club draws an average 12,000 fans for exhibition games.

"Our job will be to sell the other 14,000 seats to make it a sell-out," he said.

The game pits Ottawa against an all-star team selected from the eight other CFL cities. The all-stars — four from each of the other eight clubs — will be chosen by CFL coaches and announced May 9 or 10.

Jack Gotta, who succeeded Frank Clair as Ottawa coach, will handle Riders, Eagle Keyes of Saskatchewan Roughriders will coach the all-stars.

Proceeds of the game will go into the pension fund of the players.

MONTREAL (CP) — Fourteen women and 18 male swimmers were named Monday as part of the Canadian team which will compete in the British Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh, Scotland, this summer.

Named to the women's team were: Shirley Cazilet, Leslie Cliff, Sylvia Dockerill, Donna-Marie Gurr, Karen James and Jeanne Warren, all of Vancouver; Rene Robson, Sandra Smith and Susan Smith, all of Edmonton; Leslie Booth of St. Catharines, Ont., Angela Coughlan of Burlington, Ont., Linda Hall of Gimli, Man., Shirley Roulston of Burnaby, B.C., and Toronto's Jane Wright.

The men's team members include: John Hawes, Peter Cross and Tom Arusoo, all of Pointed Claire, Que., Brian O'Sullivan, Ron Jacks, Peter Harrower and Ken Campbell of Vancouver; Toronto's Cliff Parson, Erik Fish of Medicine Hat, Alta., Ralph Hutton of Campbell River, Bill Kennedy of London, Ont., Bob Kastings of Lethbridge, Alta., Bill Mahoney of New Westminster, B.C., Edmonton's George Smith and Brad Storey and Mike Whitaker, both of Calgary.

WRESTLING COACH

The Canadian Comomnwealth Games Association also announced that Dr. Bert Taylor of Edmonton will serve as coach of the wrestling team while Jim Trifunoe of Winnipeg will be manager of the team.

In addition the coach and manager as well as the team members of the badminton squad were announced.

Channarong Ratanseaangsuang of Calgary will serve as coach of the team with Allan Fitzpatrick of Montreal manager.

Team members are: Jamie Paulsen of Calgary, Yves Pare and Pat Moody both of Montreal, Toronto's Dave Charron, Nancy McKinley and Marge Shedd, and Bruce Rollick, Rolf Paterson, Alison Ridgway and Judy Rollick, all of Vancouver.

The appointments were approved at a meeting of the Canadian Commonwealth Association Sunday.

Hockey Post Retained

Ted Adkin was returned by acclamation as president of the Saanich Minor Hockey Association at the group's annual general meeting Sunday.

Also returned to office were vice-president Lloyd Ferguson and director Lyle Riddell.

New members on the board of directors Keith Thomas, Bruce Naylor, Eric Townsend and Walter MacWilliams, who are to serve two years, as well as Rod Lavallee, elected for one year.

Executives with one year in office remaining are treasurer Jamie Robertson and directors Albert Bradfield, Hugh Reston, Jack Dawes and Fred Wooster.

It was announced that registrations for next season will have to be restricted

LOSE DRAFT CHOICE . . . . . FOR TAMPERING

Dolphins Pay Penalty

NEW YORK (AP) — Pro football commissioner Pete Rozelle ruled Monday that Miami Dolphins' first-round choice in the 1971 National Football League draft has been awarded to Baltimore Colts because of tampering with the former Colts' coach Don Shula, now coach of the Dolphins.

Shula's hiring as head coach and vice-president of the Dolphins was announced Feb. 18.

Rozelle said his office concluded the Dolphins violated the tampering provisions of the league rules on three counts.

1. By permitting a third party — not an employee of an NFL team — with their full knowledge to initiate contact with Shula and indicate possible terms, including ownership, to move from head coach of the Colts to head coach of the Dolphins.

2. By beginning what constituted direct initial negotiations without having contacted the Colts, by confirming to Shula their interest in hiring him and by acknowledging that ownership would be part of the employment agreement.

3. By failing to make direct contact with the Colt ownership or management until Feb. 18, the day the hiring of Shula was announced.

A number of golfers who entered Sunday's Centennial Foursomes event are up in arms over the amount of time it took them to navigate the Victoria Golf Club course.

Teams who finished in less than 4½ hours were considered. Many took five hours.

Most of the problems, it seemed, were created by golfers who refused to move down the fairway until they went hand-in-hand with their partners. In this competition, where partners hit alternate shots, "companionship" is quite unnecessary.

A great deal of time might have been saved if half of the team had moved ahead, quietly, while the other half was preparing to shoot.

One might suggest that, by moving ahead, it would be a breach of etiquette. Those who insisted they wanted to observe etiquette simply displayed a deplorable lack of common sense.

Ever since he came off the gold trail as Kermit Zarley's caddy, John Morgan has been trying to tell his friends that he has adopted a new and serious approach towards golf.

Morgan has been practising diligently, and his chums should be getting the message right about now.

Morgan, who finished "in the money" at the B.C. Open at Uplands last year, served up the big surprise at the weekend by defeating John Russell, 4 and 3, to advance to the quarter-finals of the Vancouver City match-play tournament.

Morgan played approximately to par in defeating the Willingdon Cup team veteran on Russell's home course, Point Grey.

Victoria professional Bill Wakeham also advanced, along with host pro Dick Munn. Wakeham had to go to the 20th hole to down Capilano assistant Gerry Chatelaine while Munn cruised to a 4 and 2 victory aver amateur Herb Fritz.

Another former Victorian, Dave Donaldson bowed to Bill Carrington when the Vancouver pro eagled the 18th hole.

Morgan faces another big test next Sunday, meeting Al Kennedy on the latter's Quilchena course. That's a "bottom-of-the-draw" match, along with Carrington's meeting with Point Grey assistant Doug Reid.

Munn plays Ron Willey while Wakeham goes against former Canadian Amateur finalist Gord MacKenzie in the top half. Conceivably, Munn and Wakeham could meet in the semi-finals.

It's only in the planning stages, but a friendly local tournament may become part of a cross-country competition . . . and charity.

Bert Bevis admits "there's talk" of expanding Hy's invitational tournament. It's a commercial venture, admittedly, but the format, proposed by former Canadian Amateur champion Johnny Johnston, is interesting.

The emphasis will be on two-man teams. Similar tournaments are to be staged in five other Canadian cities where Hy Eisenstadt has established his steak houses. Part of the prize will be an expense-paid trip to a playoff between the regional winners. And the final winners, it has been proposed, may wind up as an entry in Bing Crosby's Clambake at Pebble Beach.

If it proves a success, the steak-house owner will establish a charitable foundation and funnel all proceeds into some worthy charity. The "cause" would wind up to be as large as a hospital for crippled or retarded children.

Buffey in Hospital

ST. PAUL, Minn. (CP) — Referee Vern Buffey, the National Hockey League's senior official, is in hospital with possible cardiac complications.

Buffey was taken to hospital Saturday following the third game of the best-of-seven Stanley Cup quarter-finals between Minnesota North Stars and St. Louis Blues.

He is still undergoing examinations and his condition is described as satisfactory.

Another referee, Art Skov, was taken off weekend Stanley Cup assignments when it was discovered that he had suffered fractured ribs late in the regular NHL season.

Skov is expected to return to the playoffs within a week.

Hank Knew It Was Going But Didn't Know How Far

By The Canadian Press

Hank Aaron clouted his 557th career home run, and third of the season, for Atlanta Braves Monday into the seldom-reached upper deck of Atlanta Stadium while American League slugger Reggie Jackson won for Oakland Athletics with a two-out single.

Aaron's long shot sparked Atlanta to a 9-3 win over San Francisco Giants in one of three National League games and Oakland nipped Milwaukee Brewers 2-1 in the only American League game.

Los Angeles Dodgers stopped Houston Astros 2-0 and San Diego Padres upset Cincinnati Reds 3-1 in the other two NL games. Snow and cold weather at Bloomington, Minn., forced postponement of the only other scheduled AL action between Minnesota Twins and Kansas City Royals.

FOUR-RUN SURGE

In Atlanta's home opener, Sonny Jackson was on second base from a leadoff double when Aaron unloaded to trigger a four-run first-inning Braves rally.

"I didn't know how far it was going," Aaron said. "I just knew it was going out of the ball park."

Aaron produced a third run with a single and Tony Gonzalez delivered three more with a triple and single.

HELD SLIM EDGE

Milwaukee's Marty Pattin was clinging to a 1-0 lead at Oakland when Jackson came to the plate in the seventh with runners on second and third and two out. Instead of giving Jackson the open base with an intentional walk, Brewers manager Dave Bristol called left-hander John O'Donoghue from the bullpen to pitch to the left-hand hitting slugger.

Jackson drilled O'Donoghue's first pitch to centre, driving home the tying and winning runs.

Andy Kosco hit a sixth-inning homer and pitcher Don Sutton drove in a ninth inning insurance run with an infield hit before completing the Dodgers' second straight shutout victory. The Los Angeles right-hander limited the Astros to a second-inning double by Denis Menke and a sixth-inning single by Norm Miller, retiring the last 12 batters he faced.

PITCHED OUT OF JAM

Dave Roberts replaced San Diego starter Al Santorini with the bases loaded in the seventh inning and pitched out of the jam to protect the Padres' two-run lead. Ron Herbel rescued Roberts in the eighth, fanning Tony Perez and retiring Johnny Bench on a fly ball with runners on second and third.

Tommy Dean's homer and a two-run double by Clarence Gaston in the fourth provided the winning margin for Santorini, who yielded just one hit until the seventh.

Early Goals by O'Ree Help Gulls Tie Series

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Willie O'Ree scored twice in the first period Monday night to lead San Diego Gulls to a 6-3 Western Hockey League victory over Vancouver, evening their best-of-seven semi-final playoff series at two games apiece.

O'Ree opened the scoring at 6:32 of the first period on a pass from Warren Hynes, then scored on a breakaway 10 minutes later.

Ed Eerenverth, Len Ronson, Al Nicholson and Kevin O'Shea added the other San Diego goals before a hometown crowd of 7,176.

Len Lunde, Duke Harris and Murray Hall replied for the Canucks.

GARDNER PEPPERED

The fifth game of the series will be played in Vancouver Wednesday, and the two teams return to San Diego Saturday. If a seventh game is needed, it will be in Vancouver next Monday.

The Gulls peppered Vancouver goalie George Gardner with 40 shots and built up a 5-1 lead before Harris and Hall scored for the Canucks early in the third period.

Hockey Reps Play to Draw

Vnacouver Island "A" representative women's field hockey team brought the season to a close Sunday with a 1-1 draw against a Vancouver rep squad at Beacon Hill Park.

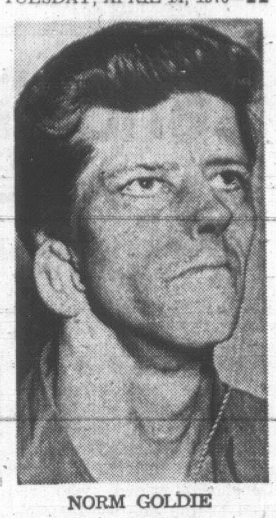

Jill Hawkins scored the lone goal for the Islanders.

Vancouver blanked the Island's "B" team, 1-0.

Oak Bay recently added the Vancouver Island Ladies' Field Hockey Association playoff title to its league crown with a 3-2 win over Mariners.

Regals Win Title

POWELL RIVER (CP) — Powell River Regals won the best-of-five Western Canada intermediate "A" hockey championship with an 8-7 victory over Rosetown, Sask., Monday night. Powell River wrapped up the series, 3-1.

NORM GOLDIE

Vera Lysne, Norm Goldie Pace Bowlers

Norm Goldie and Vera Lysne topped their closest competitors by over 100 points Sunday while winning the Victoria fivepin singles bowling championships.

Goldie, whose low block was 1,537 and high block was 1,569, topped Wally Weinberger by 120 points.

Mrs. Lysne had a 1,702 at Cush's Bowl-a-Golf Spa on Saturday and a 165-pin margin over Sena Guest at the finish.

The championships also served as trials by the VFA to select its team for the Pacific Coast Fivepin championships scheduled to be held in Port Alberni from May 16 to 18.

Qualifying for the squad were Goldie, Weinberger, Jake Jacob, Jack Goldie, Ross Crawford, John Broste, Bill Cool, Mrs. Lysne, Mrs. Guest, June Peddlesden, Peggy Warde, Judy Codyz and Marg Vickery.

The Simca 1204: to drive it is to love it.

A lot of people who should know what they're talking about are saying nice things about the Simca 1204. Listen.

Simca: "... the perfect transportation device. Chrysler's answer to all those who need a car but don't want one."
Car and Driver magazine

"(Simca) has no fancy styling gimmicks, just an aura of good design and workmanship."
Road Test magazine

"Although (Simca) didn't do any damage to our test track, the GLS ran through the quarter-mile in 20.4 seconds at 63.2 mph. Which makes the Simca one of the quickest under-$2000 cars on the market."
Car and Driver magazine

"Time and time again (Simca's) disc/drum anchors pulled us down from 60 mph immediately and without pull. Demanding just 128 feet of room to brake from 60, the Simca was one of the most consistent stoppers we've tried."
Motor Trend magazine

"Small front-wheel-drive cars have established themselves a reputation for good handling, and the 1204 will enhance this even further." (Simca 1204's front-wheel drive overcomes one of the big bugaboos of small rear-engine cars; wind stability at highway speeds).
Road Test magazine

"... We are here to tell you Bonnie and Clyde would still be on the loose if they'd hot-wired a Simca 1204."
Motor Trend magazine

"Where the Simca really earns its stripes is in its dual capacity as a station wagon. Lift up the back door, push down the rear seat, and you have—for a small car—an extraordinary amount of space." "... the Simca 1204 GLS is dollar for dollar just about the best all-round utility value anywhere in the $2,000 class."
Toronto Life magazine

The Simca back-door sedan has been impressing automotive writers since Chrysler introduced it last year. So now that you know what they have to say, why not prove it to yourself. Come in and drive the heck out of one. It'll take it. And spoil you for any other economy car in the process. A strong claim. For a very strong automobile.

Landslide Victory For NDP in Selkirk

WINNIPEG (CP) — The New Democratic Party scored a landslide victory in the Selkirk federal byelection Monday, and both victor and vanquished termed the result a solid vote of confidence in Premier Ed Schreyer's provincial government.

Douglas Rowland, who resigned as the premier's assistant to enter the campaign for Mr. Schreyer's vacant Commons seat, rolled up a better vote percentage in a light turnout than his former boss did in the general election of 1968.

The Liberals, who hoped for signs that Prime Minister Trudeau's government was making inroads on the stubborn Prairie opposition belt, lost ground as did the third-place Conservatives.

With seven of 213 polls still to report as counting ended for the night, Mr. Rowland had 16,435 votes or 57 per cent compared with 6,772 for Liberal Phil Reimer and 4,881 for Progressive Conservative Vera Enns. Social Credjter Robert Luining had 520 votes and independent Travis Fitch 140.

Mr. Schreyer, who abandoned the seat last June to become provincial NDP leader and defeated Walter Weir's Conservative government in a stunning upset, took 45 per cent of the 1968 vote in a four-man race.

Turnout of the 53,400 eligible voters Monday was only 53 per cent against 79 per cent two years ago when fewer people lived in the constituency.

PREMIER HELPS

Mr. Rowland, 29, who admitted throughout the campaign he considered the Schreyer popularity a major asset, in a victory statement termed the result as much an endorsation of the Manitoba NDP government as a "complete rejection" of Prime Minister Trudeau's regime in Ottawa.

Mr. Reimer, also 29, agreed the Schreyer impact was so great that campaigning in the NDP's Selkirk heartland was like "walking into a hornet's nest."

As a new MP, Mr. Rowland set himself two priorities.

First, he will attempt to get the federal government working on a "reasonable alternative" to the wheat acreage reduction program which should be "thrown out or modified drastically."

Secondly, he looks to "a thorough going, useful tax reform for Canada."

His victory leaves standings in the 264-seat Commons at Liberals 153, Conservative 72, NDP 23, Creditiste 13, independent two and one seat vacant.

Firms Admit Mercury Discharge

MONTREAL (CP) — Three Canadian companies admitted Monday they are discharging mercury into the St. Lawrence, St. Maurice and Saguenay rivers.

Spokesmen for all three—Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd., Canadian Industries Ltd. and Standard Chemical Co. Ltd.—said they have no reason to believe the amount of pollution is dangerous and said measures have been taken to reduce mercury discharge to the smallest amounts possible.

The companies were questioned by a reporter after CIL said in a statement it "has adopted measures, over the years, to reduce to a minimum the discharge of mercury . . . from its plants."

No figures for mercury discharge by the three companies were immediately available but spokesmen indicated they do not think it is high.

All three firms use mercury to produce chlorine and caustic soda. Mercury—a heavy silver-colored metal that remains liquid at room temperature—is used in the electrical process which separates chlorine from sodium chloride and leaves caustic soda.

Some mercury is lost and discharged in the process.

All the companies said they are continuing research on the problem and Eric Hamilton, CIL vice-president, said "all necessary precautions" are taken at the company's three plants in Shawinigan, Que., on the St. Maurice River and at Cornwall, Ont., and Hamilton.

Bury Separatists, Vows Bertrand

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand promised Monday that his governing Union Nationale party will bury the separatist Parti Quebecois in the April 29 Quebec general election and soon after started digging what he hopes will be Rene Levesque's political grave.

Elsewhere, Liberal Leader Robert Bourassa defended himself against Union Nationale accusations of nepotism and Mr. Levesque, the Parti Quebecois chief, said he detects "an undercurrent of change" in the electorate.

Mr. Levesque wound up a four-day tour of 17 ridings at a rally attended by 3,000 persons in Cap-de-la-Madeleine, about 75 miles northeast of Montreal in St. Maurice riding.

It was the biggest turnout in the 19 meetings of the tour.

Mr. Bertrand made his burial pledge to one of about 20 students who loudly demonstrated their support for the Parti Quebecois during the premier's campaign visit to a college at Hauterive on the north shore of the St. Lawrence River about 325 miles northeast of Quebec City.

RELUCTANT HANDSHAKE

After the 19-year-old student, who directed the demonstration, reluctantly shook the premier's hand and extended his "sincere sympathy," Mr. Bertrand said with a smile: "We will watch over your body at your April 29 funeral."

Later, at the nearby port city of Sept-Iles, Mr. Bertrand delivered his fiercest campaign attack yet on Mr. Levesque and his party, accusing the separatist leader of political opportunism.

Meanwhile, at Shawinigan Sud in St. Maurice riding 72 miles north of Montreal, Mr. Levesque told about 650 supporters he has "never seen an undercurrent of change as strong as the one this year."

He described Quebecers as "periodical" in their political behavior and said: "The need for change strikes us every 10 years."

He said Quebec voters should take advantage of the April 29 general election to make known their desire for change because "we don't know whether we'll have another chance" in the next election.

DEFENDS STAND

And at La Malbaie in Charlevoix riding 77 miles northeast of Quebec City, Mr. Bourassa told about 1,200 persons that he asked Claude Simard to run as Liberal candidate in Richelieu riding because Quebec needs him, not because Mr. Simard is his brother-in-law.

He was replying to accusations to nepotism made the previous day by Premier Bertrand in reference to Mr. Simard's candidacy.

Mr. Bourassa said it is normal for a political party to choose the best candidates and the best administrators available to effect solutions to existing problems and praised his brother-in-law as "a young, competent and serious administrator."

6 of North America's greatest holiday tours are right here in British Columbia.

Enjoy at least one this year.

The fabulous Pacific Coast Circle

This magnificent circle tour combines some of our finest interior scenery plus an unforgettable coastal cruise. If you start in Vancouver, the trip opens with a car-ferry cruise across Georgia Strait to Vancouver Island. Then, driving north to Kelsey Bay, you can connect with the M.V. Queen of Prince Rupert for a 20-hour cruise along the sheltered Inside Passage. The trip is more than 300 miles past deepset fjords and tiny fishing villages set in a lush panorama of green mountain forests and deep blue sea. At Prince Rupert, you drive off and follow Highway 16 through a region famed for Indian totem carvings and fabulous opportunities for lake-and-stream fishing, camping and the good life outdoors. To complete the circle, swing south at Prince George through the Cariboo and Fraser Canyon, then head west through the Fraser Valley to Vancouver. Of course, the trip can also be made in the opposite direction, beginning at any of several points including Prince George and Prince Rupert.

The great new Yellowhead Route

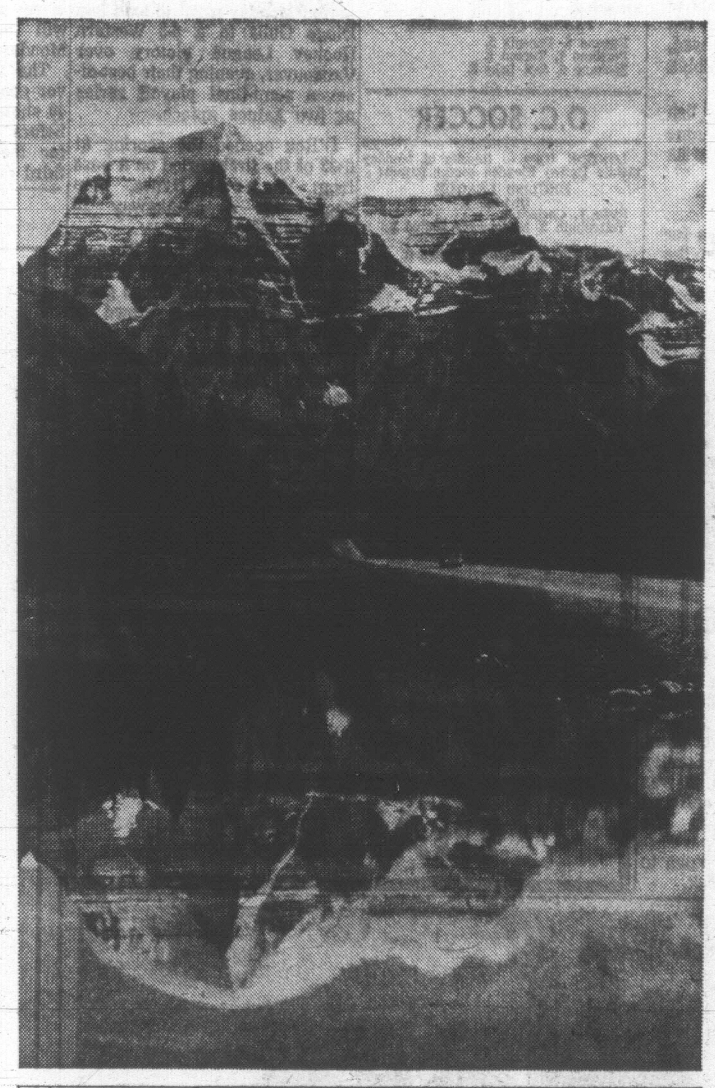

This recently modernized route offers great new circle tour opportunities. You can begin in Prince George and travel a smooth ribbon of highway southeast, past the headwaters of the Fraser River and through spectacular Yellowhead Pass . . . all the way to Jasper; then swing south and return home by way of the Rogers Pass. Or, drive north from Kamloops on Highway 5 through a region of fabulous fishing lakes to Tête Jaune Cache (named for the original "yellow head", a blond trapper who entered the area in 1820) . . . then travel east through Yellowhead Pass. Either way you'll enjoy magnificent mountain scenery, capped by towering Mount Robson, highest peak in the Canadian Rockies. This year the Yellowhead route will be discovered by visitors from across the continent — as a British Columbia resident, you're in a perfect position to enjoy its scenic wonders first.

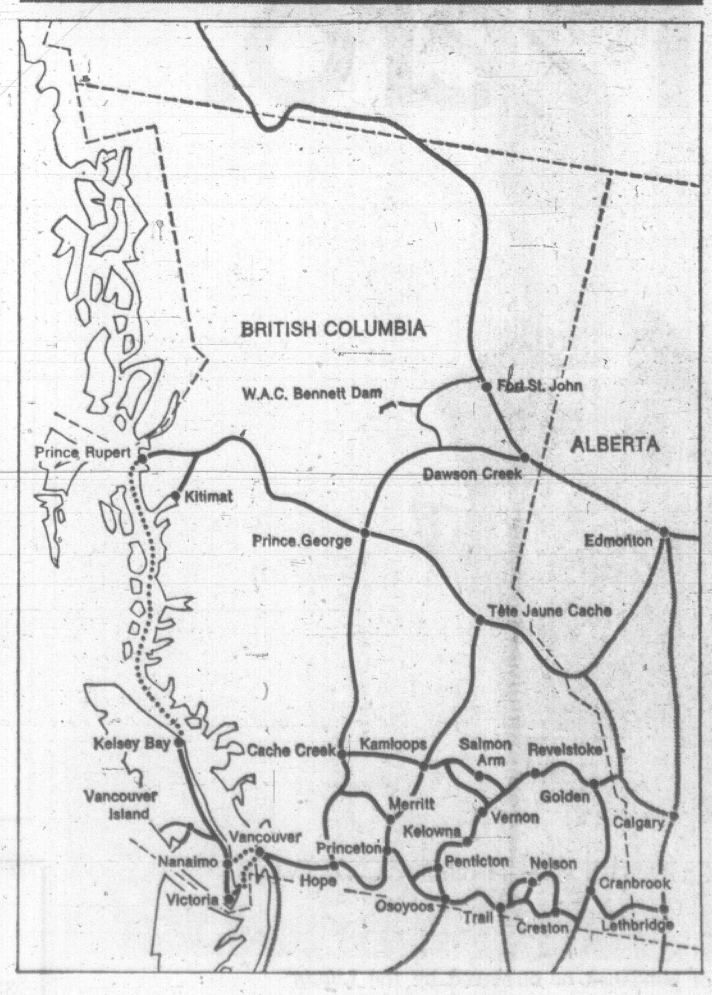

Follow the Rogers Pass to scenic adventure

Acclaimed one of the world's finest scenic routes, the Rogers Pass section of the Trans-Canada Highway traverses majestic mountain terrain in its 92-mile sweep between Revelstoke and Golden. The towering peaks of the Selkirk Range . . . sheer rock faces capped by enormous crests of snow . . . vast green valleys appearing suddenly in the mountainscape. A memorable experience in itself, the Rogers Pass also makes possible several exciting circle tours. Travelling north from Kamloops or Banff, you can connect with the newly completed Yellowhead Pass route. Or you can swing south from Golden or Revelstoke for a grand circle that includes both the Kootenay and Okanagan regions. And of course, as part of the Trans-Canada Highway, the Rogers Pass can be part of a much larger "circle" encompassing areas like the Fraser Canyon and the Cariboo.

The spectacular Okanagan-Kootenay Loop

A holiday in the Okanagan or Kootenays can include a circle tour of endless variety. Suppose you begin in Penticton: Driving north you'll see fruit-laden orchards rising above the blue waters of Okanagan Lake, pass charming lakeshore resorts and visit the major centres of Kelowna and Vernon. Then, looping northeast to Revelstoke, the scene becomes more rugged—you're on the Rogers Pass route, viewing some of the continent's most spectacular mountain vistas. Next it's south from Golden, along the western rim of the Rockies through the resort centres of Radium, Fairmont and Windermere, and past the headwaters of the Columbia River — just the beginning of unique attractions in the Kootenays. Historic Fort Steele, the great dams of the Columbia River system, exciting sport fishing, countless opportunities to camp and picnic amid lakes and mountains — it's a refreshing holiday combination. The final leg of this circle is along Highway 3, wending just north of the International Boundary back to Osoyoos in the southern Okanagan.

The Peace River country and beyond

The Hart Highway is the route to our great northern region. Beginning in Prince George it sweeps northeast nearly 200 miles through magnificent unspoiled territory, traversing the Rocky Mountains on the way to Dawson Creek. Here, at Mile 0 on the Alaska Highway, you're on the threshold of unique scenic adventure. Beyond the rolling grain fields of the Peace lies a region where nature is truly supreme. Sparsely settled, inhabited by a rich variety of wildlife, the great mountain-and-forest country adjoining the Alaska Highway offers endless opportunity for camping, fishing and the enjoyment of natural beauty. Two provincial campsites are located along this route, but the distances are vast and it's well to plan your trip with special care. Returning, take a short side trip northwest of Fort St. John and visit the site of the W.A.C. Bennett Dam, one of the great man-made wonders of our province. From here, you can drive directly to the Hart Highway for the trip southwest to the central interior.

Exploring in Cariboo country

Many tours of British Columbia lead through the Cariboo . . . and even travelling nonstop from Prince George to Cache Creek you'll enjoy a rich abundance of the region's special charm. But to truly savor the Cariboo, you should branch off the main highway. Then you'll find guest ranches where the flavor of the Old West still lives, and forest-rimmed lakes where the trout are ready and eager to bite. Swing west at Williams Lake and the scene becomes increasingly rugged as you enter the Chilcotin. Turn east at Quesnel and the view is different again: This is the route to Barkerville, the restored Gold Rush town that's worth a trip in itself . . . and also the way to Bowron Lake Park, where campers and canoeists enjoy a 100-mile circuit of lakes and streams in the midst of unspoiled mountain greenery. Whether you come for camping, ranch life or a few days of exploring, you'll find the Cariboo a low-key sort of place where relaxation is the only rule.

Council Denies Aid to Rugby

DUNCAN — Ald. Dick Benzies led members of city council Monday night to defeat a request by Cowichan Rugby Club for funds "at the risk of sounding like a broken record."

Benzies has taken a tough attitude towards requests for donations and said he had yet to find a taxpayer who was in favor of "giving away taxpayers' money."

The rugby club asked the city to be host to a luncheon when Middlesex council plays them in an exhibition game here May 15 as part of the B.C. Festival of Sports.

The club president in a letter said expenses would amount to about $2,500 with only $1,000 expected from ticket sales.

Ald. Allan Kerr, who moved that the city donate $50 towards the club, said Benzies wasn't sounding like a broken record, "just the other side with a different version."

He did not see how the city could turn down the request while granting others especially since the publicity garnered for the city was worth far more than the money involved.

Ald. Tom Kilpatrick said the city had been "more than generous to the Cowichan Rugby Club. There's a lot of taxpayers' money that has gone into Macadam Park." The park is where the scheduled match will be played.

Ald Rois Harder said North Cowichan municipal council already had turned down a similar request and it is "not our duty to do more."

"We've got our door constantly open," Benzies said.

He said the sponsors of a recent basketball tournament here had gone into the hole but had raised their own money to get out of it.

"This has got to stop — who's coming tomorrow?"

Chamber Signs Up Duncan

DUNCAN — City council Monday night approved in principal a proposed Chamber of Commerce sign that would help put Duncan and the Cowichan valley on the map.

A mockup of the sign, presented by chamber member Hall MacKenzie welcomed travelers to Duncan and the valley and also advertises in old English-style lettering the Cowichan Valley Forest Museum.

The special lettering for the museum brought criticism from Ald. Allan Kerr who thought it was free advertising which the lettering highlighted even more than Duncan.

"I'm in agreement with the sign," Kerr said, "but with the free advertising the museum society should help pay for the sign." He also didn't think the sign was large enough.

READY SOON

Ald. Tom Kilpatrick said a "welcome to Duncan" sign would not stop traffic but advertising of the tourist attraction would.

Mackenzie said the four-foot-by-eight-foot sign, to be erected near the Silver Bridge just south of town, would be ready in about two weeks. The chamber was amenable to any changes recommended by a chamber adviser.

He said North Cowichan council would be asked to approve a similar sign for posting near Herd Road on the Trans-Canada Highway about one mile north of the city.

Oyster Farmer Settles With Crofton Pulp Mill

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver Island oyster farmer has made an out-of-court settlement with a pulp mill he claimed had destroyed his oyster beds.

The settlement was announced in British Columbia Supreme Court in Vancouver Monday. The amount involved was not disclosed.

Peter Limberis, 51, of Ladysmith, had filed suit seeking damages against B.C. Forest Products Ltd. claiming that the company's pulp mill at Crofton had pulluted his oyster beds.

Limberis is part owner and manager of Thetis Island Oyster Co. which leases about 180 acres of oyster beds, one-third of which are near the Crofton mill.

LOST FATNESS

In claiming damages, Liberis said the last time he took oysters off the property was in 1957, the year the pulp mill began production "and after that they lost all their fatness."

He said about 2,000 tons of oysters remained on the Crofton lease.

"You could leave them there a million years and they'll never be any good."

Contacted at his home in Ladysmith, Limberis said he was "very happy" with the settlement but was not "at liberty to say" how much the pulp company paid him.

The settlement came two days before the case was to be presented before the Supreme Court of British Columbia.

Limberis said the pulp firm was "very touch to deal with right up to the end." He had been fighting the case for more than three years.

His plans for the money were to purchase oyster leases to replace those lost at Crofton.

"They are pretty hard to find so I may have to do a lot of looking around."

Best Time for Hospital Now Cowichan District Informed

DUNCAN—The Cowichan Valley Regional District will never be in a better position to build an extended care unit, hospital board chairman John Hulbert told a meeting Monday night.

Hulbert told the regional board and the hospital board the $1,076,555 unit would serve the entire region from Mill Bay to the Greater Ladysmith area.

Special area director Bruce Devitt said the board had to act swiftly and any differences between the hospital board's plans for a concrete building and the BCHIS ruling on wooden buildings should be resolved soon.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark told the board last week in a letter that the government would only grant $655,000 toward the total cost.

MAY REFERENDUM

Regional board chairman Alex Smith said nevertheless the mill rate increase for the entire region will be only .64 mills. Hospital administrator Ken Noton said at a news conference last week that it was hoped a referendum could be held in May.

Dr. Joseph Pawlowski, representing the medical staff on the hospital board, said the extended care unit was as much a provincial facility as a regional facility.

He was against earlier suggestions that the fourth floor shell of the present hospital be developed for extended care.

Hulbert also pointed out that the government had been adamant that the shell should never be used for anything but acute-care accommodation. One wing of the hospital already has been taken over temporarily by extended-care patients and the acute-care hospital is overcrowded.

Kinsman Gets Life Ticket

DUNCAN — A Kinsman with 16 years' perfect attendance at meetings has been awarded a life membership in the all-Canadian service club.

Frank Fraser of Duncan Kinsmen was given the award at a mini-convention held during the weekend. At one time he was president of the Duncan club and deputy governor of Vancouver Island zone.

About 175 Kinsmen and their wives attended the 50th anniversary two-day convention from Ladysmith, Lake Cowichan, Victoria, Vic-Van Isle and Sidney.

Exploration Planned

MONTREAL (CP) — The first three members of a 12-man McGill University expedition left Montreal Monday for Axel Heiberg Island, this year's location for the annual investigation of Arctic environmental conditions. The team will explore the remote island, 2,500 miles north of Montreal and 600 miles from the North Pole, for three summer months.

Mayor Complains Fuel Trucks 'Scaring People Out of Wits'

By ED GOULD

DUNCAN — Truck drivers for Ideal Fuel Co. Ltd. were criticized by Mayor Jim Quaife Monday night for "involving themselves in accidents, scaring people out of their wits and in general not qualifying as safe drivers."

Quaife said he had witnessed bad driving antics by a driver for the Victoria company. He said some drivers for the firm already had been warned by police and others had been involved in accidents in the area.

"The time is past when we should have to put up with speeding trucks involving themselves in accidents, scaring people out of their wits and in general not qualifying as safe drivers," Quaife said.

'NEED SPECIFICS'

He asked council to approve sending a letter to the firm protesting its drivers' driving habits and that a copy of the letter be sent to the police.

Ald. Rois Hardre said he couldn't approve such a move until he had more information about the accidents the firm had allegedly been involved in.

"We need specifics," he said.

Ald. Dick Benzies offered to supply a specific incident. He said he was driving behind an Ideal Fuel Co. Ltd. truck on April 9.

"They had no cover over the truck so chips were flying around worse than a snowstorm. I had to put on the windshield wipers to see the road."

Hardy Singh, manager of the fuel company, today declined comment on the council's allegations.

9 IN MEMORIAM

ELLIOTT — In loving memory of husband and son Robert Norman Elliott, died April 13, 1968.
—Ever remembered by his parents Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Elliott and wife and family.

HICK — In loving memory of our Mother, Alice Rebecca, who passed away April 14, 1968.
To memory ever dear.
—The family.

ROBINSON—In loving memory of Reta Robinson who passed away 3 years ago today.
Nothing but memories as we journey on,
Longing for a smile from a loved one gone;
None knows the depth of our deep regret,
But we remember when others forget.
—Mother, June, Martin and Wayne.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY SPECIAL. 7:30 p.m., Channel 7. "Holland Against the Sea." Interesting glimpse of Holland's constant battle with the North Sea. Cameras ignore such sights as quaint city charm, tulips and cheese, to create a feeling of water. A Dutch sailing race, a rescue at sea in stormy weather, black and white footage of the great '53 storm, and the Delta Project's damming of the country's southwestern area, are the high points of the hour. Dutch directors and cameramen also take time to catch local faces, like a girl crying in her excitement over Santa Claus' arrival by boat; an old man trudging along a dike; and little boys bravely screwing up their faces during swimming lessons—all of which indicates a note of maturity in the National Geographic Society's improving series.

★ ★ ★

JOHNNY CASH. 8:30 p.m., Channel 8. Bob Hope makes a rare appearance on a country music stage. Johnny's other guests include Mama Cass Elliot and Kenny Rogers and the First Edition. Bob Hope does a monologue about the Nashville Sound, then recalls his adventures as a youth. Country churches are the subject of Johnny's Ride This Train segment.

★ ★ ★

THE MOD SQUAD. 7:30 p.m., Channels 4 and 8. "The Girl in Chair Nine" (repeat). A good yarn about an abduction and the involvement of a parapsychologist with keen extra-sensory perception. Cesare Danova is very effective as the attractive seer who keeps forecasting events before they happen, with Linc (Clarence Williams III) trying to trap him by impersonating a chauffeur. The action is well paced and the Danova character remains believable throughout.

RED SKELTON. 8:30 p.m., Channel 7 (repeat). Red and Walter Brennan face a showdown playing a couple of sheriffs who seek the hand of a plump, wealthy widow, Peggy Rhea, and then both hire a gunman to do their dirty work. Mr. Brennan has no trouble keeping up with Red and he hasn't lost any of his zip. In the Silent Spot, Red is in Africa trying to outsmart a gorilla, and the musical spots are covered by The Lettermen and the Jimmy Joyce Singers.

★ ★ ★

REACH FOR THE TOP. 8 p.m., Channel 2. Oak Bay Senior Secondary School and Mount Douglas Senior Secondary clash in a zone final contest.

★ ★ ★

CBS NEWS. 10 p.m., Channel 7. "60 Minutes." Three reports of interest make up the fare on the CBS magazine-of-the-air tonight. "Hello, Mrs. Brown, This Is Franz Liszt" involves the unique tale of a London mystic, a woman with no musical knowledge, who claims that the music she is producing is "dictated" to her by such composers as Liszt, Bach, Beethoven and Brahms. "We're Drowning in Garbage," more fact than fantasy it seems, is a study of the ever-increasing volume of garbage we are collecting and the need for more sophisticated methods of disposal than we have been using to date. As for the third, "Do We Believe in the Bill of Rights?"—it offers the results of a sample test in which 1,136 adults were asked via telephone to give their opinions on the first 10 amendments to the United States Constitution.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

5:30: Channel 12: The Lone Ranger (1956 western). Clayton Moore, Jay Silverheels. Feature version of popular perennial radio and TV show with a more elaborate production.

8:30: Channel 4; The Over-the-Hill Gang (1969 western). Pat O'Brien, Walter Brennan, a Spoof of shoot-em-ups featuring a who's-who of character actors and the fastest cliches in the west.

9:00: Channel 5: The D.A.: Murder One (1969 drama). Robert Conrad, Howard Duff, Diane Baker. Time is of the essence as a deputy tries to pin a murder rap on an attractive nurse.

11:30: Channel 7: This Woman is Dangerous (1952 drama). Joan Crawford, Dennis Morgan, David Brian. Miss Crawford plays the role of a woman who finds love after she's been "through the mill."

11:35: Channel 2: The Last Days of Pompeii (1959 adventure). Steve Reeves, Christine Kaufmann. A winner for geyser and volcano students—some good photographic effects.

12:01: Channel 6: When Worlds Collide (1951 science fiction). Barbara Rush, Richard Derr. The race is on to build a rocketship in order to leave earth when two astral bodies head in its direction.

THE SALESMAN
What can the salesman do for the buyer?
He will bring to his relationship with the prospective buyer his knowledge of the present real estate market and the properties available, and will apply this knowledge to meeting the needs of the buyer in a spirit of professional responsibility. He will present homes available truthfully and honestly. A good real estate deal is a good deal for both buyer and seller, and the competent salesman will endeavor to match needs with the homes offered in the best interests of both parties.
When buying, work WITH a good salesman, and give him the opportunity of helping you.
Our Salesmen are good salesmen.

Board Sticks to Referendum Instead of Renting School

DUNCAN — After debating it for two weeks and making a thorough investigation, Cowichan school board decided Monday night not to rent Fairbridge School.

Trustee Margaret Whittaker, the only trustee who voted in favor of rental, had suggested last meeting that serious consideration be given to purchasing the former private school now empty on an estate about five miles south of here.

Mrs. Whittaker said the nine-room building with its excellent playing fields would be an alternative to the building referendum coming up April 18.

$120,000 COST

District schools superintendent Eric Lewis and maintenance superintendent George Routley both presented reports on the school.

Routley said the total cost to renovate the Fairbridge building for permanent acquisition would be about $110,500, including installation of a hot air furnace. It would cost about $120,000, including installation of a hot water heating system.

In comparison, Routley said, it would cost about $211,000 to build a new eight-room school with an activity room and all the extras, excluding the site.

Trustees Stan Turner and Dave Bradbury spoke sharply against renting the building. Chairman Dave Haywood said however a purchase price from the owners was being awaited. He said the land would be an asset to the district in 10 or 15 years.

Fashion Show To Precede Pool Vote

DUNCAN — Duncan Jaycees will stage a parade and swim fashion show on city parking lot number two on April 24, the day before the swimming pool bylaw comes up for a vote.

Brian Lawrance chairman of the Jaycee parade committee, told city council the Jaycees had decided on the parade and fashion show to indicate their interest in promoting the bylaw.

The pioneer Park pool will cost about $400,000. Operation Recreation, comprised of a large number of community organizations, has already raised about $90,000.

Ald. Rois Harder suggested the Jaycees prepare a temporary sign to inform drivers that the city lot would be closed between noon and 6:30 p.m. on that date and indicate where other free parking was available.

GOOD WORK

Ald. Martin Lukaitis said the Jaycees were to be congratulated for their support of the pool and Mayor Jim Quaife asked for a vote of thanks.

Later in the meeting Ald. Dick Benzies said council was not doing enough to support the campaign by sitting back and "giving it lip service." He suggested members join the dinner speaking circuit and to answer any questions taxpayers had to ask about the project.

Grieving Father Shoots Man

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — A father whose 10-year-old son was killed by a truck last fall shot the driver dead during a foot chase down a street Monday, police reported.

Police said Eugene Friedman, 45, a California highway department employee, had sought to have the driver, Lou T. Watts, 37, prosecuted after Ethan Friedman was killed when bicycling. The district attorney's office held there was insufficient evidence.

Watts was accused of driving with a revoked licence, however, and was waiting to appear in municipal court when Friedman came up and began talking to him.

Friedman drew a pistol, police said, and after he began shooting Watts fled into the street. Friedman followed, gun blazing and shot him dead, police said. A stray bullet hit police Sgt. John Carden, 35, in the leg.

Friedman surrendered without resistance. He was booked for investigation of murder.

Gas Station Crackdown Proposed

A recommendation that Victoria city council tighten regulations governing service station construction will go to the Advisory Planning Commission Thursday.

The crackdown suggestion came from Ald. Ove Witt and quickly won the support of community planning committee chairman Ald. Peter Pollen.

At present, most of Victoria's downtown area is zoned to permit construction of gas stations without reference to rezoning or city councul.

Witt has suggested that service stations be singled out for a single category under zoning regulations to make it impossible to build outside special areas without the express permission of the APC and city council.

Henderson Critics May Face Questions

OTTAWA (CP) — Two cabinet ministers are likely to be summoned before a Commons committee to explain their public attack on Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson, keeper of the government spending books for Parliament.

Alfred D. Hales, Conservative MP for Wellington and chairman of the public accounts committee, said Monday night in an interview he will call a meeting of the committee's steering section in a day or two to discuss the matter.

He declined further comment. But other committee members said the upshot is likely to be committee appearances by Donald Macdonald, president of the Privy Council and government house leader, and C. M. Drury, president of the treasury board.

Both ministers have criticized Mr. Henderson on radio and television, though not in the Commons, and have suggested that the auditor-general has been commenting on government policy instead of sticking to his book-keeping.

Mr. Hales is in a delicate situation. He is the only opposition chairman of a Commons committee. Furthermore, the Liberals tried to oust him last year in favor of Harold Winch, veteran NDP member for Vancouver East.

WINCH DECLINES

The plot, with James Walker, parliamentary secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau, acting as chief engineer, misfired when Mr. Winch refused to have anything to do with it.

With their Commons majority, the Liberals could remove Mr. Hales at any time.

As far as that goes, they could bring in a bill to remove Mr. Henderson, but there is no indication of any such move.

In the Commons Monday, T. C. Douglas, NDP leader, accused Mr. Macdonald and Mr. Drury of trying to intimidate Mr. Henderson, an official of Parliament itself and not of the government.

Mr. Douglas invited the government to take its criticism of Mr. Henderson before the public accounts committee or introduce a motion to sack him. Such a motion would have to have Parliament's approval to be carried out.

ATTEMPT APOLOGY

Gerald W. Baldwin, Conservative house leader, tried to introduce a motion regretting the "unprecedented and arrogant" threats against the auditor-general.

Stanley Knowles, NDP house leader, attempted to bring in a motion reaffirming Parliament's confidence in Mr. Henderson.

Both these motions needed unanimous consent for them to be debated. The Liberals opposed any debate.

During the question period, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked whether the criticism by the ministers of Mr. Henderson represented government policy.

Mr. Trudeau said that when Mr. Henderson entered the field of policy he was "impinging on the rights of the opposition who perhaps don't fulfil that function very well."

CITES INSTANCE

Mr. Trudeau said one area of government policy commented on by the auditor-general was the cabinet order dealing with the Canada-U.S. auto pact.

George Hees, former Conservative trade minister, said Mr. Henderson has never criticized government policy. The Liberals just didn't like him criticizing government expenditures.

Mr. Trudeau said in reply to Mr. Stanfield that the government will introduce legislation to strengthen the office of the auditor-general. He gave no details.

The prime minister agreed with Mr. Douglas' contention that the government considers Mr. Henderson invaded the field of policy with his criticism of federal payments of more than $180,000,000 to Canadian car manufacturers.

Mr. Douglas said Mr. Henderson had criticized the fact the government was paying the car companies without any statutory authority from Parliament.

Dropout Reasons Outlined

Domestic conflict is the main cause of students withdrawing from school, Greater Victoria school trustees were told Monday.

Ted Callbeck, director of special educational services, was commenting on a report from his division that showed withdrawals from district schools this year are up considerably over last year.

From September to March withdrawals totalled 346, as compared with 220 over the same period last year.

Callbeck listed three kinds of domestic trouble:

- Conflict between parents, where they have separated or should separate;
- "High tension" situation, where students are striving to live up to high parental expectations;
- Child-parent conflicts of ideals or life-styles.

The report on withdrawals contained a number of other reasons why there has been an increase over last year.

Tightening of the job situation locally has caused a number of families to leave the district.

Enrolment was up by 450 students in secondary schools in September.

And reporting of withdrawals is more accurate because schools are keeping better records and because of a new Family Allowance reporting form.

'Parasites' Face Jail

BUCHAREST (Reuters) — Romania has passed new laws to stamp out prostitution, gambling, begging and other "parasitic" activities, it was reported Monday. The Romanian news agency Agerpres said state council decrees lay down jail sentences of up to six months and-or fines of up to 3,000 lei (about $168) for offenders who "refuse to join in a useful activity and lead a parasitic life. . . ."

Thirsty 19s, 20s Told to 'Watch It'

People between the ages of 19 and 21 were cautioned today to "watch it" if they plan to take advantage of their new right to purchase alcoholic beverages under B.C.'s new age-of-majority legislation.

The law comes into effect Wednesday.

Chief J. F. Gregory said people in that age group who drive cars and are found guilty of impaired driving would be treated as adults "as they expect to be."

But he didn't anticipate a rush on taverns and cocktail bars.

It is estimated there are between 5,000 persons in Greater Victoria between 19 and 21.

CELEBRATIONS

The chief said no extra precautions have been planned in the event of celebrations.

"For many people in that age group, it won't be anything new because they have been drinking," he said. "The only difference is that they will be able to drink with a free conscience."

Hotelmen didn't know if there would be a rush of business.

There are about 30 beer parlors and cocktail bars in Greater Victoria.

They were more concerned about being able to identify people in taverns who were below the age of 19.

As one hotel manager pointed out, sometimes there is not much apparent difference between 17, 18 and 19 year-olds.

PROOF OF AGE

John Berger, vice-president of the B.C. Hotelmen's Association, said that proof of age would be demanded in any case where the waiter is doubtful.

"If a young man is challenged a to his age, he will have to produce legal proof that he is 19 or over," he said.

Berger said the liquor board should provide identification cards for borderline customers.

Job Course Pays Off

Between 350 and 400 people have taken a Creative Job Search course sponsored by Canada Manpower, Greater Victoria school board and the Kiwanis Club, and 73 per cent of them have found jobs.

Jack Dalgleish, the board's director of adult education, told trustees Monday the federal department will probably underwrite the cost of the course if it is continued.

He also said someone should make a film of the instructors — Doug Yearwood and Ed Hudson of Manpower — for the benefit of unemployed persons who don't get a chance to take the course.

Foul Weather Delays Arrival Of Cruise Ship

Foul weather in the Pacific has delayed the arrival of the cruise ship West Star until Wednesday morning.

Leaving San Francisco, the ship was due to arrive in Victoria at 8 a.m. today.

Members of the Seafarers' International Union plan to picket the ship. The union accuses the owners, Westlines of Seattle, of a lockout and says 150 Canadian seamen are to be replaced by a foreign crew.

The SIU picketed three other ships of the company while they were in refit, one in Victoria and two at North Vancouver.

The Victoria Vistiors Bureau will greet the West Star when she arrives at the CPR wharf Wednesday.

SHIP REFITS APPROVED

McKay-Cormack Ltd., has been awarded a $16,489 federal contract for maintenance and repairs to the Coast Guard ship Alexander.

The supply and services department also awarded Yarrows Ltd. a $16,591 contract for the refit of CCGS Sir James Douglas.

Many Britons Freed of Taxes

LONDON (CP) — Roy Jenkins, chancellor of the exchequer, eliminated taxes for about 2,800,000 Britons today in a budget that sprinkled concessions over a wide area.

He increased tax allowances for single and married persons, boosted allowances for old-age pensioners and surtax-payers and cut the central bank rate to seven per cent from 7½ in move seen as giving the economy a mild boost.

But he did not reduce the standard rate of income tax, which has remained unchanged for 11 years, and made no concessions in purchasing tax or instalment buying.

It was a budget disappointing to many observers. Jenkins had been widely expected to use the budget to spread largesse as pre-election bait. But while he spoke of the country's growing international economic strength, he still aimed at hefty government revenues.

For importers, and in effect exporters from Canada and other countries, the long-criticized import deposit scheme is modified. Starting next month, the six-month deposit which must be left with the government before goods can be imported is reduced to 30 per cent of the value of the goods from the current 40 per cent.

This scheme, to discourage imports, was introduced in November, 1968, with the deposit fixed at 50 per cent.

Accompanying the lower bank rate, which in turn, may make credit costs easier, Jenkins also announced that bank lending will be increased by five per cent next year with the amount of money circulating in the country increasing by about £900,000,000 compared with the reduction of £200,000,000 last year. The pound is worth approximately $2.60 in Canadian funds.

The standard rate of income tax is eight shillings threepence in the pound of 41.25 per cent. This rate remains but the non-taxable allowance for a single person is raised to £325, up £70, and for married persons it goes to £465, up £90.

The higher range of surtax, normally applied on that amount above £2,000 a year, will be applied only on £2,500 or more for those living on unearned income—mainly from interest and dividends.

The higher surtax allowance knocks about 180,000 payers off the surtax rolls.

PLANS MINI-BUDGET?

But while he announced tax cuts that amounted to a modest £200,000,000 a year, there was a general feeling among financial observers that he is holding back and that there might be a mini-budget before the next election, expected by many commentators to take place next fall.

Jenkins warned about the impact of the rising wage demands on the economy and said that to inflate home demand for goods at this stage would be folly.

However, observers felt that the reduction of the central bank rate to seven per cent—compared with a crisis rate of eight per cent that existed before March 5—may in itself stimulate home markets, with borrowers more willing to look for credit because of lower interest charges.

Among minor budget changes, the betting tax goes up to six per cent from five, except for betting at the track, where the five-per-cent tax on proceeds remains.

The two-pence tax on cheques will be abolished when the country switches to the currency decimal system next February.

Current restrictions on British overseas investments remain, along with existing foreign-exchange controls. Jenkins said the concentration must be on expanding investment at home.

Aussie Yacht 'Promising'

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Australia's new America's Cup hope, Gretel II, has begun sailing trials with the original Gretel, the unsuccessful challenger of 1962.

Gretel II, so the experts say, has shown up as a promising challenger.

The 12-metre yacht has an over-all length of 65 feet, beam of 12 feet, draught of nine feet and weighs about 30 tons. Her 86-foot all-aluminum mast carries about 2,000 square feet of sail when sailing to windward.

Gretel II is to be shipped to Newport, R.I., in late May or early June. She has to fight out an elimination series with the French 12-metre yacht France in August for the right to challenge the American defender in September.

Defences Ordered For Ring Champs

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Three Canadian boxing titles must be defended within 90 days, R. B. Pearson, national commissioner of the Canadian Professional Boxing Federation, has announced.

They are held by featherweight Rocky MacDougall, Sydney, N.S.; bantamweight Jackie Burke, Saint John, and junior lightweight Les Gillis, New Waterford, N.S.

Groom, 25 Horses Die in Stable Fire

HOMEWOOD, Ill. (AP) — One man was killed and 25 thoroughbred horses were destroyed Sunday when fire raced through the stable at Washington Park race track. A body found in the ashes of the horse barn was identified as Michael Aspreiker of Des Moines, Iowa, a groom for the James Martin Stables of Corsicana, Tex.

Four Provinces In Sweeps Gamble

By JOHN CUNNINGHAM
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Four of Canada's provinces were quick to get on the bandwagon after the federal government announced amendments to the Criminal Code effective Jan. 1 permitting them to license and regulate lotteries and other gambling operations.

In Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan charitable and religious organizations have been authorized to hold the lotteries under quickly established provincial regulations.

Quebec has already embarked on a series of provincial lotteries which it hopes will net the province an annual $18,000,000 and major sweepstakes are planned for Manitoba and Alberta.

A Canadian Press Cross-Canada Survey shows that in five provinces—Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Alberta and British Columbia—no definite stand has been taken but the matter is under study.

In Newfoundland there is no legislation governing the lotteries. Premier Joseph Smallwood has said repeatedly there will be no lotteries in that province.

Under the new Criminal Code amendments, municipalities are barred from holding lotteries with one exception—if the municipality is raising funds for charitable organizations or community purposes a licence can be issued.

STILL UNDER STUDY

Nova Scotia, while considering the new legislation, has no plans for provincially sponsored lotteries.

In Prince Edward Island, Attorney-General J. Elmer Blanchard says there are no regulations dealing with lotteries, although "we'll have to consider them eventually."

He said there are laws forbidding raffles and such games of chance, but the laws are not strictly enforced.

Justice Minister Bernard Jean of New Brunswick said his government is still studying the new gaming legislation and indicated that there is no plan at present for a provincially sponsored lottery.

In Quebec—where much of the recent controversy surrounding lotteries began—Montreal's famous lottery-style "voluntary tax" scheme went out of business as soon as the provincial government stepped in under the amendments to the Criminal Code.

But the scheme was not halted before it had netted the city a profit of more than $10,000,000 and about 3,000 prize winners had taken home $3,295,000 in prize money. Gross receipts for $2 tickets totalled $17,076,314.

Prizes totalled $180,000 a month—from a top award of $100,000 to a low of $250. Prize winners totalled 153 each month.

QUEBEC BEGINS SERIES

Quebec is far from lamenting the loss of Montreal's voluntary tax scheme and already the provincial government has undertaken a series of lotteries.

The first monthly draw was held in March with a grand prize of $125,000 and a total of $250,000 in prize money. Tickets sold for $2.

Now that the power for future lotteries lies with the provincial government such operations are in the hands of two organizations—the Regis des Loteries et Courses du Quebec and the Societe d'Exploitation des Loteries et Courses du Quebec.

The first organization will supervise races in Quebec and give out lottery licences authorizing persons to conduct and administer lotteries.

The second, the government's agent, was established to organize and conduct the system of lotteries for the government. It is headed by Chairman Maurice Custeau.

The Societe d'Exploitation des Loteries et Courses du Quebec is considering the introduction of two more lotteries, one small and one on a larger scale. The "mini lottery" would require persons to pay about 50 cents for a ticket, would be conducted on a weekly basis and pay smaller prizes.

The seasonal lottery—to be conducted every three months—would call for $4 or $5 contributions with prize money amounting to $250,000. The "mini lottery" would go into effect in May and the seasonal one in July.

CAN ARRANGE BINGOS

Ontario municipalities will be authorized to license bingos and raffles with prizes up to $3,500 and bazaars to a limit of $100, said Leslie Rowntree, then minister of financial and commercial affairs.

Under the regulations approved by the cabinet, any lottery involving more than $3,500 in prizes will have to be licensed by the financial and commercial affairs department and will require prior approval from the council of the municipality in which the lottery is to be held.

Ontario's new financial and commercial affairs minister, Bert Lawrence, says municipalities will not be authorized to hold lotteries.

"They are not charitable organizations," he said.

In Manitoba, plans are well advanced for a Centennial sweepstakes to be administered by the Manitoba Centennial Corp.

Mini, Seasonal Lotteries Planned By Quebec Groups

The sweepstakes draw will be made on the Manitoba Derby to be run at Assiniboia Downs in July. Tickets went on sale earlier in the year and a number of early-bird draws were made.

TOP PRIZE $70,000

The first major draw for tickets on horses in the Derby will be held June 30 and the other July 15. Prize money in the two major draws totals $155,813 each with ticket holders on the winning horse receiving $70,000 each.

Total prize money, including early-bird and major draws, is $394,368.

Tickets are sold for $2.50 each by authorized groups throughout the province. These groups may be service clubs or civic organizations wanting to raise money for centennial projects.

The Manitoba Centennial Corp. figures that eventually 42 per cent of the proceeds of the sweepstakes will be turned over to sponsoring groups for centennial programs, with from 30 to 35 per cent going towards prizes. The rest is for administration.

Manitoba, like Quebec, has been authorized to license local lotteries run by charitable or religious organizations, and a decision will be made on province-wide lotteries once the sweepstakes have been assessed.

Saskatchewan Premier Ross Thatcher says that province has no plans to hold a lottery.

CHURCH BODY OBJECTS

Charitable or religious organizations may run lotteries with prizes up to $25,000 three times a year, and not more than once in any three-month period. They may run lotteries with total prizes of less than $1,000 not more often than once a week.

In mid-March the Saskatchewan Conference of United Church Women passed a resolution protesting against the regulations, arguing there are better ways of getting people to support church and charitable organizations than offering them lottery prizes.

In Alberta, where the new regulations are still under study, the Edmonton Exhibition Association and the Calgary Stampede Association have been granted licences to operate sweepstakes based on horse races this summer.

The Edmonton one will be based on the running of the Canadian Derby Aug. 8 and the Calgary one on the Stampede Futurity, Sept. 6.

IN HANDS OF POLICE

Profits from the two events will go to improving the Stampede and Edmonton Exhibition. About 250,000 tickets will be printed and 75,000 tickets must be sold to break even.

Heaping Helpings of Time, Money Can Solve Top Pollution Problems

By KORKY KOROLUK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Every time you throw away a gum wrapper or a cigarette package, you have polluted your environment.

Every time you buy a product in a disposable package, you have helped degrade the world around you.

Every time you drive to work, you have contributed to atmospheric pollution.

Almost everything you do in some way makes the world around you less livable.

There is little that can be done about much of it. People must continue to flush their toilets, burn fuel to heat their homes, and make other demands in their search for an ever-higher standard of living, demands that could—some authorities say must—be lessened.

Convenience foods, pre-packaged in cans, bottles and other containers, take an ever-increasing share of the market away from bulk foods. Cans and bottles pollute the environment.

The industry needed to produce these containers and package the foods, pollute the environment too, producing what the public demands.

POLLUTION SPIRALS UP

People settle near industry and the jobs it produces. This draws more industry to service the area's demands. More industry draws more people. Cities grow. Everyone pollutes. The problem grows worse.

It is at its worst where there is the most industry, the most people—a penalty people pay for wanting to live better than their parents did.

Dr. Quegne Odum, director of the Institute of Ecology at the University of Georgia, believes "legal brakes" are needed to alleviate problems created by technological advance.

"Human values," he says, "must control the relationship between these advances—such as the auto—and their consequences—such as air pollution from gasoline fumes."

In many areas the subject of human values is being re-examined. In the meantime, Lake Erie and the rivers that feed it are sick, perhaps fatally.

NEED MUCH MONEY

The problem can be solved by money, lots of it. Federal officials in the United States estimate that Lake Erie could be cleaned up by spending $1,000,000,000 a year—for an undetermined number of years.

State officials in Michigan think it would cost $1,250,000,000 to clean up Michigan's Great Lakes and inland waters.

Conservationists agree that Lake Erie would purge itself if pollution were stopped now. Length of the purge could be three years or 12.

Ohio politicians talk of having the problem licked by the end of next year, then bicker endlessly about how to do it. Michigan politicians—perhaps more realistic—talk instead of slowing the acceleration of the pollution problem.

Dr. Ralph MacMullan, director of the Michigan department of natural resources, says it will be "a really tremendous accomplishment if we can just halve the acceleration." Looking into the future, he feels that in another 10 or 15 years "we'll have the acceleration stopped and will start cleaning up our water."

'SAVED BY 1971'

Gov. James Rhodes of Ohio says Lake Erie "will be saved by 1971," then grants industry delay after delay in initiating or improving abatement programs.

He was elected governor on a platform of encouraging industry in the state. He has been successful, but his critics says he has too many friends in industry to clamp down hard.

There is much heavy industry in Toledo and Cleveland, and every little town in between has a plant of some sort. But Rhodes blames Erie pollution on Michigan.

He has said Detroit and other Michigan communities account for 73.6 per cent of municipal pollution entering the lake, and added that Michigan is responsible for 65 per cent of the lake's over-all pollution.

"Although the Ohio shoreline on Lake Erie is larger than that of other states, the Ohio pollution load is much smaller than Michigan's."

Both states are working on provision of secondary sewage-treatment facilities. Ohio, with a population of 11,000,000, has secondary treatment in 59 plants now and will have in another 73 plants by the end of 1971.

WILL IMPROVE SEWAGE

Michigan, with a population of 8,000,000, plans 218 new sewage-treatment plants and improvements on 229 existing plants by 1980.

In July, 1968, the Michigan Democratic party took a poll and found pollution ranked 14th as an area of public concern. Six months ago, a poll taken by the Republican party showed pollution had jumped to fourth place, behind law and order, race relations and the Vietnam war.

But this is an election year in the U.S., and while promises are many, action is limited. The Michigan state legislature will have about 70 pieces of anti-pollution legislation placed before it this session. Cynics say most are politically-motivated, including a tough bill sponsored by State Senator Sander Levin, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor.

There is progress in some areas.

MacMullan says that "in a lot of ways, we're getting the Detroit River a whole lot cleaner than ever before."

"There's only about one per cent of the oil in the river that there was 10 years ago."

RIVER FIRE HAZARD

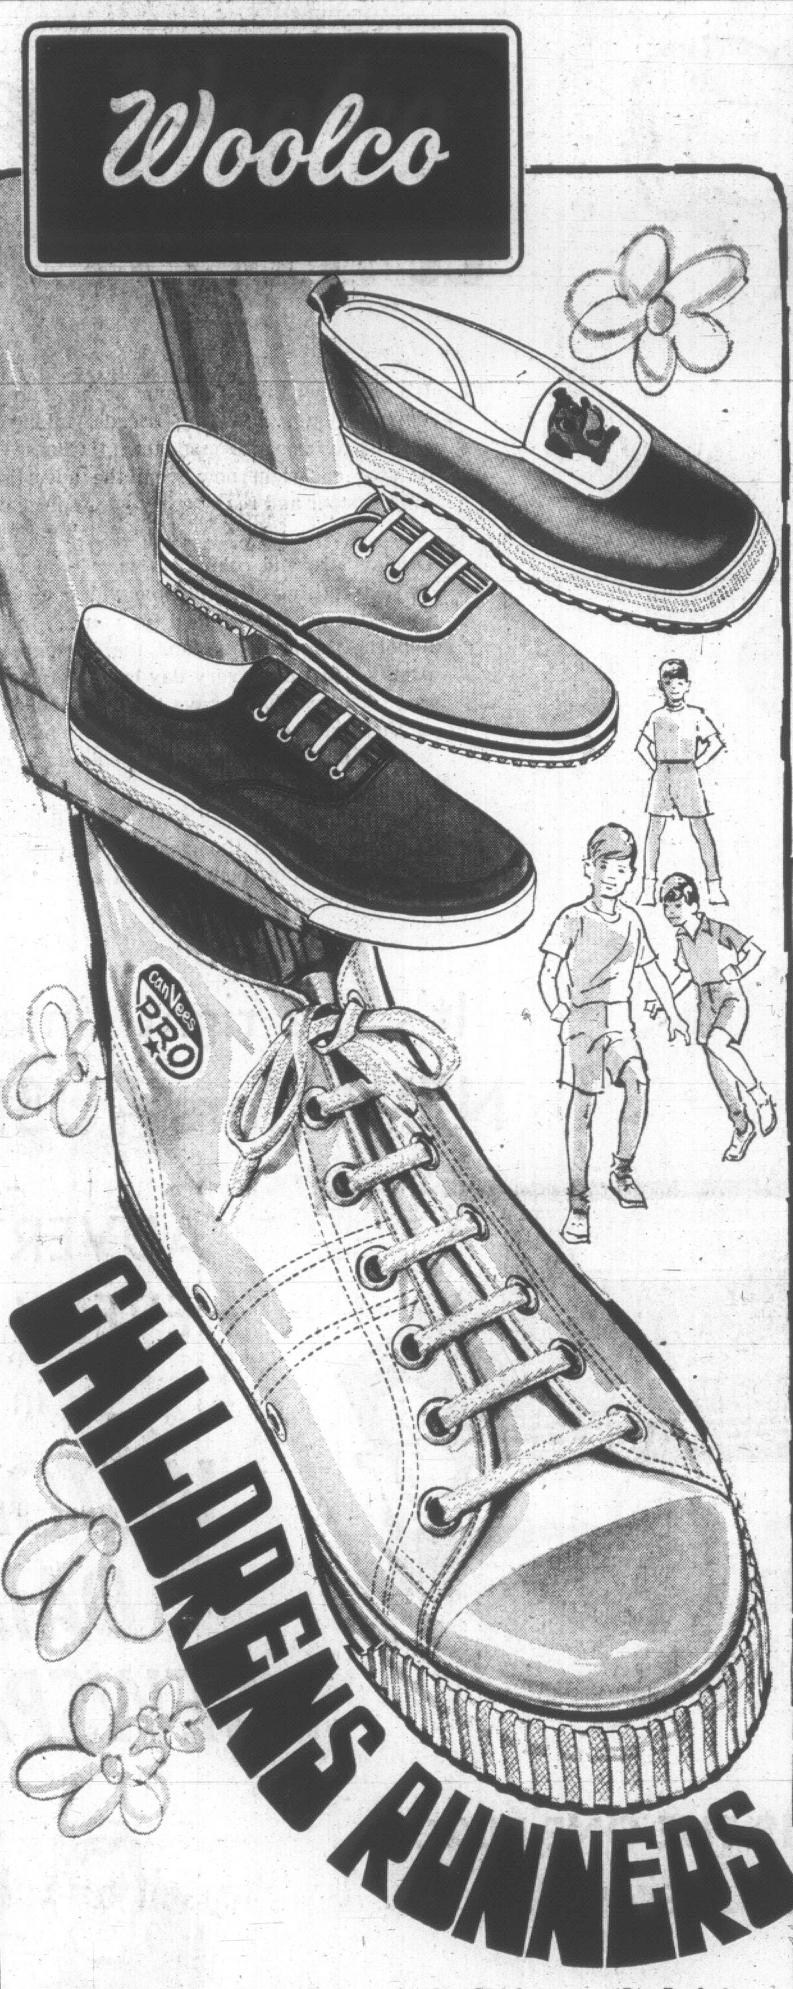

In Cleveland, there is even some hope for the Cuyahoga River, so thickly covered with oil that it is a fire hazard.

There, an expert in oil-separation methods has a pilot project under way that would enable the slick to be cleaned up and oil reclaimed from it to be used for burning in plant incinerators—or for use as fuel oil.

But everywhere, people are asking the same question:

Is there enough money—in Ohio or Michigan or anywhere else—to clean up the mess man has made in his quest for a better world?

Wheatburgers On Cafe Menu

By GORDON GRANT

EDMONTON (CP) — Dick Johnson, a bus driver, decided that to give a small hand to ridding Canada of her wheat problem he would sell wheat door-to-door.

At first he thought he would sell a few 10-pound bags and give away recipes to help housewives use up their supplies.

However, the response to his plan has been "overwhelming," and he's decided now to open a restaurant which will offer only wheat dishes on the menu.

He's already rented premises for his restaurant and for use as a storehouse.

"The response of housewives was so good when I was selling wheat door-to-door at $1.50 for 10 pounds that I have decided to open the restaurant and hire women to sell for me," Mr. Johnson said in an interview.

PEOPLE WROTE IN

"After hearing of my selling, people from all over Canada wrote to me asking for wheat. A man from Kitchener, Ont., sent me a letter with a $2 bill for a sack of wheat and a man from Quebec wrote to commend my efforts.

"When housewives realize that they can make breakfast for about two cents a serving, they buy wheat."

He buys No. 2 Northern from the Alberta Wheat Pool, has it washed and it's ready for the market.

In his restaurant he will sell frozen pre-cooked wheat along with meals. He will also give away recipes.

Included on the menu will be: cooked wheat, wheat porridge, wheat sandwich spread, wheat stew, wheat soup, wheatburgers, wheat meat loaf and wheat pudding.

"Six buses pass the restaurant door, so I should get some business. If I don't it means I'm about $3,000 in the hole—at least."

GIVES IT FLAVOR

What's a wheatburger?

Mr. Johnson's recipe gives these directions:

Blend 1 cup of pre-cooked wheat, 1 pound of hamburger, 1 tablespoon of minced onion, 1 egg. Add salt and pepper to taste. Form into patties and fry as ordinary hamburger.

"The wheat gives it great flavor. We had a friend over for supper who said that after living on the farm as a child she never wanted to eat wheat again. I made the meat loaf and pudding and she said it was delicious. . .

"The prices will be low in the restaurant and we'll step up the door-to-door selling. Additionally, a local health food store owner has decided to sell wheat for me.

"I'm hoping that wheat will catch on. Strangely, nobody seems to think I'm a screwball. Even the guys I work with have been asking for sacks of wheat and recipes."

DAFFODILS AND VIOLET IN SPRINGTIME SILHOUETTE

A young girl, a bouquet of flowers and the warm kiss of the sun—these are the elements of spring. Photographer William E. John, stopping for a quick cup of coffee on a sunny afternoon, was intrigued by the underwater effect of sunlight after striking a textured glass panel in a local restaurant. His camera always handy, Bill began experimenting with photographic techniques to capture the effect on film. Adding the final touch to this composition of light and shade is the silhouette of Violet Smale carrying a bouquet of daffodils.

Canada's New Feminists Reject the System

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

The new brand of feminist is a revolutionary. She spurns traditional ways of working for women's rights because they are carried on within a social structure she says must go.

In Canada, the largest number of radical feminists are part of groups called Women's Liberation Movement—Women's Lib for short—or Women's Caucus.

They have no national organization, but maintain contact through informal exchanges of material and personnel.

Another group, the New Feminists, are largely Toronto-based as yet. They say Women's Lib members are Marxist and that the New Feminists have no political bias.

Women's Lib members say feminism is part of a bad system that catches both men and women in a trap. New Feminists are more inclined to regard men as the collective villain.

New Feminist Dorothy Curzon says: "We don't feel we need to supply solutions. We say you've got your foot on our backs—get it off."

WON'T BE OPPRESSOR

Marlene Dixon says: "No, we don't want to be like men. The last thing we want is to be like a man. That would make us the oppressor, and that's exactly what we're trying to eliminate."

Mrs. Dixon, now of Montreal, is an American who is an active organizer of radical women's groups, mostly in the United States.

In a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press, a variety of feminists explained their convictions.

In general terms, they all say their success would bring a better world for both men and women. It would free both from stereotyped sex roles built in from infancy.

Mrs. Curzon says this old approach produces girls who say: "I don't want to be anything. I want to be married."

"That's it," she says. "That's it in a nutshell."

Women's Lib groups encourage male sympathizers. They have organized day care centres where both men and women work and children are "socialized" for communal living. They also operate birth control-abortion information centres.

Mrs. Curzon says the New Feminists do not want men as members now.

MUST DEFINE SELVES

"First we have to define ourselves in our own terms. In an interim period where we are developing, we're excluding men because they inhibit women so much. They are conditioned to dominate and take over. It's like the NAACP letting whites in. They use techniques built in by their conditioning to take over."

New Feminists spend time talking to women's groups. They put out a monthly newsletter and have set up a library.

Margaret Daly of Toronto is an unaligned feminist whose line of reasoning follows the pattern of most radical feminists, though it may vary in detail.

She says she begins with the premise that all of today's problems are part of one big total mess. Pollution, overpopulation and economic oppression all have their roots in the need to produce.

"Capitalism is based on things growing; achievement means manufacturing things. Mother is a super-consumer.

"We must have a whole new social system. For instance, you only have to look around you to see the family unit is not perfect. It could be improved upon.

"We must try for a system in which all the alternatives are accepted and no one is considered outrageous. Men and women should be equals and child-raising a job for whoever wants to do it."

She says women must develop efficient organizers and must work together for change.

Colette Offley of the Halifax-Dartmouth Women's Caucus explains why day care centres and the breakup of the "nuclear" family focus are considered priorities.

"We must get rid of the notion that the child-bearer must be the child-rearer and consider that the work of looking after children is socially necessary work, rated high on the scale of jobs."

Feminists say girls are taught that they must marry, since they lack the educational and job options that boys have.

Catherine Walker of North Burnaby, B.C., and the Women's Caucus, points out there are female quotas on some courses.

"There are pressures . . . streaming girls into secretarial and home economics courses, away from 'hard' courses like physics.

"Why? . . . Is it that a girl is stupid or is it because she has been subtly socialized by her family, friends and teachers into thinking she won't do well or won't like the subject?

"Both men and women have been brainwashed. Women are constantly objectified sexually and treated as inferior beings."

Feminists say men's magazines and the "sex sell" in advertising "objectify" women.

SET OUT SLOGANS

Eleanor Dunn of Ottawa defines what they mean when she says "too many men look on women as bodies that perform sexual functions."

The New Feminist letter has a list of reverse slogans including, "Does he or doesn't he?" and "I now pronounce you woman and husband."

In Montreal, Nicole Therrien says feminism becomes mixed with French-Canadian radicalism.

"The rebellion of women is against their status as servants: economic, psychological and sexual. Women's liberation was inevitable here. A Quebec woman is doubly oppressed. She is oppressed as a woman and a Quebecer."

Dorothy Curzon says feminists should not dilute their cause with other goals. She says that is where some of the feminists of the past went wrong.

"Even day care, abortion, income tax—that's short-term. Women have said there should be equal pay for equal work. We want to know what is work. Some of the things men do as work are bad, too.

"Women are not in decision-making positions in government, business, labor, and we must change this by any means possible.

"If you use the old approach you reinforce the system. We want the whole rotten mess to go.

"Our vested interest is in making a better world. We want to finish with a society where men and women share, where there is no sex role."

Women's Lib Group Attacks, Occupies Grove Press Office

NEW YORK (UPI) — The offices of Grove Press, pioneer publisher of underground and erotic literature, were seized Monday by members of the women's liberation movement.

"Grove Press is more obscene than most of the stuff its been making its money on," a spokesman for the women said.

The spokesman said the women took over the offices of Barnet Rosset, president of the Publishing House, and of other executives at 9 a.m.

They hung a large red and white women's liberation banner from a window of the building in Greenwich Village.

Mayron Shapiro, vice-president of the firm, acknowledged that the women were occupying Rosset's office but said the was "out of the country."

Grove won a landmark supreme court decision on obscenity a decade ago with publication of D. H. Lawrence's novel, Lady Chatterley's Lover. The ruling opened the way to sale in America of the works of such writers as Henry Miller and John Burroughs.

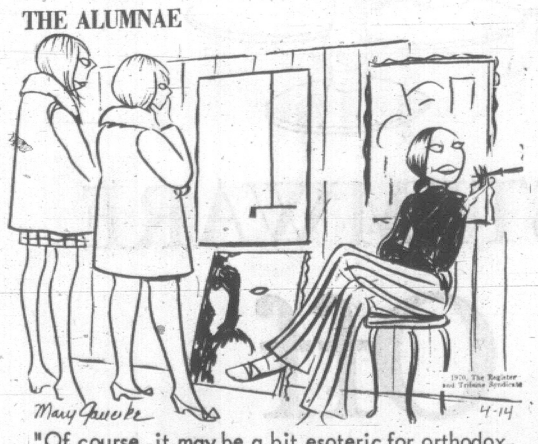

The women's spokesman said they were past or present employees of Grove or other publishing houses and members of various women's liberation groups.

They demanded that Grove give women 51 per cent of its editorships and immediately stop publication of books and magazines and distribution of films that "degrade women."

They also asked Grove to set aside some of its profits for a fund for divorced women so they do not have to rely on alimony.

Other demands included use of Grove's profits to provide a free 24-hour-a-day care centre for children of women employees and community women and finance abortions and birth control services.

Disappearing Cake Reveals New Plate

By PENNY SAVER

I looked down disapprovingly at the ring of icing, all that remained of the cake mother had brought over.

They didn't have to be quite so greedy, I thought. They could have left a second piece for me.

Then I looked again.

I'd never seen the plate before.

And it was an unusually attractive rectangular glass plate with flowers painted on in pastel colors.

"Mother," I said, poking my head into the living room. "Is there any special way to wash this lovely cake plate of yours?"

My ruse worked. She was on her feet and telling me all about it in a minute.

"I just bought it, dear," she said, "so I don't really know. But since those flowers are just painted on perhaps you should take a bit of care. Coolish water and not too much rubbing.

"It cost me $7.50, you see, and I wouln't want anything to happen to it."

She also explained that there are matching plates for sandwiches and bon-bons.

"The bon-bon dishes are quite shallow and about the size of an ashtray," she said. "They are not quite square — they looked rather like someone had grabbed the diagonal corners and pulled a bit. They are $2.75 each and have the same pastel poppy-like flowers and thin gold trim as this plate.

"The sandwich plate, which costs $4.95, is longer and thinner proportionately than this plate, and smaller, of course.

"I wasn't too interested in the sandwich plate, but it strikes me that the flower was a bit different . . . almost rose-like . . . so there may be two patterns available. But don't take my word on it, please!"

I had seen many of the carved Indian boxes in stores around town, but I was a bit surprised when I discovered a matching carved cigarette lighter.

The lighter itself is gold and is set in a fairly large wooden base which has been intricately carved in a floral motif.

The wood is a rosy shade and if it is finished with anything at all, it must be a light oil.

These lighters are $3.50 each.

Boxes carved in floral designs on the sides and top and in some case, inlaid with what looks like ivory in a floral design, range from $2.95 to $6.98.

These boxes come in a variety of shapes and sizes and are finished inside with a blue cloth on the top and bottom surfaces.

They could be used for a variety of items from cigarettes or cigars (although I woun't count on their keeping tobacco fresh for long as they are not well sealed) to candy or jewelry.

If you would like to know where to find these items, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 12 noon.

THE BETTER HALF — By Bob Barnes

"I didn't get the raise, but he's using my reason for his opening joke at the next board meeting."

School Teaches Cooking by Touch

Rosemarie Grayley, closely watched by instructor John Teeter, takes her freshly baked custard from the oven. Although Rosemarie and all the other students in her cooking class at the Albany, Calif., Orientation Centre are blind or partially blind, they wear masks to make sure no light interferes with their concentration. (AP Wirephoto)

ALBANY, Calif. (AP) — Rosemarie Grayley sniffed her freshly baked custard, held up a slightly red finger and said: "Only one burn—not bad!"

Dorothy Daniels bent over an electric oven, counted four blobs of glue on the temperature dial and exclaimed: "I've got it—350 degrees."

Linda Havens batted her right hand hesitantly in the air until she touched the edge of her casserole dish. "There it is!" she declared.

These three young women were cooking lunch—a task performed daily by millions of women. But for them there was a difference: each is blind.

Since 1954, the Orientation Centre for the Blind, a state-run school, has been teaching blind and partially sighted men and women to cook by touch—some with gourmet results.

Instructor Jane Teeter says there are many difficulties, such as learning to handle hot pots and pans, finding the right ingredients and measuring them properly, and knowing when a dish is finished.

Mrs. Teeter said in an interview anyone who takes the course for four to six months can learn to cook.

In the centre's kitchen, the cans, drawers, shelves, pans and measuring cups are labelled in braille. Dials on the oven are marked with blobs of glue every 50 degrees starting at 200 degrees.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Mod Shoes Hit

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am interested in women's shoes because they are part of the view whenever I look at a woman's legs, which is at every possible opportunity.

I can't decide whether these "mod" shoes for women look like prosthetic devices for clubfeet, or torture boxes made of scraps from harness factory. It is even impossible to tell which way a lady is facing from looking at her shoes.

I ask compassionate people everywhere to help stamp out this conspiracy to make a woman's foot look like an obscene growth on the earthly end of a heavenly object. — Frank In San Diego.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to the National Shoe Retailers association and told them what I thought of their squaretoed, clunky, masculine looking shoes that seem to be the only things you can buy anymore.

I told them I have been wearing tennis shoes that were made in Japan because they were actually better looking and more comfortable than what they are showing here.

I am tired of looking like I'm on my way to a gym class. — Judy In Fountain Valley, Calif.

DEAR ABBY: I have specialized in bone surgery for nearly half a century. The ill health and suffering due to women's ill-chosen foot gear is appalling. Incidentally, I dare say that treating ailments caused by improper showing puts more money into the pockets of medical specialists than is spent for all the deforming shoes sold.

The normal shape and function of the human foot requires no raise of the heel. Every fraction of an inch that a shoe raised the wearer's heel above the level of his shoe, causes him to increase the curvature of his spine necessary to stand upright.

Sketchily tracing the history of the high heel: A "dumpy" queen had high-heeled foot gear made to attain a more "imposing" stature. The prostitutes of Paris latched onto the idea, and the so-called "civilized" women of the world promptly fell for it.

Years ago, when I met the owner of one of the lagest shoe stores in San Francisco, I needled him about the atrocious crippling shoes he sold to women.

He said, "Doctor, you don't know the half of it! I once stocked my store heavily with the most beautiful and sensible women's shoes we could buy and we couln't give them away!

"I sent my daughters to school sensibly shod. At high school age they asked for 'shoes like all the other girls are wearing.' I treid to convince them that they would pay a high price in crippled feet and backaches. They didn't care. They chose to take the consequences rather than be 'different'."

If women must distort and bedevil themselves, why don't they select less damaging devices? Say, nose rings? They would be far less harmful, and no more disgusting to those who realize the full significance of deforming footwear. Very truly yours, — E. W. Cleary, M.D. (Retired)

VALUABLE VIOLINS STOLEN; SOLD FOR $70

BOSTON (UPI) — Thieves snatched two violins from a hotel room during the weekend and pawned them for $35 apiece.

One violin was a 1742 Guarnerius worth $15,000, and the other was a 1767 Stradivarius worth $20,000. Police found them about 24 hours after they were stolen from Mr. and Mrs. Kensley Rosen of the Minneapolis Symphony.

'RCMP Conspired To Deport Trio'

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP and American authorities conspired to deport three U.S. army deserters from Canada Jan. 25, a federal inquiry was told Monday.

The charge was made by E. M. Russell, counsel for the department of manpower and immigration and one of four lawyers who submitted arguments to inquiry commissioner E. J. C. Stewart, a county court judge.

A seventh day of hearings into the deportation of Californians John Kreeger, 22, of Vallejo, Charles Leonard, 18, of Chico and Earl Hockette, 21, of Santa Cruz, was to be held today.

Mr. Russell said the deportation "had all been pre-arranged between the RCMP and the American authorities."

He said that K. A. Smith, immigration official on duty at Huntingdon, B.C.-Sumas, Wash., border crossing took no part in escorting the Californians to the border, but turned them over to RCMP outside the Canadian immigration building after determining to his satisfaction that their entry into Canada was legal.

"If he was taking part in any deportation he would have accompanied the three Americans to the border."

When the three were turned over to American authorities, they were placed in a shore patrol wagon but later escaped. Leonard was recaptured and now is in Fort Ord, Calif., Kreeger eventually re-entered Canada and Hockette's whereabouts are unknown.

FIRST ENCOUNTER

The inquiry was told earlier that the trio's first encounter with the RCMP was at Bridal Falls, B.C., when they were questioned by Constable Garry Dick of the Agassiz, B.C., detachment.

RCMP officers told the inquiry the men were then driven to the Chilliwack detachment and then to the border where they were interviewed by Mr. Smith.

The RCMP then left the immigration building at Huntingdon and resumed their normal patrol duties. Police said they were recalled to escort the men to the border because immigration officials felt there might be a breach of the peace.

Mr. Russell said the immigration department had nothing to do with holding the three men at the Chilliwack RCMP station where they were told to empty their pockets, denied access to a telephone, and threatened with deportation.

"All of these acts were carried out by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police or persons under their supervision," he said.

He said the police knew through radio conversations with American authorities that the three were deserters and that there was an FBI warrant out for the arrest of Kreeger before imigration officials became aware of the case.

'NO SYMPATHY'

Referring to the RCMP, he said "you are dealing with well-disciplined men who have no patience or sympathy for deserters or fugitives from justice."

"They decided that the quickest way to get rid of these people was to take them down to the border and that's what they decided to do."

William A. Craig, acting for RCMP officers involved in the case, submitted that they were only assisting immigration officers who had decided what to do with the deserters.

He said Mr. Smith had the authority to determine what would be done with them "and he did determine what would be done with them."

He said all of the officers were aware that they did not have the authority to take the men to the border without first handing them over to Canadian immigration for an inquiry.

Referring to the point when the police left the immigration building while Mr. Smith interviewed the Americans. He said Const. Dick "would not have casually left the three if he was attempting to deport them."

TESTIMONY VAGUE

He said he could not understand how Mr. Smith concluded the three were in RCMP custody when all RCMP left the border while he interviewed them.

Mr. Craig agreed with commission counsel Allan McEachern who said testimony of some witnesses was couched in vague terms and that there were numerous conflicts in it.

Mr. McEachern said it was difficult to determine from the evidence whether the Californians were in the custody of the RCMP or immigration authorities.

Hitler Praised

NEW YORK (AP) — Stokely Carmichael, former chairman of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, says his nominee for "the greatest white man" is Adolph Hitler. Carmichael, who recently returned from 14 months in Africa, told interviewer David Frost on a TV program Monday: "If we're judging his genius objectively, we have to admit that the man was a genius. He forced the entire world to fight him."

Anti-Hate Bill Passes; Goes to Senate

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill banning hate literature and establishing five-year prison sentences for advocating or promoting genocide got third reading before a half-filled Commons Monday night.

Only 134 of 262 MPs stood up to be counted on the proposed legislation which opponents said would abridge free speech and do nothing to protect minority groups in Canada.

The bill now goes to the Senate. A similar bill was passed by senators in the last Parliament but died on the Commons order paper at dissolution last October.

★ ★ ★

After the vote, the Commons went into second reading of a government measure designed to enable Canada to compete more effectively in the world grain market. Debate continues on that bill today.

Seven Conservatives and eight NDP members joined 74 Liberals in voting for the hate literature bill. It was opposed by 36 Conservatives, five Creditistes, two Liberals and two NDP members.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 153, Conservative 72, NDP 22, Creditiste 13, independent 2, vacant 2.

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North), who led his party's opposition to the bill, called it "a legal monstrosity."

He said it was unconstitutional because it infringed free speech contrary to the 1960 Bill of Rights. The bill also presumed a man guilty and made him prove his innocence.

"We would never have got children out of mines and factories, we would never have got unions formed nor achieved dignity for labor. Groups that have been separated by color, or religion would never have obtained the freedom they now enjoy in Canada if someone had not incited trouble," Mr. Woolliams said.

Stan Schumacher (PC—Palliser) said Canadians are not "bent on self-destruction."

"The Canadian people want to build, to create and better themselves and their society," he said.

★ ★ ★

Don Mazankowski PC—Vegreville) said any nation that stifles dissent has no future.

"With a name like Mazankowski, I know what it is to be teased and to be called names. But discrimination is no basis upon which to stifle freedom of speech," he said.

Pat Mahoney (L—Calgary South), who with Paul St. Pierre (L—Coast Chilcotin) voted against the bill, took issue with the clause that said persons advocating genocide in public or private is guilty of an offence.

"I still hold to the conviction that an idea advocated or promoted in the home, regardless of how totally evil it may be, however revolting the person who would entertain it, no criminal investigation and no criminal conviction should follow where no public consequence has followed."

★ ★ ★

The farm bill, replacing the Canada Grains Act now in effect, would empower the government to introduce a protein-grading system for wheat. It also would strengthen government control over the rail movement of grain.

Alf Gleave (NDP—Saskatoon-Biggar) said the bill would allow the government to change grades of wheat by order-in-council. This now can be done only by Parliament.

"This is quite a substantial change," he said.

Stanley Korchinski (PC—Mackenzie) said the proposed legislation wouldn't bring a rush of international orders for Canadian grain.

Poverty Report Asked

OTTAWA (CP) — The United Church of Canada's board of evangelism and social service today urged the Senate poverty committee to issue an interim report this spring.

In its brief to the committee, the board asked that the interim report propose "such immediate actions by both federal and provincial governments as will prevent further deterioration in the economic and social position of the poor. . . ."

The board said it is convinced remedial actions now are possible in spite of inflationary pressures and could prepare the way for more comprehensive anti-poverty, human development programs.

It urged that the interim report include recommendations to increase old age security benefits, including the guaranteed income supplement, improve unemployment insurance benefits and coverage and reform and improve provincial workmen's compensation programs.

The board said the statutory provision limiting increases in old-age security benefits to two per cent in any year is clearly unjust. The increase in benefits should correspond to changes in the cost of living.

Unemployment insurance benefits should be increased to represent a greater percentage of lost earnings. The board suggested an increase to a level representing at least three-quarters of a person's previous average earnings.

NDP Queries Fund Source

Dave Barrett will buy the coffee and rent the hall if the Social Credit and Liberal parties will come to a meeting to tell people where they get their election funds.

The opposition leader made the offer in commenting on disclosures that the three main B.C. parties spent more than $1.5 million combined in declared expenses in the 1969 provincial election.

The figures showed the Socreds spent $526,000 in provincial party funds and $343,000 at the constituency level for a combined total of $870,000. The NDP spent a combined $300,000 and the Liberals $336,000. Some overlapping in central and constituency funds is possible.

"Who gave the Social Credit party more than three-quarters of a million dollars to finance the campaign on top of the use of the taxpayers' own money?" Barrett asked.

He was referring to charges that government advertising was used for propaganda purposes at election time.

He suggested a public meeting be held to open each party's books to all interestted persons so the source of funds could be known.

"We'll rent a room and buy the coffee," he added.

He said the New Democratic Party is still in debt from the election. His own constituency association in Coquitlam owed about $1,500 on its own and was among numerous party organizations owing money to the party's central committee for unfilled "quotas."

Lack of Gas Protest Disappoints Barrett

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett Monday expressed disappointment over the provincial government's refusal to protest American shipment of deadly nerve gas through the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

"What I regret more than anything," he told a press conference, "is that very early in the session I placed a resolution on the order paper asking the provincial government to voice displeasure to Ottawa that the nerve gas was to be shipped."

"The government took no action on the resolution — in fact it was not even called for discussion."

The gas is to be shipped from Okinawa to Bangor, Wash. It will then be shipped by rail to Hermiston, Ore., and the U.S. army's ordinance depot at Umatilla.

DISMISSED

Meanwhile, in Portland, Monday, a suit to block the shipment was dismissed in United States Federal Court.

After an hour-long hearing, U.S. District Court Judge Gus Solomon ruled the court had no jurisdiction in the case and that the U.S. government could not be sued in this instance because it had not consented to be sued.

The suit was launched by a group of Oregon and Washington residents, who claimed that their constitutional rights to safety of life and property would be violated if the gas was shipped through the two states.

Solomon said that although the defendants named were individuals, the government was the actual defendant.

Rugby Tour In Britain Detailed

Details of a proposed British tour next year by soccer and rugby players selected from senior secondary schools was submitted to the Greater Victoria school board Monday.

Estimated cost of the tour has been set at $14,525, with almost half the funds to come out of the pockets of the 45 tour members.

There will be 24 rugby players, 17 soccer players and two coaches for each team.

Players from Belmont of the Sooke district and Claremont of the Saanich Peninsula district will be considered eligible for the tour.

Selection of players will be based on "citizenship, ability and scholarship," with principals of individual schools to delete names of students they consider not worthy on the basis of citizenship or scholarship.

Board members were asked to approve a four-day extension on the length of the tour, whose dates are now set at March 28-April 18.

Feeling of trustees was students will get more out of a few extra days in Britain than in a classroom at home.

200 Back Legal Marijuana

CLOVERDALE (CP) — About 200 young people, students and self-proclaimed Yippies, demonstrated for legalized marijuana at the courthouse here Monday afternoon, smoking what they said was marijuana and brandishing an eight-foot "joint."

They came to protest the trial of Richard Julien Turner, 33, a law student charged with possession of marijuana last Jan. 14 when he offered a "joint" to provincial court Judge W. E. Campbell.

Turner had just been sentenced by Judge Campbell for possession of the drug when he made the offer. Judge Alan Quinet found him guilty of the second offence on Monday and fined him $100.

The crowd of youthful demonstrators in the courtroom applauded when Judge Quinet limited sentence to a fine. Judge Quinet said he was being lenient "because we are marking time until we find out mor about this substance and we may have different or better legislation in the future."

Planes Added

VANCOUVER (CP) — CP Airlines announced Monday that two more Boeing 727 airliners with a total value of $12,500,000 will join the company's all-jet fleet in the spring of 1971. President John C. Gilmer said the first two jets joining the fleet this spring will serve the transcontinental routes where flight frequency is to be expanded from five to seven return flights daily starting April 26.

Name Released

BURNABY (CP) — RCMP Monday released the name of a man who apparently shot himself as he was being pursued by police officers after an attempted safe-cracking. Dead is Gordon Albert Thompson, 46, of New Westminster.

Plane Crashes

AIRDRIE, Alta. (CP) — A father, mother and their six-month-old child were killed Monday when a light aircraft crashed in this district 10 miles northeast of Calgary.

Names were withheld but the plane was believed to be from Saskatchewan.

RCMP said the plane took off from the old Airdrie airport, flew about one-half mile and then crashed.

Federal transport officials were investigating.

Hazard Cited

REGINA (CP) — Training flights of B-52 United States jet bombers over Saskatchewan this summer could pose a hazard to private and commercial aircraft, says an opposition member of the legislature.

G. R. Bowerman (NDP—Shellbrook), holder of a private pilot's licence, said Monday the Strategic Air Command planes, which do not carry bombs, cross two student training flight routes in the province.

ALBERTA WARNS

Clean Up—Or Lose Grants

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Municipalities which cannot alleviate or control pollution in their areas do not deserve government grants, Alberta Health Minister James Henderson said Monday.

Speaking during debate of a bill to amend the Municipalities Assistance Act, the minister told the Alberta house there is no reason other municipalities should have to go on paying when a few cities do not use at least a portion of the provincial grants for pollution control.

In the past, grants to muncipalities in Alberta have been unconditional.

Municipal Affairs Minister Fred Colborne, who introduced the bill, said the amendment would enable the government to insist that a city carry out its responsibilities in pollution control.

Opposition member Dave Russell (PC-Calgary Victoria Park) called the amendment "a form of blackmail." The grants in the past have been used for many necessary current projects, and for the government to "attach strings" was to force the cities into a corner, Russell said.

Television cameras filmed regular sessions of the Alberta legislature for the first time in history.

"I thought it went very well, with very little interference," house Speaker A. J. Dixon said in an interview later. "I don't think the members seemed to be aware of the cameras at all."

Dixon announced last week he had arranged for a trial filming of regular house procedures for Monday and today.

The film will not be used for news, but will be available to the education department for documentaries after it has been reviewed by the committee on privileges and elections.

Talks 'Useless'

REGINA (CP) — Further talks are useless as long as the union for striking plumbers and pipefitters sticks to its original demands, Norman Swinnerton of Regina, negotiator for Saskatchewan plumbing contractors, said Monday.

"Until their stand is changed, all we're going to accomplish is more bickering. The union demands are unacceptable to the contractors."

In its last written proposal the plumbers and pipefitters' union requested an over-all wage increase of 37 per cent. Union members in Saskatoon were getting $4.35 an hour under a contract which expired March 31.

The strike, involving about 700 members across the province, began April 6 in most areas as the union and the Saskatchewan branch of the Canadian Plumbing and Mechanical Contractors' Association were unable to agree on terms of a new contract.

★ ★ ★

Licence Squeeze

WINNIPEG (CP) — Transportation Minister Joe Borowski said Monday he intends to introduce legislation which would make it difficult for medically and mentally unfit drivers to obtain permits in Manitoba.

Borowski said in an interview the proposed legislation would allow physicians to report such patients without fear of legal reprisal.

The legislation would be on a permissive basis at first. Physicians would use their own judgment in reporting patients they believed to be poor driving risks. Compulsory legislation would put the onus on doctors to report all such cases.

★ ★ ★

Federal Funds Asked

CALGARY (CP) — A three-man Alberta Teachers' Association study team says the logic of a massive increase in federal spending on education overrides any constitutional arguments to the contrary.

A report on the team's research project was made public Monday.

It says the federal government must share the cost of education if it supports the philosophy of a national economic interest and the right of every Canadian citizen to assume some degree of equality of educational opportunity.

P. J. Atherton and E. J. Hanson, both from the University of Alberta, and J. F. Berlando, co-ordinator of teacher welfare with the teachers' association, reject any suggestion that the constitution is an impediment to increased federal support for education.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

This Special Hemorrhoid Remedy Contains A Unique Healing Substance That Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Immediacy of War Spreads Alarm in Cambodia Capital

Black Market Dollars Barometer of Concern

By LAURENCE STERN

PHNOM PENH (WP)—The fire on Cambodia's border with Vietnam is spreading hot tendrils of alarm into the capital and posing an immediate challenge to the neutralist posture of General Lon Nol's "Government of Salvation."

Those who can afford it have begun to evacuate the eastern provinces for the sanctuary of Phnom Penh. Some of the affluent elite are beginning to leave the country altogether after converting their Cambodian money into dollars.

The basic unit of Cambodian currency, the riehl, has within the past two weeks risen from its relatively stable legal exchange rate of 55 to the dollar upward on the black market to 70 for a dollar.

This is one of the most reliable indicators of sagging public confidence in Cambodia's ability to surmount the country's growing crisis.

Now, in many minds, the question is emerging in large and haunting terms: Did the Lon Nol government overplay its power position in ousting Prince Norodom Sihanouk and in adopting its more aggressively hard-line stand against the Vietnamese Communists?

Who to Turn To?

And if so, how and by whom will this government be bailed out of its perilous state? Also, these words from President Nixon's foreign policy doctrine are getting new attention by influential Cambodians and foreigners here:

"In those cases involving other types of aggression we shall furnish military and economic assistance when requested and as appropriate."

One sultry evening in Phnom Penh, immediately after the March 18 coup against Sihanouk, a European diplomat was dining with a group of high-ranking Cambodian officials.

The Cambodians were flushed with ebullience at the success of their unseating of Sihanouk, a lightning strike that caught Cambodians, experienced foreign diplomats here and the rest of the world by surprise.

Border Situation

"What about the situation on your border?" the foreign observer asked his government guests in reference to the more than 40,000 Vietnamese Communists camped along the border with South Vietnam. It seemed to him, as he later put it, that the Cambodians were "letting the genie out of the bottle."

Picture Changed

There will be no trouble on the border, he was assured. "We are powerful enough to take care of ourselves," the Cambodians replied.

Whether they spoke out of innocence or miscalculation or pure nationalistic bravado, that assessment has been grievously shattered by the events of the past week.

GEN. LON NOL
. . . seeking aid?

While the government-controlled press and radio in Phnom Penh has risen daily to shriller heights of vituperation against Sihanouk and the Viet Cong, the government's authority was evaporating in one district after another in what is called the parrot's beak of Cambodia—a traditional North Vietnamese and Viet Cong sanctuary northwest of Saigon.

In the capital, the high school boys and girls in khaki shirts and jeans marched, cheered and sang paeans of praise to the new government and placards ("The Viet Cong are cholera") proliferated throughout the city.

But some 80 miles to the east, Cambodian soldiers stood on the national highway and peered anxiously into the three lines and waited for the next battering from the Communist troops, who had demonstrated an ability to strike at will and with devastating effect east of the Mekong River.

This is the tense and fragile posture in which Cambodia finds itself at the moment—blustering on the outside and shivering within.

The pervasive question now is what comes next?

Lon Nol has already said in several interviews that he would ask for military help "from our friends" if Cambodia's security becomes gravely endangered. And he numbered the United States among those friends.

U.S. Line Open

The American embassy is a quiet and pleasant compound near the river front with a policy staff of about half a dozen. Its only line of communication with Washington is a leased Cambodian government telephone and teletype. The line is not secure.

The embassy is commanded by American charge d'affaires Lloyd M. Rivers, a pleasant but reticent man who has had embassies sacked under him in Burundi and Brazzaville. The American profile in Phnom Penh, as personified in Rivers, hugs close to the ground.

General Lon Nol has also made the specific point that he would call upon Indonesia—which he ranks high among friendly nearby powers—in the event that he needs help. Lon Nol and President Suharto of Indonesia are close personal friends.

The new government here is now moving to mend its relations with South Vietnam to the East and Thailand to the west, countries which in Sihanouk's day were denounced as wicked puppets of American imperialism.

Wednesday, the Cambodian Press Agency cited prominently a broadcast by the Thai government radio that predicted the resumption of friendly relations with Cambodia now that Sihanouk is out of the way. The Thai broadcast as published here said that Sihanouk was "solely" responsible for the breaking of relations in 1961.

The Cambodian Press Agency is in effect the chicken entrails by which outside observers here divine the motives and intentions of the new "Government of Salvation."

Opinion Moulding

Earlier the agency gave prominent attention to statements by South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu inviting friendlier relations with the new Cambodian government. In Sihanouk's day this would have been as improbable an occurrence as a snowstorm in Phnom Penh.

In a gradual fashion, it would seem, Lon Nol is preparing public opinion at home and preparing the diplomatic base abroad for requesting military assistance from neighboring countries, which are already military assistance clients of the United States.

Even if they were to become the funnel for American aid to Cambodia it would represent an extension of the U.S. commitment in Indochina while the Nixon administration is trying to liquidate its role in the area.

Wednesday in the Svay Rieng province a Cambodian colonel told an American correspondent with elation that American planes had strafed Vietnamese Communist positions near the Cambodian border town of Chiphou.

Shows Hopes

There has been no independent corroboration of that claim and even if it is not true, as one must assume in the absence of official government confirmation, it reveals what hopes lie in the heart of the Cambodian military.

Sihanouk for all his failings, managed to keep Cambodia out of the Indochinese War. The official map of Cambodia issued under Sihanouk's reign shows Cambodia in brilliant coloring. The surrounding countries of Laos, Thailand and Vietnam are merely white empty blobs.

With the policies of the new government and the new aggressiveness of the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong here, whose ultimate military objectives are still inscrutable, Cambodia can no longer afford this enthnocentic view of itself.

Montreal Mail Men Go to Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Montreal's mail-truck drivers carried a demonstration of united opposition to the government into a Commons committee room Monday afternoon and put it to a vote.

"We're doing this to prove to Mr. Drury that we're not forcing the men into anything," said Guy Beaudoin, a director of the Confederation of National Trade Unions.

On the other side of the room, Treasury Board President C. M. Drury agreed that it was an impressive display of discipline and determination.

After the results were announced—yes 6, annulled 10, against 399—and after the cheers had died down, Mr. Drury told the drivers they had made their point.

"I regret sincerely your decision."

He told reporters the government will not change its offer which expires Wednesday and that new men will be hired by the post office to take their jobs if they do not come forward on their own.

Mr. Beaudoin, elated by the vote, suggested a solution to the struggle will not come so quickly.

GIVES WARNING

"If the government proceeds with its plan it will find it has another problem," he said. "One of these days it will discover there is no postal service in Montreal."

He added the cabinet has exhausted its tactics and will have to seek a new compromise with the drivers' union and the CNTU, which has represented it in negotiations. "We think there's members with good horse-sense in this cabinet," he said.

Last week, Mr. Drury insisted no compromise is possible on the one main issue separating the two sides. The CNTU has demanded the men, ex-employees of postal contractor G. Lapalme Inc., be permitted to enter the post office as a separate bargaining unit.

The government has offered 330 new jobs to the 457-member union with a wage-scale 25 cents an hour higher than the standard rate. But has insisted that to submit to the demand for a separate bargaining unit would contravene public service legislation and lead to "administrative chaos."

Mr. Drury told the men before the vote that if they entered the post office, the government would not intervene to oppose an application to the public service staff relations commission to re-certify the CNTU union.

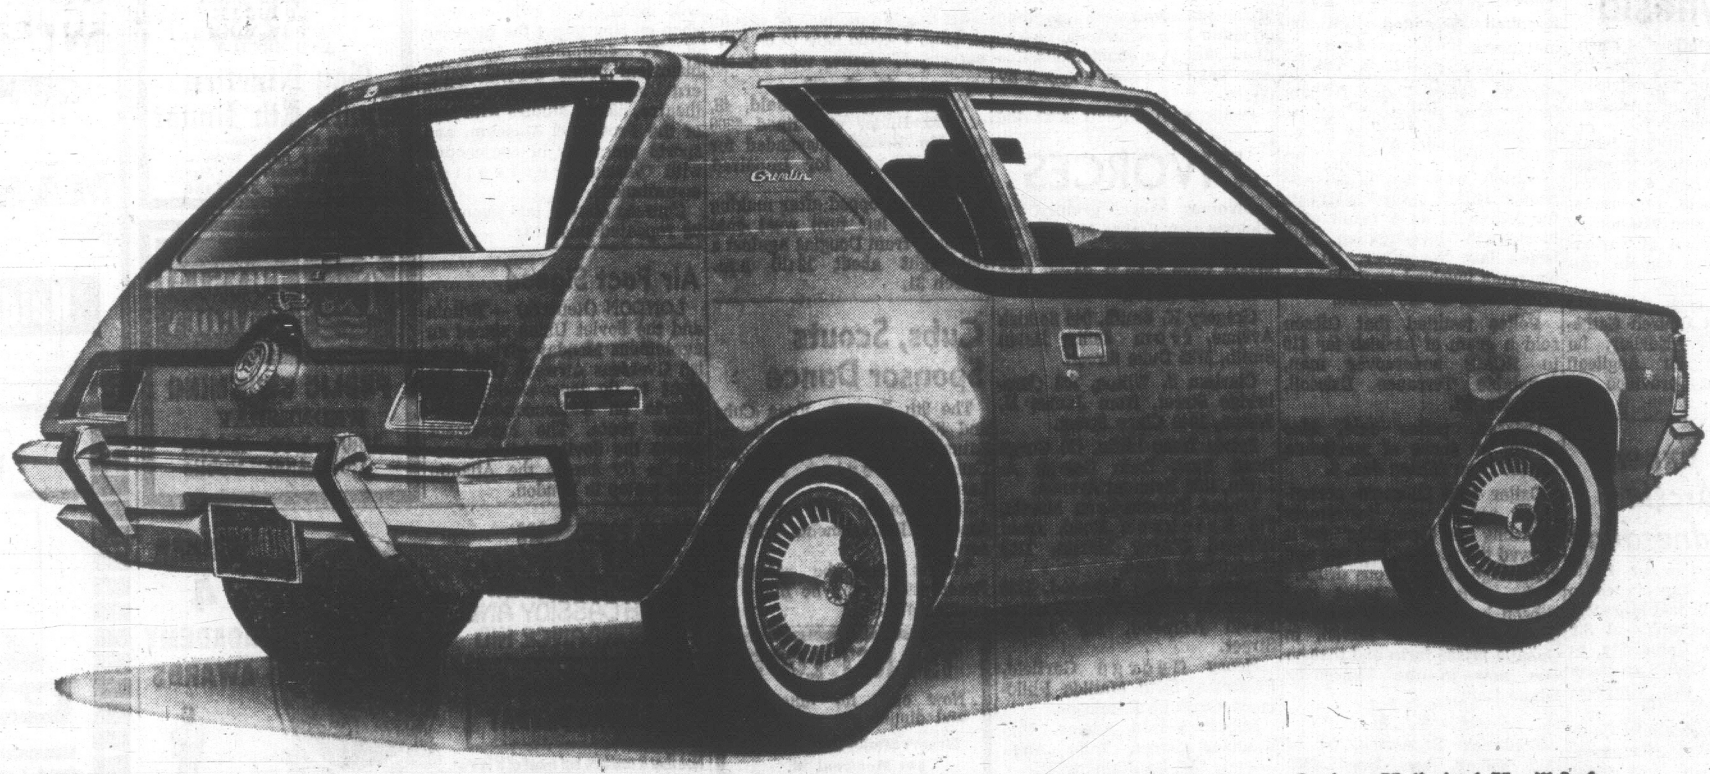

A further meeting may be held between the government and the union leaders before the deadline Wednesday midnight.

Gremlin.
Economical. Dependable. Powerful. Available.

The subcompact Gremlin from American Motors. Styling, comfort, performance, reliability, price; all are the result of an intensive study of the small car buyer's requirements. And Gremlin meets and exceeds every requirement.

Take styling. The long hood, upswept roofline and slant-back configuration all combine to put a wedge to the wind. This, coupled with Gremlin's wide-track stance, gives outstanding stability even in cross winds.

Models. Two. Gremlin comes in a two-passenger or four-passenger version. The four-passenger version features a rear seat which folds flat to provide additional storage space when required.

Engines. Two. A standard 128 hp Six. An optional 145 hp Six. Power and plenty of it for the North American road. Moreover, road tests demonstrate fuel economy of up to 27 miles per gallon. Multiply that by the 17 gallon fuel tank and you'll get a good idea of Gremlin's operational range.

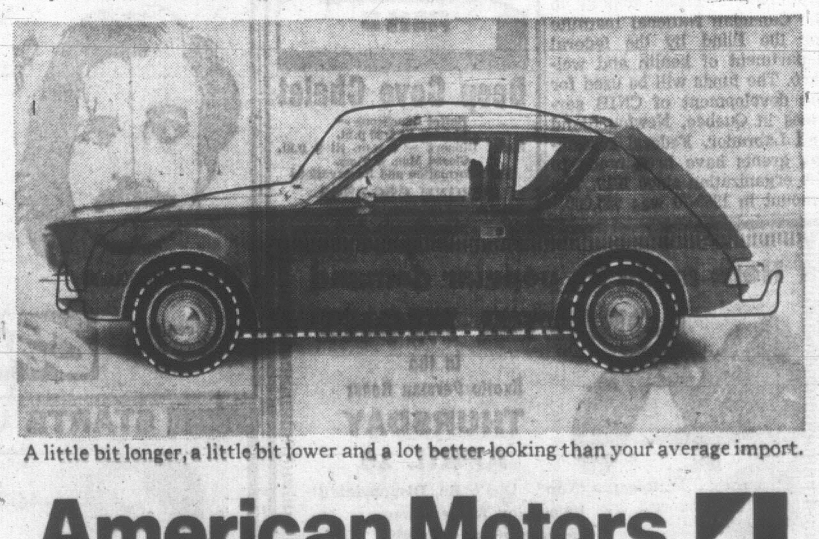

Transmissions. Three. A 3-speed column mounted shift is standard with the 128 hp engine. A 3-speed floor shift is standard with the 145 hp engine. A column mounted automatic is optional with either engine.

Interiors. Ample. Getting inside a Gremlin is a rewarding experience, because everything inside is so familiar to the driver accustomed to North American cars. Room, comfort, convenience. It's all there.

Options. Unlimited. You'll find more than 40 items to put more fun, more power or more style in your driving. Along with the engine and the transmission options, there are; special axle ratios; power steering; power brakes; air conditioning; a roof luggage rack; a push button radio; a lift-up rear window and bucket seats, to name but a few.

Maintenance. Simple. Because of the long hood, the engine compartment boasts exceptional working room. Spark plugs, distributor, carburetor and fan belts are easily accessible. Front fenders bolt on. They can be removed and replaced quickly.

Taken in total. Gremlin is a very remarkable little car and presents to the small car buyer a valid alternative to the glut of imported cars currently on the market. See it for yourself at an American Motors Dealer. Form a first hand opinion of a North American subcompact. The first.

A little bit longer, a little bit lower and a lot better-looking than your average import.

American Motors
makes the move 1st.

Trustees To Consider Area-Wide Vote

Greater Victoria school trustees will vote Monday whether to abandon the system of electing trustees to represent individual municipalities.

Doing away with municipal boundaries in school board elections would mean voters elect all trustees, not just candidates from their own municipality.

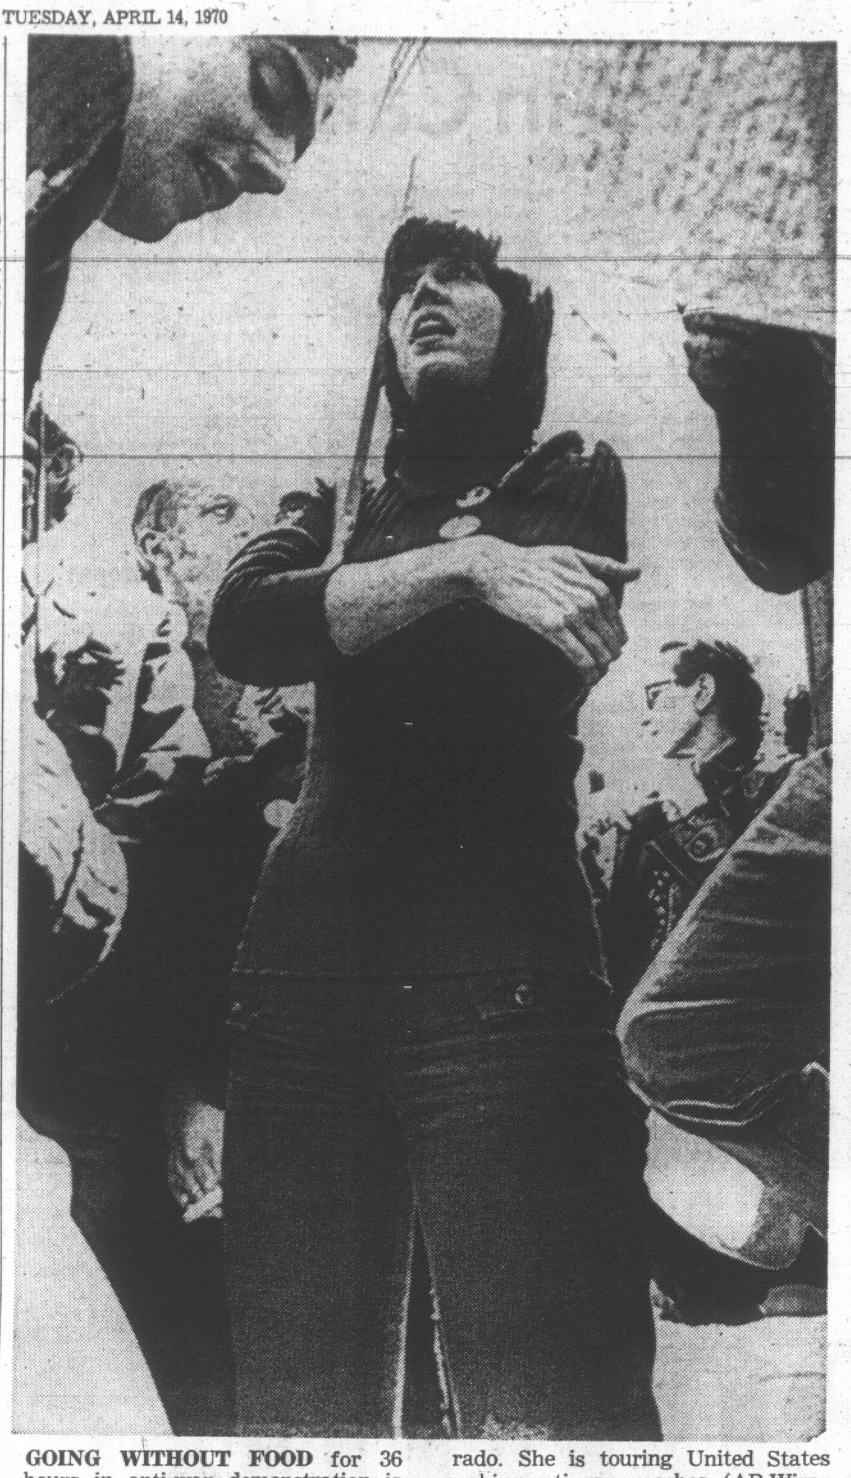

Under the present system the nine board members consist of three from Victoria, three from Saanich, two from Oak Bay and one from Esquimalt.

At a meeting of the board's education committee Monday, trustee Alan McKinnon, who supports the proposal to hold elections at large, said under the present system Victoria and Saanich are under represented.

He pointed out Victoria pays 48 per cent of the tax load, but only has one-third representation on the board.

Trustee Peter Bunn opposes the proposal to scrap boundaries. He called it "change for the sake of change" and said disadvantages outweigh advantages.

He said the old system is all right because the board has not suffered from parochialism during the eight years he has been a member. He also said he is not concerned about the final decision because he plans to step down as a trustee at the end of his term in 1971.

300 View U.K. Film

More than 300 men and women gathered in he Newcombe Auditorium at the Provincial Museum Sunday night for a showing of the British film, Mr. Brown Comes Down The Hill.

The film was adapted from a play by Peter Howard, world leader of the Moral Rearmament movement before his death in 1965.

The program opened with a concert presented by the chorus and orchestra of Victoria's Up With People — a teen-age oranization operating in many parts of North America and other countries.

The film was sponsored by Friends of Up With People, an adult group supporting the teen-agers.

Dean Whitlow To Polynesia

Dean Brian Whitlow of Christ Church Cathedral is leaving Victoria soon for an extensive tour of the large Anglican diocese of Polynesia.

He will lecture at St. John's College, Suva; engage in union talks with Roman Catholics, Presbyterians and representatives of the London Missionary Society and preach at various centres, including remote villages and settlements.

Whitlow has been dean and rector of Christ Church Cathedral since 1955. Earlier, he ministered to an Anglican parish in the province of Quebec.

Noted Expert On Arctic Here Wednesdeay

Current interest in the Arctic will give added importance to an address by Michael Marsden, professor of geography at Sir George Williams University, to the Canadian Club, at noon Wednesday in the Empress Hotel.

Marsden, a graduate of Cambridge University later associated with McGill, has spent five full seasons in the Canadian Arctic, and has made four shorter visits.

He has studied ice and northern conditions at Ellesmere Island, Coronation Gulf, Coppermine, Baffin Island and other locations.

He will speak on the topic, "Can The Eskimo Survive?".

St. Andrew's, Holy Trinity Rector Retires

Canon Frederick Vaughan-Birch has retired after a 10-year ministry as rector of the joint parish of St. Andrew's Anglican Church, Sidney, and Holy Trinity Church, Patricia Bay.

He was entertained at a farewell party given by Rev. E. W. Greenhalgh, newly-elected rural dean of Saanich, and Mrs. Greenhalgh.

A graduate of Emmanuel College, Vaughan-Birch was made a deacon in 1930 and served in Saskatoon, Calgary and High River, Alta.

Trafficking in Marijuana Nets Two-Year Jail Term

Danny Gibson, 20, of 1250 Bay, was sentenced in court Monday to two years in prison for trafficking in hashish and marijuana.

Gibson, pleaded guilty to both offences before Judge William Ostler who sentenced him to two years on each, to be served concurrently.

Gibson was one of the 48 people RCMP issued warrants for March 24 as a result of a four-month investigation that began last November. All the warrants involved trafficking in illicit drugs on the Island.

Police testified that Gibson sold a gram of hashish for $10 to RCMP undercover man, Constable Terrance Driscoll, last Nov. 29.

Driscoll, police said, also bought an ounce of marijuana for $15 from Gibson Jan. 6.

Ostler said Gibson's presentence report was "extremely upsetting and depressing" for it showed the accused had use and knowledge of numerous drugs.

The judge also noted that Gibson had previously been on probation, in New Haven, in Oakalla prison farm and that he was now in the Vancouver Island Unit.

Frederick Bradstock, 50 of 1312 Vining, was fined $300 when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

Police testified he nearly collided with another vehicle while driving at Skinner and Bay about 5:30 p.m. April 11.

When he was stopped by police a short time later, he seemed in a daze and had difficulty locating his driver's licence, court was told.

Ostler suspended his licence for five months except for business purposes.

Richard Bissett, 18, of Malahat, was fined $100 for dangerous driving.

Police said he passed an unmarked police car in a 50-m.p.h. zone of the Trans-Canada Highway at 60 m.p.h. about 1:30 p.m. April 12.

Bisset was driving a motorcycle, and he had a passenger on the back.

He later went up the middle of the road with cars travelling on either side of him and passed more cars in a double solid line zone before he was stopped by police.

Police said Bissett told the investigating officers that he was driving carefully while operating the motorcycle.

"If this is your idea of careful driving, I would hate to be your passenger," Ostler told Bissett.

Doreen Clara McDonald, 48, of 1139 Hilda, was fined $300 and her licence suspended for four months for impaired driving.

She was stopped after making an illegal left turn west onto Pandora from Douglas against a red light about 12:15 a.m. March 31.

CITY MUSIC FESTIVAL

Strings Scholarship Tonight

By AUDREY JOHNSON

First of the major awards in the Victoria Music Festival—the valuable Congress of Strings scholarship—will be competed for at this evening's session at Victoria Senior Secondary School.

This scholarship provides all expenses for six weeks' attendance this summer at the Congress of Strings, University of California. It is made available by Victoria Musicians' Association, Local 247, AF of M.

Performance in this class is usually of diploma standard and entrants play one or two pieces of their own choice. Two entrants are listed in the program, Victoria violinists Jacqueline Tarry and John Rigby, but it is possible that there will be a third entry.

OPENS PROGRAM

This event opens tonight's program at 7:30 p.m.

At Central Junior Secondary all day today and Monday, streams of colorful youngsters flowed in and out and the beat of Virginia reels, polkas, ring dances and square dances echoed around the building.

Adjudicator Mrs. Marcia Snider praised the standard generally and repeatedly expressed her pleasure in the size of the groups.

TOTAL INVOLVEMENT

In many cases there was total involvement, with every child in a particular grade participating.

She was impressed with the number of boys taking part, saying that it was a wonderful training for their sense of timing and general physical conditioning.

"Folk dancing is perfectly right for boys," she told her young audience. "And later on when you get more proficient there are lots of good, strong energetic male dances you can do."

What strings adjudicator Murray Adaskin had described as a most satisfactory day of elementary school orchestra playing, Monday, was crowned at the end of the evening program by the performance of the Greater Victoria schools senior orchestra.

Previous to this Adaskin complimented the playing of Oak Bay Junior and Senior Secondary orchestras and the Greater Victoria Schools Orchestra senior strings.

IMPRESSIVE

Of the final performance by the senior orchestra under Thomas Tucker, he commented: "This was most impressive. It comfirms my opinion that the standard here is very high indeed."

He commended the string program in the schools, calling it "altogether exceptional."

"And all the more so because there is a general weakness in this area in nearly all other cities across Canada.

"I gather there must be a couple of good teachers around here."

He spoke of the "sensitive musical training that has been given this orchestra" and commended the good handling of the tricky instruments (bassoon and horn) by three of the players.

"This kind of discipline they experience in this activity is excellent," he told his audience. "It prepares these young people so well for anything that comes in the future.

"Everyone—the teachers, the city, the school authorities, the students—are to be congratulated on a wonderful program."

Announcing his first mark in this largely non-competitive portion of the festival, he awarded a 90 to the senior orchestra.

CHORAL CLASSES

School choral classes begin Wednesday morning at Oak Bay Junior Secondary.

String solo, sonata and concerto classes continue until mid-afternoon at Sir James Douglas auditorium.

Wednesday evening at Central Junior, the dance honor performance takes place.

There is one addition to Wednesday's program. Class 319, original composition, which was officially scheduled for the evening of April 23, has been moved to 2:15 p.m. Wednesday at Sir James Douglas.

This in order that Adaskin, a noted composer, who leaves Victoria at the conclusion of the string classes this week, may judge the original composition performances.

COMPETITIVE RESULTS

DANCE CLASSES — Class 389, folk dance, Grades 5 and 6 (Girls only): View Royal and Sir James Douglas, excellent; George Jay and View Royal, very good; Glanford and Blanshard, good.

Class 396, creative dance, Grade 7: Doncaster, good.

Class 398, folk dance, composite group: Blanshard, good; Glanford, satisfactory.

Class 402, folk dance, junior secondary: St. Ann's secondary school, excellent.

Class 413, folk dance, under 14: Marge Lindley school, good.

Class 415, folk dance, open: Oak Bay ballet school, excellent.

Class 381, folk dance, Grade 3: Cloverdale, excellent, Uplands (Div. 71) and Doncaster (Div. 14), very good; Lake Hill and Lampson Street, good.

Class 384, folk dance, Grade 5: Northridge, very good.

Class 386, folk dance, Grade 6: Lampson Street, good.

Class 387, folk dance, grade 6: Hampton school, good.

RECORDER CLASSES — Class 211, elementary ensemble: 1. Lake Hill, 83.

Class 210, elementary school recorder group: 1. Doncaster (senior), 82; 2. Lake Hill, 80; 3. Glanford, 75.

Class 209, open solo: 1. James Kennedy, 92.

Class 281, primary rhythm band: Brentwood school, 75.

Class 282, instrumental group: 1. Lampson Street, 87, 2. Lake Hill, 86; 3. Oaklands, 84.

Princess Paint-Up

Two sea-going dowagers are due for a little titivating.

The first, the CPR's Princess Marguerite, which steams between Victoria and Seattle during the summer, goes into Yarrows' shipyard Tuesday.

Part of the program will see her fore and aft funnels exchanging their familiar beige bases and black tops for a solid red tone. The aft funnel will carry the company's new insignia which came into effect a year ago. This is a black diamond and large white crescent.

A similar facelift will be given her sister ship, the Princess Patricia, which will again be doing the Alaska cruise run this season.

Film-Making Course In Summer

The National Film Board and the Greater Victoria school board will co-operate this summer in a film-making course for students.

Adult education director Jack Dalgleish told trustees Monday students had suggested film-making as something they would like to see included in the board's Summer Happenings for 1970.

Details are still being worked out, Dalgleish said. Students will probably learn film techniques through analysis of social problems locally.

He suggested studies of use of drugs by teen-agers, pollution and self-determination for low-income groups.

"It could go anywhere," Dalgleish said. "Maybe we'll create a revolution."

Other new summer courses will include a television workshop on how to get the most out of TV equipment, tours of historical points around southern Vancouver Island, creative theatre, nature studies with help of the Provincial Museum, and sports programs in conjunction with various recreation commissions.

Courses offered last year will be repeated this year.

HOME GARDEN

Start Planning Pumpkin Patch Now

By HILDA BEASTALL

Around the Victoria Day holiday next month your children or grandchildren will want to start growing pumpkin seeds.

They each expect to grow at least one enormous pumpkin as large as two heads put together. To prevent the youngsters from being disappointed you must lend a guiding hand right now.

Hilda

If you have a few seeds left in last year's packet, they will still be good to use if they spent the time in a reasonably cool kitchen drawer. (These hints apply equally well to summer and winter squash, not alone to pumpkins.)

Pumpkin plants grow best where summer days and nights are warm, and the fruits then ripen off during the early frosty nights in fall.

In our cooler summer climate, we have more chance of success if we sow the seeds indoors by mid-April and have young plants ready to put into the garden by the end of May when early morning frosts are not so likely.

Suppose you decide on four-inch clay pots. Put a piece of broken pot over the drainage hole first then fill them within a half-inch of the rim with the best soil from the garden.

Into each pot, push down two pumpkin seeds, setting them on edge. An inch-deep is fine. Level off the topsoil and water the pots.

Since they are to be kept indoors, on a windowsill, it's a good plan to stand the small pots in an old baking pan containing either damp sand or damp peatmoss. Push the pots down a bit, having the sand or peat up around each pot to prevent it drying out quickly.

The soil in the pots needs to be kept just damp, never wet or soggy. Water can go into the pan perhaps every other day, just enough to maintain the right dampness.

If two seeds germinate in the pots, wait a few days to see which is the stronger. Then gently pull out the weaker and discard.

Move the pan containing the pots, each with one growing pumpkin seedling, to a cooler and light place, giving only just enough water in the pan to prevent complete drying out of the soil in the pots.

By the middle of May, the pan with the pots should be outdoors in the day and be brought in before dark, to gradually accustom the plants to garden conditions.

Removing the pots from the plants before setting into the garden will reveal a ball of roots ready to go to work making a big pumpkin vine and big pumpkins.

With three or four plants, the child has a good chance of getting a really big one.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

One of the most exciting plays in bridge is the "squeeze." Here is an example of the squeeze in action. The deal arose in the recent Life Masters' Men's Pair Championship.

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH
♠ K Q 5 4
♡ K Q J 7
◇ A K 3
♣ K 6

WEST
♠ J 10 7 6
♡ 9
◇ J 10 9 8
♣ J 8 5 3

EAST
♠ 9 2
♡ 10 8 6 4 3
◇ 6 5
♣ Q 9 7 2

SOUTH
♠ A 8 3
♡ A 5 2
◇ Q 7 4 2
♣ A 10 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	7 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

The bidding described above occurred at one of the tables. The contract was a respectable one, and required either a 3-3 division of the missing spades or a 3-3 division of the outstanding diamonds to bring home 13 tricks. As is evident, neither of these distributions existed. West's opening diamond lead was captured by dummy's king, after which four rounds of hearts were played, South discarding a spade from his own hand on the fourth heart lead. West, who has to guard both the spades and the diamonds, was forced to discard the three, five and eight of clubs. In effect, West was "squeezed" into making these club discards, leaving him with the singleton jack of clubs.

Declarer next cashed the ace and queen of diamonds, East discarding his remaining heart on the last diamond lead. The ace, king and queen of spades were now played, East tossing a club on the third spade lead, while South discarded his last diamond. Declarer then took a "time-out" for review and analysis.

By observation, South knew that East had been dealt two spades, five hearts, two diamonds—and, hence, four clubs. West, therefore, had been dealt four spades, one heart, four diamonds and four clubs.

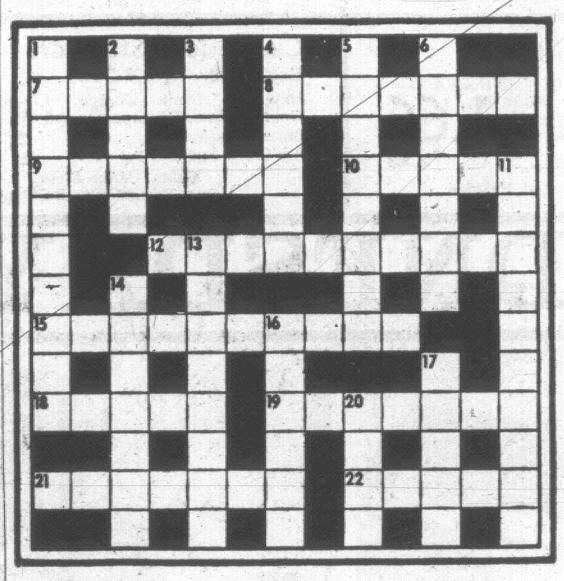

When South next led the king of clubs out of the dummy, and West, when it came his turn, followed suit with the jack, South knew that West had no more clubs since he had discarded three clubs on the four heart leads that had been made earlier. Upon winning the club lead with dummy's king, South then returned a club, and finessed his ten-spot. He now had his contracted-for grand slam.

Festival Opposed

TORONTO (CP) — About 1,500 officers—or one-quarter of the provincial police force—would be required for traffic handling and supervising if a major peace festival was held in Ontario, a provincial police spokesman said Monday. He said provincial police are trying to discourage communities from permitting such a festival by showing them a film of the rock-peace festival at Woodstock, N.Y., last year and the problems it created.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Flood Swamped City; Blizzard Followed

By BOB BOWMAN

Over the years Canada has suffered heavily from forest fires and floods. Forest fires are still a problem but floods have been brought under much better control although this is the time of year when a careful watch is kept on a number of rivers. The worst flood damage in recent years has been on the Fraser River in 1948 and the Red River in 1950.

Montreal was a victim of spring floods on a number of occasions until 1901 when stone walls were built along the river banks to protect the city. The worst Montreal flood took place on April 14, 1861, when there was a sudden rise in the St. Lawrence River and water poured into the lower part of the city without warning.

It was a Sunday night and many people were attending church services when waves of water came rushing along the streets and poured into homes and buildings. St. Stephen's Church on Dalhousie Street, and the Methodist Church on Ottawa Street, were completely surrounded by water in a few minutes, and then it came pouring through the doors. People had to stand on the pews or they would have drowned, and they had to stay there all night in the dark and freezing cold. Eventually they were rescued by small boats which were rowed into the churches.

To make matters worse, there was a blizzard in the morning when one-quarter of Montreal was partially submerged. Conditions were chaotic. People sheltered in the upper floors of homes, and those who had to attend to important duties used rowboats which acted as taxis.

The Grand Trunk Railway was unable to operate as its lines were under water as far west as Lachine, and the Victoria Bridge, across the river, had to be closed. It was regarded as one of the wonders of the world, and had been opened the previous year by Edward, Prince of Wales, who had performed a number of important ceremonies, representing his mother, Queen Victoria.

Other events on April 14:

1826 — Voluntary commutation of lands held under seigneurial tenure.

1849 — Mount Allison University, Sackville, N.B., received charter.

1851 — Britain disallowed new Canadian currency regulations.

1896 — House of Commons was deadlocked on Manitoba separate schools remedial bill.

1918 — Daylight saving time went into effect as wartime measure.

1928 — Russell House Hotel, historic Ottawa landmark, was destroyed by fire.

GETTING THE JUMP on his opposition, Antonio Porras vaults over mean-looking Spanish bull. The apprentice matador, performing at Madrid, Spain, revives old practice of bull-vaulting that went out of fashion at the turn of the century. The fans love it, but if the bull ever figures out what the pole is for Antonio may follow the proverbial cow over the moon. (AP Wirephoto.)

Spring Potato Salad

6 medium potatoes
1 small onion, chopped (⅓ to ¾ cup)
2 tsps grated lemon peel
3 tbles freshly squeezed lemon juice
3 tbles salad oil
1 tbles salt
¼ tsp pepper
½ to ¾ cup mayonnaise (not salad dressing)
6 hard-cooked eggs
1 medium cucumber, peeled, diced
1 cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped green pepper
2 tomatoes

Boil potatoes in their jackets, until just tender, drain. While still warm, peel and dice into ½-inch cubes, add onions. Combine lemon peel and juice, oil, salt and pepper; pour over warm potatoes and onions and toss to coat completely. Cover and chill 1 hour or longer. Add mayonnaise (starting with ½ cup) 4 eggs, chopped and vegetables, including 1 tomato, diced. Add more mayonnaise and salt and pepper, if desired. Place in large salad bowl, garnish with 2 eggs, sliced and 1 tomato, cut into wedges. Cover and refrigerate until ready to serve. Makes 2 quarts.

CRIPPLED APOLLO ROUNDING MOON ★★★

Space Race With Death

DESPERATE DASH HOME is being made by Apollo 13 astronauts (left to right) James Lovell, 42, John Swigert, 38, and Fred Haise, 36. They performed with cool precision in the United States' first life-or-death space drama. An explosion in the service module cut off the vital electrical power to the main engines. The crew is using the Lunar module for life support systems and to bring them back to earth. A proposed Thursday landing was ruled out. (AP Wirephotos)

Splashdown Set Friday

HOUSTON (CP)—Apollo 13's astronauts battled today to bring their crippled craft back to earth from a quarter million miles away as Mission Control decided they would aim for a Friday splashdown in the Pacific.

James A. Lovell Jr., Fred W. Haise Jr. and John L. Swigert Jr. took shortcuts to conserve their precious consumables of water, oxygen and power as they raced farther from earth toward a moon which had been their landing target until a violent eruption of a pressurized fuel tank Monday night.

They were to loop around the moon tonight and two hours later, at 9:40 p.m. EST, were to fire their lunar-lander engine to speed them back toward earth and a dawn splashdown in the Pacific north of New Zealand at 12:13 p.m. EST Friday.

★ ★ ★

Asked whether the three spacemen would make it home safely, flight controller Glynn Lunney, answered: "Yes, barely."

"We've got the situation stabilized," he said. "The most critical thing now is to keep it stabilized the rest of the flight."

As Lovell, Haise and Swigert flew away from home, here was the picture aboard their spaceship:

● The command ship, disabled by the still mysterious rupture, was shut down electrically. Emergency batteries and oxygen supplies were available to take the ship, the only vehicle that can carry the men home, through the atmosphere.

● The lunar module which became the astronauts' lifeboat was providing critical power, oxygen, water and other life support. But its supplies were dropping and the astronauts were operating on minimum requirements.

● Officials were concerned mainly with the water supply. With 72 hours to go, based on a Friday landing, they had enough water for 84 hours, a margin of 12 hours.

● The oxygen supply was more substantial. They had enough for 122 hours, a margin of 50 hours, barring unforeseen events.

● To keep the spacecraft from overheating, the astronauts' ship was occasionally rotated 90 degrees so the 247-degree heat of the sun would not bake it on one side for too long.

Looping the moon is the safest way home, officials said, because Apollo 13 was close to its target when the accident happened and already was on a course that would take it around the moon's backside.

To stop short of the moon would have required considerable power and fuel expenditure, something the astronauts don't have with their big command-ship engine made idle by electrical failure.

The only powerplant available is the lunar module descent engine, the one intended to lower Lovell and Haise to the moon's surface. The spacemen fired the engine 30 seconds early today to adjust their course slightly to a path that would take them around the moon and bring them back to earth late Friday if they made no other manoeuvre.

If that engine failed to ignite, Apollo 13 would have swung back toward the earth but would have missed by some 20,000 miles and would have been lost forever in space.

Officials are concerned mainly with the water supply. With 75 hours to go, based on a Friday landing, the spaceship had enough water for 88 hours, a margin of 13 hours. To have this margin, the astronauts will have to power down to minimum electrical power for most of the journey, reducing the average hourly water consumption from five to 2.68 pounds. The water is used for cooling the electronics and cabin oxygen as well as for drinking.

★ ★ ★

At the same time, the oxygen supply was good for another 125 hours, a margin of 50 hours, barring unforeseen events.

Neither the United States nor Russia has a space-rescue capability. So the astronauts will have to depend on their skill and that of hundreds of experts on the ground to get home.

Following the tank rupture, the astronauts activated the systems of of the attached lunar module, or LM. They opened the connecting tunnel between the two craft so oxygen would flow into the command ship and make it livable.

The cramped LM is difficult to sleep in, so the astronauts will rest in the command cabin.

The astronauts remained calm and poised as they wrestled with the many procedures needed to stabilize their craft and to stretch their consumables.

To improve oxygen circulation and prevent a buildup of carbon dioxide in the command ship, Mission Control Centre told the astronauts to use a hose from one of the unused space suits and extend it from the LM oxygen supply through the tunnel.

'13' Lives Up to Its Legend; It's No Joke . . . Not Lucky

At first the astronauts called the number assigned to the third moon mission "a joke." One said it was "lucky 13." But all bad luck traditionally associated with the number struck Monday. The classically unlucky number also cropped up in: Blastoff time: 13:13 (CST); Explosion: on the 13th day. Anyone have a rabbit's foot to shoot aloft?

Due to difficulties encountered with the flight of Apollo 13, all television programming of the flight is subject to last minute change. Viewers are advised to watch news broadcasts for details of Apollo coverage.

Water is a critical problem for the astronauts. There is only a 44-hour supply in the lunar module fuel cells with 77 hours minimum remaining before splashdown. The crew has a 48-hour supply in its survival kits for themselves and for cooling purposes. Food is no problem and there is a good supply of oxygen.

★ ★ ★

Sleep will be at a premium for the three men. A schedule has been set up so that at least one astronaut will be awake at all times.

Lunar module pilot Haise began a six-hour sleep — if he can — early this morning while Lovel and Swigert keep a watch on the vital oxygen and water supplies. It was turn about at 9 this morning.

The explosion which aborted the moon mission ruptured the space capsule's fuel cell power generators' oxygen tank. Without oxygen, the generators cannot operate and the command ship powerless with the exception of emergency batteries which will be used in the re-entry phase.

Apollo 13's service module remains bolted to the command ship but it is useless. The command module, however, is intact and is vital to carry the pilots into the earth's atmosphere at a fiery 25,000 miles per hour. There is some discussion among space officials that the service module will be jettisoned to allow easier manoeuvring of the command ship and lunar module.

★ ★ ★

A 30-second rocket firing early this morning was a life or death "burn" for the three astronauts. It steered their crippled space craft on a path that would bring them back to earth with only minor course corrections.

The only luck riding with the Apollo 13 crew so far is that the accident happened on the way to the moon and not after the lunar landing phase was completed. The landing craft is supplying oxygen, water and electricity to power computers, navigation instruments and radios—all vital for a space voyage.

The blast that knocked out Apollo 13's electrical system may have been caused by a small meteoroid. This theory has not been discounted by space officials. "It had to be something violent that occurred in Bay 4 of the ship. If it were a meteorite it would be quite violent," said former Apollo astronaut James McDivitt.

Lights out is the word in an attempt to conserve electricity. Astronauts in the command ship are using flashlights to watch instruments.

LITTLE IMPACT HERE IN BUILDING LOCKOUT

There has been little impact in Victoria so far on the province-wide lockout of seven unions by the Construction Labor Relations Association. See story Page 2.

In the Capital region where an estimated $25 million worth of major work is at stake, most jobs were normal or close to it at press time.

Contractors and unions said most local work is in the finishing stage where subcontractors are involved. These operators are not part of the contractor's bargaining association.

Copper Price Hike Blocked

TORONTO (CP) — Noranda Mines Ltd. said today the federal government has denied it permission to raise the price of copper to Canadian customers.

The company told the government it intended to increase the price to 65 cents a pound from 59 cents.

The new price, the company said, would be equivalent to the present U.S. producers price; eight cents a pound less than the average cost of copper to U.S. consumers; and 22 cents a pound less than the prevailing overseas prices.

U.S. producers recently increase their prices.

A company statement today said: "Noranda has been informed by the federal government that no price increase will be permitted.

SELLS HIGHER IN U.S.

Noranda sells in the U.S. market at the prevailing price, but to Canadian customers at the lower level.

Noranda officials declined any comment on the government's order.

It appeared, however, that the ruling likely was based on a recommendation of the prices and incomes commission which has been keeping a close eye on price and wage increases.

The commission itself has no regulatory power, but reports to the federal government.

Noranda produced about 327,000 tons of refined copper during 1969 and reported net earnings of $54,189,000 or $2.24 a share, up from $52,476,000 or $2.20 a share in 1968.

Noranda and other major producers announced in late December that the price for Canadian customers would be increased to 66 from 57 cents effective Jan. 2.

Later, at the request of the government, the increases were postponed to March 1.

The government then permitted an increase to 59 cents effective March 1.

Court Bars Oil Line

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — With the observation that "you can't violate the law just by spending $1,000,000,000," a federal judge Monday barred the start of an 800-mile oil pipeline through Alaska, and gave conservationists a victory over big business.

Three conservation groups persuaded Judge George L. Hart Jr. of the U.S. district court to issue an injunction that may delay the start of the project—which conservationists say could despoil the Alaskan wilderness—for months or longer.

A consortium of eight companies want to build the 800-mile pipeline—the world's biggest at four feet in diameter—to bring future oil wealth from their leases on the rich North Slope of Alaska to the Pacific port of Valdez.

MUST AIR ISSUES

But Hart's injunction bars the interior department from issuing the required government permits until all issues, including possible pollution of the Alaskan wilderness, are thoroughly aired in court.

The conservationists, representing the Wilderness Society, the Friends of the Earth and the Environmental Defence Fund, laid heaviest emphasis on arguments that the pipeline and a proposed road to run parallel to it for 390 miles could do irreparable harm to the Alaskan environment.

But Hart seemed more interested in the fundamental legal question of whether the law permitted using the amount of public land the developers require for the pipeline and the road. The conservationists said the right-of-way sought by the oil companies for the pipeline alone would be wider than that permitted by law.

They said the granting of an additional right-of-way for the service road would clearly not be authorized by laws governing the use of public lands.

Food Costs Drop

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer price index rose to 128.9 last month from 128.7 in February, mainly because of higher housing and clothing costs, although food prices dropped significantly, the Dominiin Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The index, based on 1961 prices equalling 100, was 123.2 in March last year.

The increase between February and March was less than it was between January and February, returning to the rate of increase that prevailed two months earlier.

In percentage terms, the index rose two-tenths of 1 per cent in the month and 4.6 per cent in the year from last March. In February, the index was riding 5 per cent higher than a year earlier.

Spill Reported

KODIAK, Alaska (AP) — An unidentified Soviet oil tanker captain was arrested Monday on charges of spilling oil in the Gulf of Alaska less than a mile north of Marmot Island near here, the coast guard said.

Moon Boredom Shattered By Crisis

By HOWARD SIMONS

WASHINGTON (WP) — America's lackadaisical attitude about manned space flight was shattered Monday night.

The unexplained "bang" that knocked out Apollo 13's ambitious flight plans jolted a nation grown overconfident with space successes; almost bored with the mechanistic journeys to the moon.

As the first words came that the three astronauts were in peril, earthbound fears began to race along with the moonbound craft. The astronauts seemed remarkably calm, most other persons desperate.

The mission began on an almost silly note — one of the astronauts might have German measles. This led to the inevitable jokes.

More telling, perhaps, there was diminished interest in the flight this time; fewer newspaper reporters at Cape Kennedy and Houston, fewer newspaper stories. Indeed, on the Saturday of liftoff, Apollo 13 took a back seat to President Nixon's Supreme court hassle. What could go wrong after 22 successful American manned space flights? German measles.

And the flight itself, with substitute John L. Swigert, was described as "flawless."

Then "bang" and interest and apprehension in space heightened again.

It was not just routine now. Three men were in danger of being marooned in space (a movie by that name and with that theme is now showing round the country).

As tension heightened, the inevitable questions began to intrude on one's innate fears. Would they get back? Could they get back?

There is no way in the world at present to rescue men stranded in space. The astronauts know this. It may take longer for the country to absorb the fact. One thing seems certain, Apollo 13's troubles are bound to revive the debate over a rescue capability.

White House Beat Never Bored Smith

By CARROLL KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON (WP) — Merriman Smith was the best known White House reporter not only because of his aggressive spirit and great ability but because he was both a romantic and a professional.

Smith, 57, who died apparently by his own hand Monday night, combined the romance of the old-fashioned Gung-ho reporter with a sturdy independence and professionalism that kept him at the top of his profession under six presidents.

Smith was never bored by his beat, yet it is one that is nearly always either feast or famine. He thought that everything that happened at the White House was important, full of romance and that he played a part on the great stage. He was fascinated not only by everything the president did but by everything else in the White House operation. He knew the secret service men, the secretaries, the White House police and above all the communications officer.

He was always fascinated by the art of communication. He knew that as a wire service reporter he faced a deadline somewhere every minute of the day and night. Wherever he was, he knew how to communicate with his office promptly and effectively.

He may have been the fastest reporter of his time. He could handle any story with lightning speed and also with accuracy and understanding.

When President Kennedy was shot in Dallas, Smitty's bulletin was the first to reach the world. He won a Pulitzer prize for the speed and skill with which he reported that tragedy.

He won a National Headliners Award for his reporting of Roosevelt's death at Warm Springs, Ga., in 1945.

He also was indefatigable, or almost so. He worked extremely long hours. During campaigns or presidential trips, he was on the job night and day, always fascinated by every detail that threw light on the personality of the man he was covering.

He had several bouts with fatigue, as anyone would who thought he could work around the clock.

New Skipper Takes Over Icebreaker

ABOARD ST. LAURENT (CP) — A replacement skipper for Canada's biggest icebreaker is expected to assume command today.

Capt. George S. Burdock, 55, of Halifax is to be flown to the icebreaker from Greenland where he arrived on a flight from Halifax Monday night. A native of Belleoram, Nfld., Capt. Burdock will replace Capt. Paul Fournier who was evacuated to hospital in Greenland Monday.

Capt. Fournier has a bleeding ulcer.

The transport department said Dr. Andrew Moore, a Canadian physician, was flown to Greenland to attend Capt. Fournier.

The Louis S. St. Laurent is accompanying the giant United States tanker Manhattan on her second experimental voyage through the Northwest Passage.

Capt. Burdock had been originally assigned to the St. Laurent for this voyage so that Capt. Fournier could attend Ottawa ceremonies honoring him for commanding the icebreaker John A. Macdonald during the Manhattan's first trip last year. However, Capt. Fournier requested that he remain in command.

Dr. Moore is expected to make arrangements to evacuate Capt. Fournier to hospital in Canada once the skipper is pronounced fit for travel.

Police Force To Increase In Saanich

The Saanich police department will be boosted by 12 new men to a staff of 83 this year to meet sharp increases in crime.

This was approved by Saanich council Monday night. Council heard police chief W. A. Pearson's annual report in which he said there are "some startling facts" emphasizing the need for a staff increase.

This included an average increase over 1968 of 51 per cent in a selection of offences (including the more common, such as assaults, robberies, theft, breaking and entering), a 47-per-cent increase in motor vehicle accidents to 2,029 and a 24-per-cent increase in property damage, to $752,190.

Police department staffs in other communities total 126 in Victoria, 36 in Nanaimo, 107 in Surrey, 159 in Burnaby and 30 in Delta.

'STAGGERING RATE'

Mayor Hugh Curtis, chairman of the police commission, said demands upon the police are going up at a "staggering rate."

Council approved the police budget which shows an increase of $151,666 over 1969 to $837,900 including the 12 new men, four of whom will be hired at year's end.

During three hours of budget discussions, $60,900 was cut and $500 was added to the provisional 1970 budget of $9.2 million. The net decrease is about half a mill of the provisional increase of 6.93 mills but this includes 3 mills for garbage collection previously paid separately.

The 1969 budget amounted to $7.8 million and the municipal mill rate was 32.6, including debt and hospital charges. Education costs are extra and are set separately by two school boards.

LITTER CONTAINERS

The only increase in the provisional budget was $500 for litter containers, bringing this year's allotment to $3,000 compared with an expenditure of $1,131 last year.

Most of the cuts were made in the public works budget with snow and ice control the biggest single one, down by $14,000 to $10,000.

A provisional increase of eight firefighters was cut to four, saving $11,700 this year. Present staff is 70.

The annual debt charge paid by property owners in the sewerage enterprise area—that is, those properties already served by sanitary sewer and those which will be serviced in the coming four years—will go up to $26 a year from $22.

SEWER CHARGE

Comptroller-treasurer John Tribe said last year's levy didn't meet debt requirements and in addition there will be a charge from the Capital Regional District.

No change was made in the annual $7 maintenance sewer charge, paid only by those who have sewers, and no change was made in the various rebates on debt charges previously set for the existing sewered areas.

A move to increase aldermanic pay to $3,300 a year from $2,400 was defeated 7-to-2. A subsequent motion to refer the question of an increase in council pay to finance committee for review later this year was approved.

A number of aldermen said this is not the time to vote themselves a raise when the general call was for restraint.

Budget discussions will continue tonight at 7:30 in the municipal hall and are expected to conclude Wednesday night with the setting of the municipal mill rate.

ONE PART OF MISSION STILL ALIVE

Times News Services

HOUSTON — Only one part of the Apollo 13 mission may survive to completion—the impact of the spent third stage of the Saturn V rocket which is expected to crash into the moon with the force equivalent to the explosion of 11 tons of TNT.

Racing at 5,800 miles an hour the rocket's jolt is expected to create seismic shock waves from as deep as 100 miles below the lunar surface.

The Saturn is to hit the moon at 5:10 this afternoon.

Area Construction Projects Escaping Lockout's Impact

By AB KENT

The impact of a province-wide construction industry lockout of seven unions has yet to be felt in Greater Victoria, where major projects were still under way today.

Contractors who are members of Construction Labor Relations Association served notice on the unions last week and made the lockout effective from 8 a.m. today. A complete shutdown of B.C. construction could stop an estimated $200 million worth of work by 40,000 tradesmen.

In the capital region, however, where an estimated $25 million worth of major work is at stake, most jobs were progressing normally or nearly normally this morning.

Spokesmen for contractors and trade unions said much of the local work is in the finishing stage where sub-contractors are doing most of the jobs. These are largely independent operators, not members of the contractors' bargaining association.

NOT 'SERIOUS'

CLRA took lockout action because the trades were not bargaining seriously and were making exhorbitant demands, association president Charles Connaghan said.

Meanwhile, the unions through B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council and Vancouver Island Building Trades Council, have agreed not to picket jobs where lockouts are in effect.

This is to permit tradesmen from unions which have not had lockout notice to continue working.

Vancouver Island Building Trades Council met here today and set up a lockout committee with all the building trades represented. It was agreed that locked out trades would have to provide notice to the other unions if they felt it necessary to set up picket lines.

Under no circumstances will a union member perform the normal work of a locked-out members, said John Schibli, secretary of the council.

BULLETINS PLANNED

Lockout bulletins will be issued from time to time and circulated to affiliates of the council, and regular meetings of the lockout committee will be held each Monday and Thursday morning, said Schibli.

A survey of all affiliates on the Island was to be carried out today to ascertain the effect of the lockout.

Connaghan said Monday the lockout would result in "the shutdown of virtually all construction in B.C.," but if that occurs it may be some time in coming.

SPEED UP POSSIBLE

What may accelerate the situation on the mainland is a strike-lockout of cement track drivers, shutting off the supply of ready-mix concrete and bulk cement to heavy construction jobs. This has a domino effect on other trades as time passes, building tradesmen point out.

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson said Monday afternoon the government won't intervene in the dispute which he said doesn't qualify for compulsory arbitration under the "public interest" provisions of the Mediation Commission Act.

He said he regrets the shutdown action and agreed that a prolonged work stoppage could have a damaging impact on the provincial economy. Industry Minister Waldo Skillings said last week the "entire fabric of the economic system" would be endangered by a construction shutdown.

READY TO HELP

The government is ready to offer help in every way possible in bringing the dispute to an end, Peterson said.

Oppostion Leader Dave Barrett said he is concerned that the labor relations atmosphere in B.C. has reduced management to "crude confrontation" tactics.

"It is recognized by the general public that we need compulsory negotiation, not compulsory arbitration," Barrett said.

He said he favors the Swedish system in which a series of ascending penalties make it beneficial for labor and management to negoitate well in advance of expiry of contracts and to continue negotiating to a solution.

'ABSURD' SYSTEM

Barrett said it is "absurd" for labor-management disputes to go from crisis to crisis with politicians stepping in at the last moment to solve the disputes.

Federal Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey has made a name for himself in that fashion, he said, "but it's hardly a way to run a labor department" or a labor relations system, he added. The "basic inadequacies" in the system should be corrected, he said.

The dispute that has idled the Vancouver Sun and the Vancouver Province for almost two months is an example of the system's weakness in failing to make continuing negotiations a necessity, Barrett said. B.C. should be beyond the stage of "frontier negotiations" and "frontier politics" which depend on "crude confrontation" techniques.

Among the major contractors who enforced the lockout in Greater Victoria are H. E. Fowler, which is building the city swimming pool in Central Park; Dominion Construction, with the Hillside shopping centre and Toronto-Dominion Bank building; A. and B. Construction, with University Heights shopping centre; Farmer Construction, with University of Victoria biological sciences building; Tideline Construction, with Imperial Construction's James May nursing home project; and Caná Construction (formerly Burns and Dutton), which has Glendale Hospital and Duncan courthouse projects.

The lockout applies to laborers, bricklayers and helpers, tunnel and rock workers, operating engineers, cement masons, teamsters and heat and frost insulators.

ALL PROJECTS

The trade most affected in Victoria appears to be laborers, which are common to virtually all projects, although in limited capacity in the latter stages of construction.

Carpenters are working, as are glaziers, plasterers, plumbers, sheet metal workers, lathers and painters.

Enrolment Rises Fast At Blanshard

Opening of Blanshard Court at the beginning of the month boosted enrolment at Blanshard Elementary by 42 pupils, and another 150 are expected to enter the school in May and June as additional units of the housing project are completed.

Harold O'Donnell, Greater Victoria school board's director of elementary instruction, was reporting to trustees Monday on population shifts within the district.

He said overcrowding at Victoria West elementary will be taken care of next fall bu shifting some students to Lampson Street elementary where space is available.

Director of instruction John Wiens said six sub-committees of the board Project Learning have been asked to submit reports by the end of May.

The six groups, representing school population areas of the district, have been meeting since early in the year to work out what they think should be the aims of the education system locally over the next decade.

It was also reported 57 teachers recently took part in a creative writing workshop for intermediate teachers.

Russian N-Sub Missing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Soviet nuclear attack submarine, perhaps with as many as 88 crew members aboard, apparently has been lost in Atlantic waters 400 miles northwest of the Spanish coast.

The word came Monday from the United States defence department, which reported that American planes observed at least some of the drama of the high-seas incident before the submarine disappeared last weekend.

The 3,500-ton vessel, one of a class of hunter-killer submarines, was seen in distress Friday and Saturday, then vanished Sunday—with two oil slicks remaining.

No one actually saw her go down but U.S. Navy anti-submarine patrol planes had watched during the weekend as two Soviet surface ships attempted unsuccessfully to tie a thesubin towline to rsagu oe towline to the sub in rough seas.

There was no immediate reaction from the Soviet government to Washington's announcement. But Westerners in Moscow believed the submarine was on its way to take part in large-scale manoeuvres which the Soviet defence department announced today are being held in both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans through May.

New York Press Strike Postponed

NEW YORK (AP) — A scheduled 6 a.m. EST strike by the New York Newspaper Guild against the New York Post was postponed indefinitely early today to allow mediators more time to try and resolve a contract dispute.

Labor mediator Theodore Kheel announced the move after a day and night of intensive mediation efforts. There was no new management offer to break what he had called the "total impasse" in the talks.

The guild broke off negotiations with The Post Sunday night, vowing there would be no resumption of talks until management offered major concessions. The Post replied it would not bargain under threat of a strike.

The Post, together with the New York Times, The Daily News and the Long Island Press, has continued to publish in the absence of strike action by 10 unions whose 13,000 members at the four papers have worked without a contract since March 30.

The publishers have offered a 16½-per-cent increase over a three-year period. The unions have not disclosed their demands.

CIVIL SERVICE CASTS VOTE ON PAY HIKES

Victoria members of the B.C. Government Employees' Union voted Monday on whether to accept pay increases averaging 7½ per cent for 1970.

Other locals of the 14,000-member union are voting during the coming 10 days, after which the total result will be announced.

About 1,800 members were eligible to vote in Victoria.

A union spokesman said earlier that if members vote to accept the announced increase, the issue will be closed for this year.

But if members reject it, then the union's negotiating committee will seek to open salary discussions with the Civil Service Commission.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The extensive high pressure area over B.C will remain stationary for at least the next 48 hours and keep skies mainly clear. Daytime temperatures will continue fairly mild but frost will occur in most areas overnight.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Population control may some day demand that parents no longer may be surprised by having twins. Researchers think that man may learn how to control the production of twins through greater knowledge of changes in the weather.

Some medical men, after years of studying the facts available about twinning, believe that multiple births may sometimes be the result of the effect of weather on parents. In one research effort in Chicago, the doctors knew that the area visited by a polar air mass — a cold front — at the estimated time of a conception that in due course resulted in a set of triplets.

More study brought the conclusion that twinning is more frequent in the stormy North of the United States than it is in the more equable South and is more likely when conception occurs during or shortly after the passage of a cold front.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, APRIL 14, 1970 —PAGE 9

And When You've Finished This, Gang, Write If You Get Work

Final exams are no longer the rule in many University of Victoria courses, but thousands of them are going to be written anyway between now and the end of the month. First group of students to sit down to three-hour monsters at 9 a.m. today included several hundred in the Uvic auditorium. When exams end May 1 more than 5,000 Uvic students will join some 40,000 other post-secondary students in the annual search for summer jobs. Predictions are as many as one-third will go jobless and be forced to spend their holiday doing nothing, and, for many, that will mean not enough money for next term. (Bill Halkett photo)

All Tracks Cleared For Capital Budget

The Monday morning blues at city hall cleared quickly today with the return of Ald. Peter Pollen from Japan.

City officials said Monday they didn't expect Pollen back in the city until Wednesday and expressed fears that he might be absent for Thursday's special council meeting and the crucial vote on the five-year capital budget referendum date.

Arriving with Pollen was good news from the city's legal department on an earlier ruling that a two-thirds of full council was required to support the $6.3 million referendum before it could go to tht people April 30.

SIMPLE MAJORITY

"That was our first understanding," city manager Dennis Young said today. "But we have since been informed that a simple majority of council is all that is required to put the referendum to the people. It is only if we amend the referendum, or attempt to amend it, that two-thirds of full council is required to vote in the affirmative."

With Pollen back from his quick trip to the Orient five aldermen are now in the city and should be present for Thursday's vote. If they are unanimous they provide enough strength to remove fears that the planned April 30 vote might have to be postponed.

Other good news came from the home of Mayor Courtney Haddock.

Confined to bed for the past week with pleurisy, Haddock expects to be back in the public eye Wednesday afternoon for a press conference on the capital budget program.

He also hopes to be able to attend Thursday's council meeting to support the budget vote and thus remove any doubt of council's solid backing for the five-year plan.

Carl Honored By Museum

The widow of Clifford Carl, former head of the Provincial Museum, has been named honorary curator of the museum's marine biology department.

Museum director Bristol Foster said today a second tribute to the man who headed the museum for 29 years will be to name the marine biology floor of the new curatorial tower after Carl.

Mrs. Carl, who has a doctorate in biology herself, will be listed at the museum under her maiden name, Dr. Josephine F. L. Hart.

BISHOP INSTALLATION SLATED FOR MAY 7

Dean Frederick Roy Gartrell of Ottawa will be consecrated bishop and installed as eighth bishop of the Anglican diocese of Vancouver Island May 7 at 7:30 p.m.

The double ceremony will be held in Christ Church Cathedral.

Gartrell succeeds Bishop John Ogle Anderson, who died here last November after only four months in office.

BURNHAM
. . . wins by default?

Vet Convinced Ensign Will Fly

Victoria's Red Ensign champion is preparing what he hopes is the final shot in his five-year war with the federal government to have the present national flag removed and the "old red duster" reinstated.

George Burnham, 203 Menzies, challenged the government in the B.C. Supreme Court Feb. 13 and made a statement of claim March 23.

The federal government, represented by Department of Justice lawyer Norman Mullins, was given 14 days to prepare a case.

IT'S PERUVIAN

The time is up and Burnham says he's now prepared to apply for a judgment by default.

Burnham, who will be 80 in July, is positive he'll win.

"We haven't heard from them because they have no case. Section 269 of the Criminal Code of Canada states that you can't take other people's porperty and convert it to your own use.

"The government has done this. They took the Peruvian flag and put a maple leaf in the centre—what's more, it's not even a maple leaf."

Veteran of the Fist and Second World Wars, Burnham claims the Red Ensign was designated and dedicated as the national flag at Vimy Ridge April 9, 1917.

"There were 9,000 casualties in that battle. We paid too high a price to lose our flag now."

Burnham claims he has thousands of members— "I've been too busy to count them"—in the group he heads, Our Flags of the Century Association. Their donations, he says, has made his legal battle possible.

Date for the final round has not yet been set.

Oak Bay MLA Upset But Won't Quit Party

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said Monday he is sure that Scott Wallace, the Oak Bay Social Credit MLA, will do whatever he feels necessary "in true conscience" in his fight to change government hospital policy.

Barrett was replying, at a press conference, to the question whether he will invite Wallace to join the New Democratic Party after Wallace had said this week he is "very upset" about Health Minister Ralph Loffmark's policies.

Wallace even predicted the defeat of the government if it continues ts hospital policies and accused it of reneging on its campaign promises to change from "a blacktop government" to one more concerned with people.

But Wallace said later he was "staggered to hear" that Barrett had been asked whether he would welcome the Oak Bay MLA into NDP ranks.

Wallace says he intends to meet the premier when he returns from a post-session holiday.

"I have no intention of leaving the Social Credit Party. I've agreed with their policies in the past, and much of what they're doing now," said Wallace, who was one of the most enthusiastic opponents of socialism in his first experience in the legislature.

"But I think they (the government) have some measures that could be bettered. What I am doing will prove whether a backbencher can be a useful and effective member of government."

Barrett said he sympathizes with Wallace "now that he has discovered that what the opposition has been saying all along is true."

Loffmark Triggers Outburst

"I hope he will continue his effort along with us to have the people of B.C. recognize the desperate shortage of hospital beds in B.C. and the lack of an over-all blueprint for hospital services," Barrett said.

"I don't have any comment to make on his statement that the government will fall on this issue," Barrett said before reporters could ask for a comment.

He sidestepped the question of whether an invitation would be issued for Wallace to join the NDP, saying he knew that Wallace is a man of conscience who would follow his own principles.

Wallace's outburst was triggered by Loffmark's announcement that the government will set up a committee to study ways of cutting hospital costs by centralizing such things as laundry services, instituting more bulk services and expanding day-care services.

Wallace retorted that the federal government in co-operation with provincial health ministers made such a study in 1969. "I showed them (the cabinet ministers) the study in the house."

He said the 1969 study came up with 160 suggestions — "all of them practical, realistic and commonsense. Why B.C. has to turn around and set up its own committee I don't for the life of me know."

Wallace said Loffmark's intention to centralize laundry services is tardy, because the Greater Victoria Regional Board already has this in hand.

Play Bomb Issue Easily Defused

It doesn't take Victoria parks administrator Herb Warren long to wipe out nuclear arms.

Confronted with a complaint regarding a "USAF bomb-swing" in Beacon Hill Park, Warren ordered the offensive weapon removed to his maintenance sheds.

There "USAF" was scoured from the tail of the swing, the fins were painted black and the forward end got a couple of eyes.

"The bomb," Warren told the city's parks committee this morning, "is now officially a whale."

Couple Attacked By Sword Waver

Gersharn Singh Mann, 28, of Vancouver, was charged in provincial court here Monday with attempted murder, assault causing bodily harm and theft over $50.

Police said a man burst into the Sikh Temple on Graham Street during worship services Sunday, stole a sword and went out and attacked an Esquimalt man and injured the man's wife.

Mann, who told Judge William Ostler he was a security guard at Oakalla Prison, was remanded to April 20 for plea and election of trial. Bail was set at $5,000.

He is charged with attempting to murder Ragbier Singh Bhandar, 271 Nicola Place, and assaulting his wife, Hargian, who was treated in hospital Sundy for a cut to her left arm.

Police said a man entered the temple about 1:30 a.m. Sunday and stole a three-foot-long cavalry sword from the altar while East Indian priest Ajit Singh was reading a service.

No one tried to stop the man, because tradition demands that once a service is started it cannot be interrupted.

The Bhandars were attacked in the parking lot at the Dominion Hotel, 802 Esquimalt Road.

Arthur Mayse . . .

WHATEVER THE STATUS of our Arctic sea lanes, the Strait of Juan de Fuca is a waterway which we share with the United States. If our friend and uneasy neighbor insists on shipping nerve gas through it, I fail to see how Canada can prevent her.

We can protest any lack of adequate safety measures in running the filthy cargoes through the Strait. Also, we can hope that the American military will up the safety factor by borrowing good Canadian west coast pilots for the traverse.

But until international law gets around to defining what may or may not be transported past another nations shores, all we're likely to get from hollering is such relief as protest may bring to outraged feelings.

In the matter of these five shiploads of nerve gas, our course seems to be dictated pretty plainly. Avoid useless panic; pray that Civil Defence won't contemplate a mass exodus over the Malahat, and determinedly enjoy the nice weather.

If you can think of a better course within the bounds of what's possible to us and what isn't, I'd be glad to hear. So, perhaps, will External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp.

Meanwhile, in a world that still countenances the weapons of Armageddon, there's a measure of irony in the return of the nerve gas from Okinawa to the land of its origin. Americans, especially those in the states through which the stuff will pass, aren't of a mood to welcome it home. Neither is a U.S. Army saddled with a ticklish disposal problem.

And not, I trust, one to be solved by dumping the evil mix into an ocean already sufficiently polluted.

Why, after all, should the fishes be required to pay for man's supreme folly?

AMONG THE NUMEROUS traps that life holds for well-meaning parents is one that I'll call the bicycle syndrome.

It makes itself manifest when the boy or girl who yearned desperately for a brave new bike at age 12 is two or three years older.

One day, the bike is in use. The next, it's relegated to the back of the garage, and you're an old meanie if you so much as suggest that it be ridden to school.

There's no earthly use in pointing out that the bike's in perfect condition, and that cycling is quicker than walking. The transition has been made, and there's no turning back.

That, at least, is what I thought until this pleasant spring.

But I've noted a related phenomenon no less startling. Any number of those same young people — now grown to adulthood — are riding bikes again.

On Sunday, they were all over the place, pedalling along in groups or couples. They appeared to be completely free of self-consciousness, and were obviously enjoying themselves.

That's all to the good, and if the trend continues, it will provide a course of action for parents whose 15-year-olds have disowned bikes formerly held dear.

Stow those unwanted wheels away. In a few years, the owners may be back for them!

IN A YEAR WHEN EXPO 70 is attracting Canadians to Japan, here's a Japanese girl who wants to visit Canada. Her name is Keiko Nemura, and her struggle with our difficult language is apparent in her letter.

"I am interested in Canada and I have been wishing to go to your country. I have known many things about Canada with your books and newspapers, but sincerely wish to learn how your people live and how to think with my own eyes and ears.

"I make a plan of going to Canada for two or three months in this summer."

Miss Nemura asks whether a Victoria family may be willing to take her into it's home for her stay.

"I believe that I will be able to learn many things from your peoples," she notes.

She adds that she works for a trading company in Osaka, and gives her age as 27.

I'll keep her address handy on the chance that a local family might wish to look into this request. If so, get in touch.

That's it, except to note that my wife is forging staunchly into her seventh week without a cigarette.

"In a miserable kind of way," says she, "I'm glad I gave them up!"

Ask The Times

Q. What were the names of the crew and the launch date of Apollo 12?

A. Charles Conrad Jr., Richard F. Gordon and Alan F. Bean. Their spacecraft left Cape Kennedy at 2:09 p.m. EST on Nov. 14, 1969. The craft suffered power difficulties when hit by a lightning bolt during lift-off, but, contrary to this week's Apollo 13 voyage, the remainder of the mission was a success.

Square Music In the Square

There'll be music in Centennial Square this summer if Victoria city council endorses a public works committee request.

And the hope is that the golden tones will have a "conditioning and deterrent influence" on hippie loungers.

The committee this morning agreed to recommend a six-month trial for the canned "motivational background music" for the Centennial Square arcade, the two public lobbies and the staff lunchroom in city hall.

Ald. Peter Pollen made the recommendation, noting that his business establishment had used the piped music for some time with considerable success.

The music company, in a letter to council, claimed it would encourage city hall staff to work harder, provide a pleasant atmosphere for taxpayers and, since it would be "square music,"it could have " conditioning and deterrent influence" on the hippies.

City Treasurer James Bramley and City Manager Dennis Young were the least enthusiastic to the idea of piped music.

"It might be good in some places, but I sincerely question it's installation in government offices," Young said.

Pollen disagreed.

"It might soothe the taxpayers," he said.

CRIPPLED APOLLO ROUNDING MOON

Space Race With Death

DESPERATE DASH HOME is being made by Apollo 13 astronauts (left to right) James Lovell, 42, John Swigert, 38, and Fred Haise, 36. They performed with cool precision in the United States' first life-or-death space drama. An explosion in the service module cut off the vital electrical power to the main engines. The crew is using the Lunar module for life support systems and to bring them back to earth. A proposed Thursday landing was ruled out. (AP Wirephotos)

Splashdown Set Friday

HOUSTON (CP)—Apollo 13's astronauts battled today to bring their crippled craft back to earth from a quarter million miles away as Mission Control decided they would aim for a Friday splashdown in the Pacific.

James A. Lovell Jr., Fred W. Haise Jr. and John L. Swigert Jr. took shortcuts to conserve their precious supplies of water, oxygen and power as they raced farther from earth toward a moon which had been their landing target until a violent eruption of a pressurized fuel tank Monday night.

They were to loop around the moon tonight and two hours later, at 9:40 p.m. EST, were to fire their lunar-lander engine to speed them back toward earth and a dawn splashdown in the Pacific north of New Zealand at 12:13 p.m. EST Friday.

★ ★ ★

Asked whether the three spacemen would make it home safely, flight controller Glynn Lunney, answered: "Yes, barely."

"We've got the situation stabilized," he said. "The most critical thing now is to keep it stabilized the rest of the flight."

As Lovell, Haise and Swigert flew away from home, here was the picture aboard their spaceship:

● The command ship, disabled by the still mysterious rupture, was shut down electrically. Emergency batteries and oxygen supplies were available to take the ship, the only vehicle that can carry the men home, through the atmosphere.

● The lunar module which became the astronauts' lifeboat was providing critical power, oxygen, water and other life support. But its supplies were dropping and the astronauts were operating on minimum requirements.

● Officials were concerned mainly with the water supply. With 72 hours to go, based on a Friday landing, they had enough water for 84 hours, a margin of 12 hours.

● The oxygen supply was more substantial. They had enough for 122 hours, a margin of 50 hours, barring unforeseen events.

● To keep the spacecraft from overheating, the astronauts' ship was occasionally rotated 90 degrees so the 247-degree heat of the sun would not bake it on one side for too long.

Looping the moon is the safest way home, officials said, because Apollo 13 was close to its target when the accident happened and already was on a course that would take it around the moon's backside.

To stop short of the moon would have required considerable power and fuel expenditure, something the astronauts don't have with their big command-ship engine made idle by electrical failure.

The only powerplant available is the lunar module descent engine, the one intended to lower Lovell and Haise to the moon's surface. The spacemen fired the engine 30 seconds early today to adjust their course slightly to a path that would take them around the moon and bring them back to earth late Friday if they made no other manoeuvre.

If that engine failed to ignite, Apollo 13 would have swung back toward the earth but would have missed by some 20,000 miles and would have been lost forever in space.

Officials are concerned mainly with the water supply. With 72 hours to go, based on a Friday landing, the spaceship had enough water for 84 hours, a margin of 12 hours. To have this margin, the astronauts will have to power down to minimum electrical power for most of the journey, reducing the average hourly water consumption from five to 2.68 pounds. The water is used for cooling the electronics and cabin oxygen as well as for drinking.

★ ★ ★

At the same time, the oxygen supply was good for another 122 hours, a margin of 50 hours, barring unforeseen events.

Neither the United States nor Russia has a space-rescue capability. So the astronauts will have to depend on their skill and that of hundreds of experts on the ground to get home.

Following the tank rupture, the astronauts activated the systems of of the attached lunar module, or LM. They opened the connecting tunnel between the two craft so oxygen would flow into the command ship and make it livable.

The cramped LM is difficult to sleep in, so the astronauts will rest in the command cabin.

The astronauts remained calm and poised as they wrestled with the many procedures needed to stabilize their craft and to stretch their consumables.

To improve oxygen circulation and prevent a buildup of carbon dioxide in the command ship, Mission Control Centre told the astronauts to use a hose from one of the unused space suits and extend it from the LM oxygen supply through the tunnel.

LITTLE IMPACT HERE IN BUILDING LOCKOUT

There has been little impact in Victoria so far on the province-wide lockout of seven unions by the Construction Labor Relations Association. See story Page 2.

In the Capital region where an estimated $25 million worth of major work is at stake, most jobs were normal or close to it at press time.

Contractors and unions said most local work is in the finishing stage where subcontractors are involved. These operators are not part of the contractor's bargaining association.

Copper Price Hike Blocked

TORONTO (CP) — Noranda Mines Ltd. said today the federal government has denied it permission to raise the price of copper to Canadian customers.

The company told the government it intended to increase the price to 65 cents a pound from 59 cents.

The new price, the company said, would be equivalent to the present U.S. producers price; eight cents a pound less than the average cost of copper to U.S. consumers; and 22 cents a pound less than the prevailing overseas prices.

U.S. producers recently increase their prices.

A company statement today said:

"Noranda has been informed by the federal government that no price increase will be permitted."

SELLS HIGHER IN U.S.

Noranda sells in the U.S. market at the prevailing price, but to Canadian customers at the lower level.

Noranda officials declined any comment on the government's order.

It appeared, however, that the ruling likely was based on a recommendation of the prices and incomes commission which has been keeping a close eye on price and wage increases.

The commission itself has no regulatory power, but reports to the federal government.

Noranda produced about 327,000 tons of refined copper during 1969 and reported net earnings of $54,189,000 or $2.24 a share, up from $52,476,000 or $2.20 a share in 1968.

Noranda and other major producers announced in late December that the price for Canadian customers would be increased to 66 from 57 cents effective Jan. 2.

Later, at the request of the government, the increases were postponed to March 1.

The government then permitted an increase to 59 cents effective March 1.

'13' Lives Up to Its Legend; It's No Joke . . . Not Lucky

At first the astronauts called the number assigned to the third moon mission "a joke." One said it was "lucky 13." But all bad luck traditionally associated with the number struck Monday. The classically unlucky number also cropped up in: Blastoff time: 13:13 (CST); Explosion: on the 13th day. Anyone have a rabbit's foot to shoot aloft?

Due to difficulties encountered with the flight of Apollo 13, all television programming of the flight is subject to last minute change. Viewers are advised to watch news broadcasts for details of Apollo coverage.

Water is a critical problem for the astronauts. There is only a 44-hour supply in the lunar module fuel cells with 72 hours minimum remaining before splashdown. The crew has a 48-hour supply in its survival kits for themselves and for cooling purposes. Food is no problem and there is a good supply of oxygen.

★ ★ ★

Sleep will be at a premium for the three men. A schedule has been set up so that at least one astronaut will be awake at all times.

Lunar module pilot Haise began a six-hour sleep — if he can — early this morning while Lovel and Swigert keep a watch on the vital oxygen and water supplies. It was turn about at 9 this morning.

The explosion which aborted the moon mission ruptured the space capsule's fuel cell power generators' oxygen tank. Without oxygen, the generators cannot operate and the command ship is powerless with the exception of the emergency batteries which will be used in the re-entry phase.

Apollo 13's service module remains bolted to the command ship but it is useless. The command module, however, is intact and is vital to carry the pilots into the earth's atmosphere at a fiery 25,000 miles per hour. There is some discussion among space officials that the service module will be jettisoned to allow easier manoeuvring of the command ship and lunar module.

★ ★ ★

A 30-second rocket firing early this morning was a life or death "burn" for the three astronauts. It steered their crippled space craft on a path that would bring them back to earth with only minor course corrections.

The only luck riding with the Apollo 13 crew so far is that the accident happened on the way to the moon and not after the lunar landing phase was completed. The landing craft is supplying oxygen, water and electricity to power computers, navigation instruments and radios—all vital for a space voyage.

The blast that knocked out Apollo 13's electrical system may have been caused by a small meteoroid. This theory has not been discounted by space officials. "It had to be something violent that occurred in Bay 4 of the ship. If it were a meteorite it would be quite violent," said former Apollo astronaut James McDivitt.

Lights out is the word in an attempt to conserve electricity. Astronauts in the command ship are using flashlights to watch instruments.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Western Realty

Gross revenue exceeding $13.8 million is reported by Western Realty Projects Ltd., of Edmonton, for theyear 1969.

President Samuel Belzberg said net profit amounted to $1.4 million, representing 66 per cent higher profit than in 1968.

The company has 1,125 townhouse and apartment units completed and 829 under construction in Western Canada, plus more than 1 million square feet of shopping centre space and 153,500 square feet under construction. In addition to this, WRP has commercial and industrial holdings covering 132,000 square feet and 79,000 feet under construction, and land holdings of 4,847 acres, largely in Edmonton, Calgary and Greater Vancouver.

Okanagan

Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. and subsidiaries report record gross income and increased net profit for the year ended Dec. 31, 1969.

The company annual report shows a consolidated gross income of $6.27 million and net earnings of $207,240. This compares with gross income of $5.48 million and a net loss of $25,695 in 1968.

Ian Kennedy, president and managing director, said the company had re-organized and consolidated several areas of its operation during 1969.

Maclean-Hunter

Maclean-Hunter Ltd. had record income and revenue during 1969 with most divisions and subsidiaries contributing to the increase.

Maclean's Magazine, which switched to a standard page size in 1969, showed an increase of nearly 25 per cent in the number of advertising pages. Circulation increased to 732,292 from 708,500.

Net profit for the year ended Dec. 31 was $3.33 million or 83.4 cents a share, up from $1.94 million or 48.7 cents a share in 1968.

AT&T

The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. has set the terms for its offering of about $1.6 million worth of debentures with warrants, the biggest corporate financing plan in history.

A.T. and T. said it set at 8¾ per cent the interest rate on the 30-year debentures. It also said it set at $52 the price at which common stock may be purchased by using the warrants in the offering.

The offering is designed to sell about 3.4 million additional shares of A.T. and T. common stock and raise more than $3 billion in capital.

Moduline

The Penticton firm of Moduline Industries Ltd. plans to commence production June 1, building mobile-type homes for the limited-income market.

Parent company is Moduline Industries Inc., which has two plants at Chehalis, Wash., capable of turning out 60 units per week per shift.

First National

First National City Corporation reports first-quarter consolidated income before securities losses rose to $34.33 million, up 6.9 per cent from $32.12 million earned in the same period of 1969.

The per-share amount was $1.26 compared to $1.19 a share for the comparable period in 1969, based on average shares outstanding.

Sales of securities during the three months resulted in a loss of $4.36 million after tax provision, compared with a loss of $98,000 in the same period last year.

TRANS-CANADA BUYS BIG GAS RESERVES

TORONTO (CP) — TransCanada PipeLines Ltd. of Toronto announced Monday it had purchased 1,400,000,000,800 cubic feet of gas reserves in Alberta to fill a 25-year contract with United States gas companies.

A company statement did not disclose either the names of the Alberta or U.S. companies involved or the price of the purchase, although unofficial estimates placed the value at a minimum of $500,000,000.

It said the reserves were purchased in the Harmattan-Elkton and Harmattan East fields in Alberta.

Truckers' Strike Hits Car Plants

By The Canadian Press

Scarcity of automobile parts due to a truckers' strike in the United States resulted in severe cutbacks Monday in the Ontario automotive production industry.

American Motors Corp. announced it was laying off 880 employees at its Brampton plant from midnight Monday to at least Thursday.

Chrysler Canada Ltd. in Windsor closed its truck plant, laying off 440 workers, and was operating its car plant on a day-to-day basis. A Chrysler spokesman said Monday night the truck plant was expected to remain closed through this week.

About 3,000 workers on the day shift at Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd.'s Oakville plant worked only four hours of the usual eight-hour shift Monday. A spokesman for Ford said if parts continue to be held up it is doubtful if company plants in Oakville, St. Thomas, Windsor and Niagara Falls will continue production after today.

A complete shutdown of production at Ford plants would result in the laying off of nearly 12,000 employees.

Another 8,000 workers at the Oshawa plant of General Motors of Canada Ltd. face the possibility of being laid off after today also.

The American industry is also being affected, with closure Monday of American Motors plants in Milwaukee and Kenosha, Wis.

Canadians Spend More Abroad

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians spent 20 per cent more abroad last year than foreign visitors did in Canada, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has reported.

Canadian expenditures on travel abroad totalled $1,280,000,000, while foreign travellers in Canada spent $1,079,000,000, leaving a deficit of $201,000,000 in the balance of payments' travel account.

Huge Financing by AT & T

NEW YORK (WP) — American Telephone and Telegraph Co. launched the biggest financing in U.S. corporate history Monday, offering its shareholders the right to buy $1.5 billion in bonds which will pay interest at a rate of 8¾ per cent a year.

Each $100 worth of bonds will include two warrants, each entitling the holder to buy one share of AT & T common stock for $52 between Nov. 15, 1970, and May 15, 1975. If all the warrants are exercised, the company will issue 31,386,540 new shares of stock and take in an additional $1.632 billion putting the potential value of the offering at $3.1 billion.

Telephone's 3.1 million shareholders will receive one right for each share they own. For each 35 rights, they may buy $100 worth of bonds, which include the warrants.

In trading on the New York Stock Exchange Monday AT & T's common stock rose to a high of $52.25 a share after the terms of the offering were announced. The price slipped slightly later in the day closing at $51.75 a share, up $1 for the day. Turning over 207,900 shares, AT & T was the most actively traded stock on the exchange.

The rights to subscribe, which expire on May 18, began on a block of 12 million rights at 68.75 cents each and closed at 70.31 cents apiece, on total volume of 14.324 million.

The warrants, trading on a when-issued basis, started at $12.50 each and closed at $12.87. In all, 738,400 warrants were traded.

Despite the frenzy of trading in the telephone issues, prices generally declined on the New York Stock Exchange. Analysts claimed that the attraction of the telephone offering might have drawn funds from other issues.

The warrants — the first warrants to be listed for trading on the N.Y.S.E. in more than 40 years — are detachable from the bonds. In other words, a bondholder may exercise the warrants to purchase additional stock and still retain the bonds.

And When You've Finished This, Gang, Write If You Get Work

Final exams are no longer the rule in many University of Victoria courses, but thousands of them are going to be written anyway between now and the end of the month. First group of students to sit down to three-hour monsters at 9 a.m. today included several hundred in the Uvic auditorium. When exams end May 1 more than 5,000 Uvic students will join some 40,000 other post-secondary students in the annual search for summer jobs. Predictions are as many as one-third will go jobless and be forced to spend their holiday doing nothing, and, for many, that will mean not enough money for next term. (Bill Halkett photo)

All Tracks Cleared For Capital Budget

The Monday morning blues at city hall cleared quickly today with the return of Ald. Peter Pollen from Japan.

City officials said Monday they didn't expect Pollen back in the city until Wednesday and expressed fears that he might be absent for Thursday's special council meeting and the crucial vote on the five-year capital budget referendum date.

Arriving with Pollen was good news from the city's legal department on an earlier ruling that a two-thirds of full council was required to support the $6.3 million referendum before it could go to the people April 30.

"That was our first understanding," city manager Dennis Young said today. "But we have since been informed that a simple majority of council is all that is required to put the referendum to the people. It is only if we amend the referendum, or attempt to amend it, that two-thirds of full council is required to vote in the affirmative."

With Pollen back from his quick trip to the Orient five aldermen are now in the city and should be present for Thursday's vote. If they are unanimous they provide enough strength to remove fears that the planned April 30 vote might have to be postponed.

Other good news came from the home of Mayor Courtney Haddock.

Confined to bed for the past week with pleurisy, Haddock expects to be back in the public eye Wednesday afternoon for a press conference on the capital budget program.

He also hopes to be able to attend Thursday's council meeting to support the budget vote and thus remove any doubt of council's solid backing for the five-year plan.

Carl Honored By Museum

The widow of Clifford Carl, former head of the Provincial Museum, has been named honorary curator of the museum's marine biology department.

Museum director Bristol Foster said today a second tribute to the man who headed the museum for 29 years will be to name the marine biology floor of the new curatorial tower after Carl.

Mrs. Carl, who has a doctorate in biology herself, will be listed at the museum under her maiden name, Dr. Josephine F. L. Hart.

BISHOP INSTALLATION SLATED FOR MAY 7

Dean Frederick Roy Gartrell of Ottawa will be consecrated bishop and installed as eighth bishop of the Anglican diocese of Vancouver Island May 7 at 7:30 p.m.

The double ceremony will be held in Christ Church Cathedral.

Gartrell succeeds Bishop John Ogle Anderson, who died here last November after only four months in office.

BURNHAM
. . . wins by default?

Vet Convinced Ensign Will Fly

Victoria's Red Ensign champion is preparing what he hopes is the final shot in his five-year war with the federal government to have the present national flag removed and the "old red duster" reinstated.

George Burnham, 203 Menzies, challenged the government in the B.C. Supreme Court Feb. 13 and made a statement of claim March 23.

The federal government, represented by Department of Justice lawyer Norman Mullins, was given 14 days to prepare a case.

IT'S PERUVIAN

The time is up and Burnham says he's now prepared to apply for a judgment by default.

Burnham, who will be 80 in July, is positive he'll win.

"We haven't heard from them because they have no case. Section 269 of the Criminal Code of Canada states that you can't take other people's property and convert it to your own use.

"The government has done this. They took the Peruvian flag and put a maple leaf in the centre—what's more, it's not even a maple leaf."

Veteran of the First and Second World Wars, Burnham claims the Red Ensign was designated and dedicated as the national flag at Vimy Ridge April 9, 1917.

"There were 9,000 casualties in that battle. We paid too high a price to lose our flag now."

Burnham claims he has thousands of members— "I've been too busy to count them"—in the group he heads, Our Flags of the Century Association. Their donations, he says, has made his legal battle possible.

Date for the final round has not yet been set.

Oak Bay MLA Upset But Won't Quit Party

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said Monday he is sure that Scott Wallace, the Oak Bay Social Credit MLA, will do whatever he feels necessary "in true conscience" in his fight to change government hospital policy.

Barrett was replying, at a press conference, to the question whether he will invite Wallace to join the New Democratic Party after Wallace had said this week he is "very upset" about Health Minister Ralph Loffmark's policies.

Wallace even predicted the defeat of the government if it continues its hospital policies and accused it of reneging on its campaign promises to change from "a blacktop government" to one more concerned with people.

But Wallace said later he was "staggered to hear" that Barrett had been asked whether he would welcome the Oak Bay MLA into NDP ranks.

Wallace says he intends to meet the premier when he returns from a post-session holiday.

"I have no intention of leaving the Social Credit Party. I've agreed with their policies in the past, and much of what they're doing now," said Wallace, who was one of the most enthusiastic opponents of socialism in his first experience in the legislature.

"But I think they (the government) have some measures that could be bettered. What I am doing will prove whether a backbencher can be a useful and effective member of government."

Barrett said he sympathizes with Wallace "now that he has discovered that what the opposition has been saying all along is true."

Loffmark Triggers Outburst

"I hope he will continue his effort along with us to have the people of B.C. recognize the desperate shortage of hospital beds in B.C. and the lack of an over-all blueprint for hospital services," Barrett said.

"I don't have any comment to make on his statement that the government will fall on this issue," Barrett said before reporters could ask for a comment.

He sidestepped the question of whether an invitation would be issued for Wallace to join the NDP, saying he knew that Wallace is a man of conscience who would follow his own principles.

Wallace's outburst was triggered by Loffmark's announcement that the government will set up a committee to study ways of cutting hospital costs by centralizing such things as laundry services, instituting more bulk services and expanding day-care services.

Wallace retorted that the federal government in co-operation with provincial health ministers made such a study in 1969. "I showed them (the cabinet ministers) the study in the house."

He said the 1969 study came up with 160 suggestions — "all of them practical, realistic and commonsense. Why B.C. has to turn around and set up its own committee I don't for the life of me know."

Wallace said Loffmark's intention to centralize laundry services is tardy, because the Greater Victoria Regional Board already has this in hand.

Play Bomb Issue Easily Defused

It doesn't take Victoria parks administrator Herb Warren long to wipe out nuclear arms.

Confronted with a complaint regarding a "USAF bomb-swing" in Beacon Hill Park, Warren ordered the offensive weapon removed to his maintenance sheds.

There "USAF" was scoured from the tail of the swing, the fins were painted black and the forward end got a couple of eyes.

"The bomb," Warren told the city's parks committee this morning, "is now officially a whale."

Couple Attacked By Sword Waver

Gersharn Singh Mann, 28, of Vancouver, was charged in provincial court here Monday with attempted murder, assault causing bodily harm and theft over $50.

Police said a man burst into the Sikh Temple on Graham Street during worship services Sunday, stole a sword and went out and attacked an Esquimalt man and injured the man's wife.

Mann, who told Judge William Ostler he was a security guard at Oakalla Prison, was remanded to April 20 for plea and election of trial. Bail was set at $5,000.

He is charged with attempting to murder Ragbier Singh Bhandar, 271 Nicola Place, and assaulting his wife, Hargian, who was treated in hospital Sundy for a cut to her left arm.

Police said a man entered the temple about 1:30 a.m. Sunday and stole a three-foot-long cavalry sword from the altar while East Indian priest Ajit Singh was reading a service.

No one tried to stop the man, because tradition demands that once a service is started it cannot be interrupted.

The Bhandars were attacked in the parking lot at the Dominion Hall, 802 Esquimalt Road.

Square Music In the Square

There'll be music in Centennial Square this summer if Victoria city council endorses a public works committee request.

And the hope is that the golden tones will have a "conditioning and deterrent influence" on young loungers.

The committee this morning agreed to recommend a six-month trial for the canned "motivational background music" for the Centennial Square arcade, the two public lobbies and the staff lunchroom in city hall.

Ald. Peter Pollen made the recommendation, noting that his business establishment had used the piped music for some time with considerable success.

The music company, in a letter to council, claimed it would encourage city hall staff to work harder, provide a pleasant atmosphere for taxpayers and, since it would be "square music," it could have " conditioning and deterrent influence" on the youngsters.

City Treasurer James Bramley and City Manager Dennis Young were the least enthusiastic to the idea of piped music.

"It might be good in some places, but I sincerely question it's installation in government offices," Young said.

Pollen disagreed.

"It might soothe the taxpayers," he said.

Arthur Mayse . . .

WHATEVER THE STATUS of our Arctic sea lanes, the Strait of Juan de Fuca is a waterway which we share with the United States. If our friend and uneasy neighbor insists on shipping nerve gas through it, I fail to see how Canada can prevent her.

We can protest any lack of adequate safety measures in running the filthy cargoes through the Strait. Also, we can hope that the American military will up the safety factor by borrowing good Canadian west coast pilots for the traverse.

But until international law gets around to defining what may or may not be transported past another nation's shores, all we're likely to get from hollering is such relief as protest may bring to outraged feelings.

In the matter of these five shiploads of nerve gas, our course seems to be dictated pretty plainly. Avoid useless panic, pray that Civil Defence won't contemplate a mass exodus over the Malahat, and determinedly enjoy the nice weather.

If you can think of a better course within the bounds of what's possible to us and what isn't, I'd be glad to hear. So, perhaps, will External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp.

Meanwhile, in a world that still countenances the weapons of Armageddon, there's a measure of irony in the return of the nerve gas from Okinawa to the land of its origin. Americans, especially those in the states through which the stuff will pass, aren't of a mood to welcome it home. Neither is a U.S. Army saddled with a ticklish disposal problem.

And not, I trust, one to be solved by dumping the evil mix into an ocean already sufficiently polluted.

Why, after all, should the fishes be required to pay for man's supreme folly?

AMONG THE NUMEROUS traps that life holds for well-meaning parents is one that I'll call the bicycle syndrome.

It makes itself manifest when the boy or girl who yearned desperately for a brave new bike at age 12 is two or three years older.

One day, the bike is in use. The next, it's relegated to the back of the garage, and you're an old meanie if you so much as suggest that it be ridden to school.

There's no earthly use in pointing out that the bike's in perfect condition, and that cycling is quicker than walking. The transition has been made, and there's no turning back.

That, at least, is what I thought until this pleasant spring.

But I've noted a related phenomenon no less startling. Any number of those same young people — now grown to adulthood — are riding bikes again.

On Sunday, they were all over the place, pedalling along in groups or couples. They appeared to be completely free of self-consciousness, and were obviously enjoying themselves.

That's all to the good, and if the trend continues, it will provide a course of action for parents whose 15-year-olds have disowned bikes formerly held dear.

Stow those unwanted wheels away. In a few years, the owners may be back for them!

IN A YEAR WHEN EXPO 70 is attracting Canadians to Japan, here's a Japanese girl who wants to visit Canada. Her name is Keiko Nemura, and her struggle with our difficult language is apparent in her letter.

"I am interested in Canada and I have been wishing to go to your country. I have known many things about Canada with your books and newspapers, but sincerely wish to learn how your people live and how to think with my own eyes and ears.

"I make a plan of going to Canada for two or three months in this summer."

Miss Nemura asks whether a Victoria family may be willing to take her into it's home for her stay.

"I believe that I will be able to learn many things from your peoples," she notes.

She adds that she works for a trading company in Osaka, and gives her age as 27.

I'll keep her address handy on the chance that a local family might wish to look into this request. If so, get in touch.

That's it, except to note that my wife is forging staunchly into her seventh week without a cigarette.

"In a miserable kind of way," says she, "I'm glad I gave them up!"

Ask The Times

Q. What were the names of the crew and the launch date of Apollo 12?

A. Charles Conrad Jr., Richard F. Gordon and Alan F. Bean. Their spacecraft left Cape Kennedy at 2:09 p.m. EST on Nov. 14, 1969. The craft suffered power difficulties when hit by a lightning bolt during lift-off, but, contrary to this week's Apollo 13 voyage, the remainder of the mission was a success.

Board Sticks to Referendum Instead of Renting School

DUNCAN — After debating it for two weeks and making a thorough investigation, Cowichan school board decided Monday night not to rent Fairbridge School.

Trustee Margaret Whittaker, the only trustee who voted in favor of rental, had suggested last meeting that serious consideration be given to purchasing the former private school now empty on an estate about five miles south of here.

Mrs. Whittaker said the nine-room building with its excellent playing fields would be an alternative to the building referendum coming up April 18.

$120,000 COST

District schools superintendent Eric Lewis and maintenance superintendent George Routley both presented reports on the school.

Routley said the total cost to renovate the Fairbridge building for permanent acquisition would be about $110,500, including installation of a hot air furnace. It would cost about $120,000, including installation of a hot water heating system.

In comparison, Routley said, it would cost about $211,000 to build a new eight-room school with an activity room and all the extras, excluding the site.

Trustees Stan Turner and Dave Bradbury spoke sharply against renting the building. Chairman Dave Haywood said however a purchase price from the owners was being awaited. He said the land would be an asset to the district in 10 or 15 years.

Henderson Critics May Face Questions

OTTAWA (CP) — Two cabinet ministers are likely to be summoned before a Commons committee to explain their public attack on Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson, keeper of the government spending books for Parliament.

Alfred D. Hales, Conservative MP for Wellington and chairman of the public accounts committee, said Monday night in an interview he will call a meeting of the committee's steering section in a day or two to discuss the matter.

He declined further comment. But other committee members said the upshot is likely to be committee appearances by Donald Macdonald, president of the Privy Council and government house leader, and C. M. Drury, president of the treasury board.

Both ministers have criticized Mr. Henderson on radio and television, though not in the Commons, and have suggested that the auditor-general has been commenting on government policy instead of sticking to his book-keeping.

Mr. Hales is in a delicate situation. He is the only opposition chairman of a Commons committee. Furthermore, the Liberals tried to oust him last year in favor of Harold Winch, veteran NDP member for Vancouver East.

WINCH DECLINES

The plot, with James Walker, parliamentary secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau, acting as chief engineer, misfired when Mr. Winch refused to have anything to do with it.

With their Commons majority, the Liberals could remove Mr. Hales at any time.

As far as that goes, they could bring in a bill to remove Mr. Henderson, but there is no indication of any such move.

In the Commons Monday, T. C. Douglas, NDP leader, accused Mr. Macdonald and Mr. Drury of trying to intimidate Mr. Henderson, an official of Parliament itself and not of the government.

Mr. Douglas invited the government to take its criticism of Mr. Henderson before the public accounts committee or introduce a motion to sack him. Such a motion would have to have Parliament's approval to be carried out.

ATTEMPT APOLOGY

Gerald W. Baldwin, Conservative house leader, tried to introduce a motion regretting the "unprecedented and arrogant" threats against the auditor-general.

Stanley Knowles, NDP house leader, attempted to bring in a motion reaffirming Parliament's confidence in Mr. Henderson.

Both these motions needed unanimous consent for them to be debated. The Liberals opposed any debate.

During the question period, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked whether the criticism by the ministers of Mr. Henderson represented government policy.

Mr. Trudeau said that when Mr. Henderson entered the field of policy he was "impinging on the rights of the opposition who perhaps don't fulfil that function very well."

CITES INSTANCE

Mr. Trudeau said one area of government policy commented on by the auditor-general was the cabinet order dealing with the Canada-U.S. auto pact.

George Hees, former Conservative trade minister, said Mr. Henderson has never criticized government policy. The Liberals just didn't like him criticizing government expenditures.

Mr. Trudeau said in reply to Mr. Stanfield that the government will introduce legislation to strengthen the office of the auditor-general. He gave no details.

The prime minister agreed with Mr. Douglas' contention that the government considers Mr. Henderson invaded the field of policy with his criticism of federal payments of more than $180,000,000 to Canadian car manufacturers.

Mr. Douglas said Mr. Henderson had criticized the fact the government was paying the car companies without any statutory authority from Parliament.

Fashion Show To Precede Pool Vote

DUNCAN — Duncan Jaycees will stage a parade and swim fashion show on city parking lot number two on April 24, the day before the swimming pool bylaw comes up for a vote.

Brian Lawrance chairman of the Jaycee parade committee, told city council the Jaycees had decided on the parade and fashion show to indicate their interest in promoting the bylaw.

The pioneer Park pool will cost about $400,000. Operation Recreation, comprised of a large number of community organizations, has already raised about $90,000.

Ald. Rois Harder suggested the Jaycees prepare a temporary sign to inform drivers that the city lot would be closed between noon and 6:30 p.m. on that date and indicate where other free parking was available.

GOOD WORK

Ald. Martin Lukaitis said the Jaycees were to be congratulated for their support of the pool and Mayor Jim Quaife asked for a vote of thanks.

Later in the meeting Ald. Dick Benzies said council was not doing enough to support the campaign by sitting back and "giving it lip service." He suggested members join the dinner speaking circuit and to answer any questions taxpayers had to ask about the project.

Grieving Father Shoots Man

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — A father whose 10-year-old son was killed by a truck last fall shot the driver dead during a foot chase down a street Monday, police reported.

Police said Eugene Friedman, 45, a California highway department employee, had sought to have the driver, Lou T. Watts, 37, prosecuted after Ethan Friedman was killed when bicycling. The district attorney's office held there was insufficient evidence.

Watts was accused of driving with a revoked licence, however, and was waiting to appear in municipal court when Friedman came up and began talking to him.

Friedman drew a pistol, police said, and after he began shooting Watts fled into the street. Friedman followed, gun blazing and shot him dead, police said. A stray bullet hit police Sgt. John Carden, 35, in the leg.

Friedman surrendered without resistance. He was booked for investigation of murder.

Dropout Reasons Outlined

Domestic conflict is the main cause of students withdrawing from school, Greater Victoria school trustees were told Monday.

Ted Callbeck, director of special educational services, was commenting on a report from his division that showed withdrawals from district schools this year are up considerably over last year.

From September to March withdrawals totalled 346, as compared with 220 over the same period last year.

Callbeck listed three kinds of domestic trouble:

- Conflict between parents, where they have separated or should separate;
- "High tension" situation, where students are striving to live up to high parental expectations;
- Child-parent conflicts of ideals or life-styles.

The report on withdrawals contained a number of other reasons why there has been an increase over last year.

Tightening of the job situation locally has caused a number of families to leave the district.

Enrolment was up by 450 students in secondary schools in September.

And reporting of withdrawals is more accurate because schools are keeping better records and because of a new Family Allowance reporting form.

'Parasites' Face Jail

BUCHAREST (Reuters) — Romania has passed new laws to stamp out prostitution, gambling, begging and other "parasitic" activities, it was reported Monday. The Romanian news agency Agerpres said state council decrees lay down jail sentences of up to six months and-or fines of up to 3,000 lei (about $168) for offenders who "refuse to join in a useful activity and lead a parasitic life. . . ."

Job Course Pays Off

Between 350 and 400 people have taken a Creative Job Search course sponsored by Canada Manpower, Greater Victoria school board and the Kiwanis Club, and 73 per cent of them have found jobs.

Jack Dalgleish, the board's director of adult education, told trustees Monday the federal department will probably underwrite the cost of the course if it is continued.

He also said someone should make a film of the instructors — Doug Yearwood and Ed Hudson of Manpower — for the benefit of unemployed persons who don't get a chance to take the course.

Foul Weather Delays Arrival Of Cruise Ship

Foul weather in the Pacific has delayed the arrival of the cruise ship West Star until Wednesday morning.

Leaving San Francisco, the ship was due to arrive in Victoria at 8 a.m. today.

Members of the Seafarers' International Union plan to picket the ship. The union accuses the owners, Westlines of Seattle, of a lockout and says 150 Canadian seamen are to be replaced by a foreign crew.

The SIU picketed three other ships of the company while they were in refit, one in Victoria and two at North Vancouver.

The Victoria Vistiors Bureau will greet the West Star when she arrives at the CPR wharf Wednesday.

SHIP REFITS APPROVED

McKay-Cormack Ltd., has been awarded a $16,489 federal contract for maintenance and repairs to the Coast Guard ship Alexander.

The supply and services department also awarded Yarrows Ltd. a $16,591 contract for the refit of CCGS Sir James Douglas.

Many Britons Freed of Taxes

LONDON (CP) — Roy Jenkins, chancellor of the exchequer, eliminated taxes for about 2,800,000 Britons today in a budget that sprinkled concessions over a wide area.

He increased tax allowances for single and married persons, boosted allowances for old-age pensioners and surtax-payers and cut the central bank rate to seven per cent from 7½ in move seen as giving the economy a mild boost.

But he did not reduce the standard rate of income tax, which has remained unchanged for 11 years, and made no concessions in purchasing tax or instalment buying.

It was a budget disappointing to many observers. Jenkins had been widely expected to use the budget to spread largesse as pre-election bait. But while he spoke of the country's growing international economic strength, he still aimed at hefty government revenues.

For importers, and in effect exporters from Canada and other countries, the long-criticized import deposit scheme is modified. Starting next month, the six-month deposit which must be left with the government before goods can be imported is reduced to 30 per cent of the value of the goods from the current 40 per cent.

This scheme, to discourage imports, was introduced in November, 1968, with the deposit fixed at 50 per cent.

Accompanying the lower bank rate, which in turn, may make credit costs easier, Jenkins also announced that bank lending will be increased by five per cent next year with the amount of money circulating in the country increasing by about £900,000,000 compared with the reduction of £200,000,000 last year. The pound is worth approximately $2.60 in Canadian funds.

The standard rate of income tax is eight shillings threepence in the pound of 41.25 per cent. This rate remains but the non-taxable allowance for a single person is raised to £325, up £70, and for married persons it goes to £465, up £90.

The higher range of surtax, normally applied on that amount above £2,000 a year, will be applied only on £2,500 or more for those living on unearned income—mainly from interest and dividends.

The higher surtax allowance knocks about 180,000 payers off the surtax rolls.

Jenkins said the British economy is on a path of sustained growth with one of the strongest foreign-accounts balances in the world.

PLANS MINI-BUDGET?

But while he announced tax cuts that amounted to a modest £200,000,000 a year, there was a general feeling among financial observers that he is holding back and that there might be a mini-budget before the next election, expected by many commentators to take place next fall.

Jenkins warned about the impact of the rising wage demands on the economy and said that to inflate home demand for goods at this stage would be folly.

However, observers felt that the reduction of the central bank rate to seven per cent—compared with a crisis rate of eight per cent that existed before March 5—may in itself stimulate home markets, with borrowers more willing to look for credit because of lower interest charges.

Among minor budget changes, the betting tax goes up to six per cent from five, except for betting at the track, where the five-per-cent tax on proceeds remains.

The two-pence tax on cheques will be abolished when the country switches to the currency decimal system next February.

Current restrictions on British overseas investments remain, along with existing foreign-exchange controls. Jenkins said the concentration must be on expanding investment at home.

Aussie Yacht 'Promising'

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Australia's new America's Cup hope, Gretel II, has begun sailing trials with the original Gretel, the unsuccessful challenger of 1962.

Gretel II, so the experts say, has shown up as a promising challenger.

The 12-metre yacht has an over-all length of 65 feet, beam of 12 feet, draught of nine feet and weighs about 30 tons. Her 86-foot all-aluminum mast carries about 2,000 square feet of sail when sailing to windward.

Gretel II is to be shipped to Newport, R.I., in late May or early June. She has to fight out an elimination series with the French 12-metre yacht France in August for the right to challenge the American defender in September.

Defences Ordered For Ring Champs

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Three Canadian boxing titles must be defended within 90 days, R. B. Pearson, national commissioner of the Canadian Professional Boxing Federation, has announced.

They are held by featherweight Rocky MacDougall, Sydney, N.S.; bantamweight Jackie Burke, Saint John, and junior lightweight Les Gillis, New Waterford, N.S.

Groom, 25 Horses Die in Stable Fire

HOMEWOOD, Ill. (AP) — One man was killed and 25 thoroughbred horses were destroyed Sunday when fire raced through the stable at Washington Park race track. A body found in the ashes of the horse barn was identified as Michael Aspreiker of Des Moines, Iowa, a groom for the James Martin Stables of Corsicana, Tex.

Gas Station Crackdown Proposed

A recommendation that Victoria city council tighten regulations governing service station construction will go to the Advisory Planning Commission Thursday.

The crackdown suggestion came from Ald. Ove Witt and quickly won the support of community planning committee chairman Ald. Peter Pollen.

At present, most of Victoria's downtown area is zoned to permit construction of gas stations without reference to rezoning or city councul.

Witt has suggested that service stations be singled out for a single category under zoning regulations to make it impossible to build outside special areas without the express permission of the APC and city council.

Thirsty 19s, 20s Told to 'Watch It'

People between the ages of 19 and 21 were cautioned today to "watch it" if they plan to take advantage of their new right to purchase alcoholic beverages under B.C.'s new age-of-majority legislation.

The law comes into effect Wednesday.

Chief J. F. Gregory said people in that age group who drive cars and are found guilty of impaired driving would be treated as adults "as they expect to be."

But he didn't anticipate a rush on taverns and cocktail bars.

It is estimated there are between 5,000 persons in Greater Victoria between 19 and 21.

CELEBRATIONS

The chief said no extra precautions have been planned in the event of celebrations.

"For many people in that age group, it won't be anything new because they have been drinking," he said. "The only difference is that they will be able to drink with a free conscience."

Hotelmen didn't know if there would be a rush of business.

There are about 30 beer parlors and cocktail bars in Greater Victoria.

They were more concerned about being able to identify people in taverns who were below the age of 19.

As one hotel manager pointed out, sometimes there is not much apparent difference between 17, 18 and 19 year-olds.

PROOF OF AGE

John Berger, vice-president of the B.C. Hotelmen's Association, said that proof of age would be demanded in any case where the waiter is doubtful.

"If a young man is challenged a to his age, he will have to produce legal proof that he is 19 or over," he said.

Berger said the liquor board should provide identification cards for borderline customers.
